PRESIDENT WILSON BETTER, SLEEPING NATURALLY ONCE MORE; TREATY DEFENDERS MUST CONTINUE FIGHT WITHOUT HIS AID; CALL FOR BRITISH CITIZEN GUARD IN NEW STRIKE CRISIS

PRESIDENT'S ILLNESS LEADS BELGIAN KING TO CANCEL HIS TOUR

Will Visit Boston and Buffalo, Then Go Incognito to California.

CITY WARMLY GREETS HIM

WELCOMED AT CITY HALL

Discarding their incognito and appearing as the sovereigns of the Belgian people, King Albert, Queen Elizabeth and Prince Leopold yesterday became the guests of New York, and New York took them to its heart.

The city's tribute began when the royal party stepped ashore at the Battery in the morning after a cruise through the harbor. It reached a climax in the afternoon when 30,000 children made a mighty welcome in Central Park, and it continued wherever the royal party whirled in motors through the avenues and the side streets. "It will be the souvenir of my life," said the King.

After the day of unceasing reception, however, the King returned to his suite at the Waldorf-Astoria and learned of the seriousness of the President's condition. He had, earlier in the day, sought permission to doff his uniform and go to Washington to express, "even for only five minutes," his sympathy and respect to the President, and had been informed that it was impossible. Last night, when he heard that members of the President's family were hurrying to his bedside, he announced that he had canceled all engagements of his tour, except those tomorrow in Boston and on Monday in Buffalo.

"Because of the present condition of the President," said Breckenridge Long, Third Assistant Secretary of State, who made the announcement on behalf of the King, "His Majesty has seen fit to cancel all his engagements that had been planned for him, at least up to Oct. 14, at which time he would have been, and still expects to be, in San Francisco.

"The only exception to this will be his engagements in Boston and Buffalo, where he is due on Sunday and Monday. The proximity of those engagements is such that he feels he can keep them, providing the condition of the President does not become worse. From Buffalo the King will proceed to a place in California which will be announced later. It is possible that on the way from Buffalo to California the train may stop for a few minutes at the station in Toledo.

Will Not Attend Theatre.

"His Majesty," continued Mr. Long, "has also decided that, owing to the President's condition of health, he will not attend a theatre party which had been arranged for tonight. The King said that he did not care to go to a place of amusement while the President was ill. His Majesty expressed his earnest desire to proceed to Washington to pay a call of sympathy and respect to the President. He said he would go even if he could see the President only five minutes. He was advised, however, that the President's health did not permit this."

Mr. Long added that he had telephoned to the White House late in the afternoon and had spoken to Joseph P. Tumulty, Secretary to the President. He added that "there is nothing more alarming in the President's condition than has appeared in the newspapers today."

Although out until 1 o'clock yesterday morning, King Albert nevertheless was up before 8 o'clock, apparently without a trace of fatigue. Queen Elizabeth and the Prince arose somewhat later, and at 9 o'clock the royal family had a breakfast of fruit, boiled eggs, rolls and coffee in their suite.

Shortly after 10 o'clock the royal party, accompanied by Rodman Wanamaker and Mrs. Breckenridge Long, appeared at the Thirty-third Street entrance of the Waldorf and proceeded to Pier 86, at the foot of West Forty-sixth Street, where Mr. Wanamaker's yacht, the Noma, was moored. The trip aboard the yacht was not a part of the official city program, but was suggested by Mr. Wanamaker in order to give the visitors an opportunity to view the harbor.

When the automobiles arrived more than 2,000 employes of the Government mail station, located on the upper deck of the pier, joined with guests on the Noma to start the cheers that were to greet the Belgian rulers throughout the day. After the party had boarded the yacht an informal reception was held

Belgium, Following Plebiscite, Breaks with Luxembourg

BRUSSELS, Oct. 3, (Associated Press.)—Economic relations between Luxembourg and Belgium have been broken off by Belgium as a result of the referendum in Luxembourg under which France became Luxembourg's financial ally.

The Belgian Minister in Luxembourg has been recalled.

The Nation Belge says:

"France, in reserving control of railroads, counts on making Luxembourg an advanced nation again, a step which it is unlikely Germany would ever take."

REDS LOSE THIRD GAME TO CHICAGO

Kerr Holds Cincinnati to Three Hits and White Sox Win, 3 to 0—29,000 See Contest.

FEAR CICOTTE IS THROUGH

Star's Arm Reported Not in Shape to Twirl Another Game in World's Series.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—The battered White Sox, smarting under the sting of double defeat, struggled gamely out of the throes of adversity at Comiskey Park this afternoon and shut out the arrogant Cincinnati Reds in the third game of the world's series by a score of 3 to 0. Chicago has won one game and the Reds two. The performance of Kid Gleason's players this afternoon was the desperate stand of the bruised gladiator with his back against the wall.

With a bantamweight flinger, little Dick Kerr, pitching left-handed tangents which baffled the Redland sluggers, the White Sox came back to life and displayed a scrappiness which halted the boastful clan from the Ohio Valley in the very height of their joyful confidence. The Sox were back on their home meadow, surrounded by a friendly gathering of more than 29,000 fans. The cool breezes of Lake Michigan were refreshing after the humid atmosphere of Redland.

The Sox, by turning the Reds back with such decisive superiority this afternoon, have justified the hopes of their host of American League supporters who have contended all along that the Sox had not hit their normal gait in the first two games. Chicago doesn't take its baseball so hysterically as Cincinnati, and no carnivals of triumph followed the victory.

Lion-hearted Dick Kerr brought the Sox back into the series as a dangerous contender, and the Chicago rooters unloosed their purse-strings after the game and went hunting for the pop-eyed Cincinnati rooters who flocked to town this morning with offers of big odds on Pat Moran's Reds.

Fans Gather Early.

All morning special trains brought Redland rooters into the city flaunting their flags and banners of vivid red. Before game time they promenaded along Michigan Boulevard singing and shouting, and monopolized all the noise and attention in the hotel lobbies.

Out on the South Side the Chicago fans waited patiently in line from daylight. At noontime 10,000 of them jammed the thoroughfares around Thirty-fourth Street and Shields Avenue. Large is the horde of baseball bugs on the South Side which is faithful to Comiskey. For two days the fans had been reading of the doleful doings in Cincinnati, feeling that something must be wrong with Kid Gleason's team.

They poured out en masse at dawn to be on hand to cheer the Sox in this all-important third game. If Chicago had been defeated again, the chances of the White Sox would have disappeared. The uphill fight which humiliated the Reds this afternoon showed the Sox in their most dangerous attitude. They came back with a rush which was even more spirited than their most optimistic friends anticipated.

The Sox are not beaten, not by a long shot. The humiliating white wash was a stunning shock to the Reds and their friends. The Cincinnati bats which were so effective in the first two games, were useless, but the Reds fought bravely and stubbornly and their defense at times was just as brilliant as it has been when they were at their best.

The great change in the two clubs came in the spirit and the confidence with which the Sox went about their work. They had a lot of pep, and were on their toes. They chattered to each other constantly, and the whole infield was forever snapping words of encouragement to little Kerr.

Fisher's Costly Error.

There was one disastrous break in the Cincinnati defense. This costly error was made by Ray Fisher, whom Moran elected to pitch the opening game on a foreign field. Fisher was for many seasons with the Yankees in the American League and was familiar with the Sox batsmen and the surroundings. In

BRITISH STRIKERS REJECT ALL OFFERS BY GOVERNMENT

FIGHT TO A FINISH FEARED

UNIONS CALL A CONGRESS

General Labor Discussion Set for Tuesday—Meanwhile Leaders Will Stump the Kingdom.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Saturday, Oct. 4.—The official announcement that the discussions between the Government and the National Union of Railwaymen had resulted in a rejection by the strikers of offers of a compromise or a truce was followed by the issue of a Government appeal addressed to all citizens, saying:

"In the opinion of his Majesty's Government, the circumstances of the present crisis are such that special measures should be taken to secure the liberty of all peaceable citizens and to protect them in the pursuit of their ordinary work and of the special work undertaken to maintain the supply of food and other necessaries of the community."

The appeal therefore urges citizens throughout the country to form themselves into citizen guards, "to undertake to act in co-operation with the police in the duty of protection and maintenance of order."

The appeal concludes:

"If the food and existence of the nation are to be safeguarded in the face of the menace by which they are confronted today, it is essential that all citizens who are willing to contribute labor should be allowed to do so without interference or apprehension. The Government therefore appeal to all well affected men to come forward in order that they may assist to preserve and guarantee the security of those without whose continued and unmolested exertions the life of the nation cannot be maintained."

The official statement issued late last night, covering the discussions with the trade union deputation and the final rupture, and the Government's appeal for the formation of citizen guards leave little ground for hope that the discussions will be resumed, and it is feared now that the struggle will be fought to a finish.

The statement made by Robert Williams, Secretary of the Transport Workers' Federation, showed that no decision had been reached to call a general strike in sympathy with the railway men. He said that a conference of the responsible trade unions of the country would be held next Truesday to consider "any form of moral and sympathetic support of the railway men."

Referring to yesterday's discussions with Premier Lloyd George, Mr. Williams said, "For the moment, at least, negotiations have broken down," which suggests that in his view there is a possibility of their resumption.

It is also noted that C. T. Cramp, President of the National Union of Railway Men, said last night that "unless anything further happens" the executive of the union would leave London, but for the time being Messrs. Thomas and Bromley would remain.

It is announced that at a full Cabinet meeting yesterday the Ministers were unanimous in supporting the Premier's attitude that negotiations could not be resumed until the railway men had returned to work.

Sketch Rejects Labor Dictation.

Sir Edward Hulton has taken a similar line to that of Lord Northcliffe over the attempt of the machine assistants employed by The Daily Sketch to dictate the policy of that paper as regards the strike. The machine assistants stopped the printing of Wednesday morning's issue because they took exception to the tone of the leading article.

Sir Edward, who received a deputation from the men, refused to admit the right of any section of his employes to dictate the policy of his papers and declined to alter a word in the leader under discussion, ending with the statement that he would suspend his publications rather than submit to dictation of this sort.

The editor of The Daily Express has been waited upon by a deputation from the composing staff, who explained that they came with no hostile motives and did not wish even to suggest the slightest alteration in the tone of the paper, but they hoped the editor would find room in his columns for an exposition of the railwaymen's case.

The editor replied that it was the policy of the paper always to present both

Bolsheviki Make Peace Offer to the Allies by Wireless

PARIS, Oct. 3.—George Tchitcherin, Russian Bolshevist Foreign Minister, in a message sent broadcast by wireless and received here yesterday, says:

"Our intentions regarding peace remain the same as when the Bullitt Mission arrived. We are ready to make peace at any moment, provided military operations are stopped immediately and the blockade is lifted. We have not imposed, and we do not wish to impose, Communism on anybody."

GRILL FOSTER ON HIS 'RED BOOK'

Senate Committee Questions Steel Strike Leader for Five Hours.

HE DODGES DIRECT ANSWERS

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—William Z. Foster, the pale-faced, slender Secretary of the national committee that organized the strike of the steel and iron workers, was a witness for five hours this afternoon before the Senate committee which is investigating the steel strike. He was subjected to a rigid cross-examination, particularly by Senators McKellar and Sterling. He maintained that he now agrees with Samuel Gompers and other leaders of the American Federation of Labor with regard to the maintenance of American institutions, respect for law and order, and the validity of honestly acquired property rights. It was true that he had been an advocate of revolution and of the syndicalist views of the I. W. W., but that all was in the past, and he no longer subscribed to these doctrines.

Foster balked at cross-examination based on his past writings and activities if that examination was in open session. He almost begged that he be examined in executive session, with all newspaper correspondents excluded from the room, asserting that the newspapermen would not give him a square deal.

Senator Borah assured him that he need not fear unfair treatment at the hands of the correspondents, every one of whom the Idaho Senator said would make a fair and correct report of the hearing. Senator Borah said he ought to know, for they had been reporting his speeches for six or seven months continuously, and had always reported him correctly.

Foster, as he testified, was flanked on one side by W. J. Rubin, the general counsel of the strike committee, and by Michael F. Tighe, President of the Amalgamated Association of Steel and Iron Workers, on the the other, while just in front of him, a few feet away, was Samuel Gompers.

Foster began his testimony by stating that he was the general organizer of the Railway Carmens' Union and Secretary of the committee that is directing the steel strike for the American Federation of Labor. He said the strike had been called by the votes of 98 per cent. of the union men employed in the steel industry. The sole authority governing the administration of the strike was in the hands of the heads of the twenty-four international unions.

The national committee, he said, asked the union men to vote on this question: "Are you willing to support the committee to the extent of ceasing work in the event the demands of the men are not met?" The men voted "Yes" or "No." That was the usual way of taking a strike vote.

Foster Retracts Former Views.

Foster asserted that Mr. Gary, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Steel Corporation, had erred when he told the committee that the issue involved in the strike is the closed shop. The issue, Foster insisted, is the right of collective bargaining.

"Mr. Foster," asked Senator McKellar, "are you in favor of organized Government?"

"I see the Senator is reading from the Red Book," replied Foster.

"Yes, Sir," said the Senator, "and I want to read you from it. Will you look at this book and say whether that book was written by you, in whole or in part? Just look at it, please. It is a book on syndicalism, by Francis C. Ford and William Z. Foster. Are you that William Z. Foster that is referred to on the title page of the book?"

"I guess I am," answered Foster.

"I am going to read you a paragraph from it and ask you if you wrote the paragraph or subscribed to the paragraph," continued the Senator. "It is entitled, on Page 3, 'The Revolution.'

"'The wages system,'" read the Senator, "'is the most brazen and gigantic robbery ever perpetrated since the world began. So disastrous are its consequences on the vast army of slaves within its toils that it is threatening the very existence of society. If society is even to be perpetuated—to say nothing of being organized upon an equitable basis—the wages system must be abolished.

HITCHCOCK TAKES FULL LEADERSHIP IN TREATY FIGHT

TAFT DRAFTS A PROPOSAL

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—The Senate's interest today centred in the probable effects of President Wilson's illness upon the treaty fight.

Senators favoring reservations expressed the belief that the temporary elimination of the President would force upon his chief lieutenants in the Senate, Messrs. Hitchcock and Swanson, the task of making a final compromise upon reservations. This is a task from which these Senators had hoped, by their own statements, to be excused. They and all other Senators had expected that in the end President Wilson, himself, would convey to the supporters of the treaty in the Senate the information as to how much he would concede in the way of reservations, in the interest of ratification—if, indeed, he would concede anything.

The leaders of the treaty forces are not concerned over this question, they said today. While they are convinced that reservations of some sort will have to be conceded in the end, they are now concerned with defeating the amendments, and will deal with the reservation question when it presents itself. They know President Wilson's views fully, they said, and intimated that if the treaty opponents expected to benefit by the President's illness, or hoped to get better terms because he would not be able to keep in touch with developments or express his views from day to day, they would be disappointed.

Senators agreed that the treaty issues were well defined. Their minds have been made up for a long time on every pending question, and there appears to be no possibility of changing a single vote.

Both sides are going ahead with their programs just as before. It may be that debate involving criticism of the President personally will be somewhat tempered, but that will be the only change.

Taft Drafts a Reservation.

The Senate today had various angles of the treaty discussed in speeches, but no reading of the text was done, nor were amendments considered. While Senators Thomas of Colorado, Jones of Washington, and Lenroot of Wisconsin, were discussing the treaty on the floor, reservations were the principal theme in the cloak rooms and offices, where they were threshed over informally by various groups.

Former President Taft formed the centre of several of these groups. He called on a number of Senators in their offices, the first being Senator McCumber, of North Dakota, who hearing that the former President and stanch advocate of the League of Nations was in the city, invited him to call.

Mr. Taft spent more than half an hour with Senator McCumber and in the course of their conversation penciled a new draft of a reservation on Article X. This draft, Senator McCumber said, differed in no vital manner from the one which is under consideration by the various factions of reservationists—the draft which President Wilson so bitterly denounced at Salt Lake City, and which Senator McCumber penned in its present form.

Mr. Taft's changes shaded the meaning somewhat, but really did not alter the effect, Senator McCumber said. The ex-President took his new draft with him, to submit to other Senators, including some Democrats, upon whom he expected to call later. Mr. McCumber said that he approved the draft, because there was nothing objectionable to him in it. He said that Mr. Taft was seeking something "a little milder" than the McCumber reservation, though he will not oppose the McCumber draft if nothing more suitable can be evolved.

The question of reservations generally was discussed, and Mr. Taft expressed the hope that an agreement would be reached. He is convinced, he told Mr. McCumber, that there must be reservations. While the former President is opposed to reservations that would cause resubmission of the treaty to the Peace Conference, he realizes, the Senator said, that to mean anything, a res-

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 3.—This bulletin on President Wilson's condition was issued by Admiral Cary T. Grayson tonight:

WHITE HOUSE, 10 P. M.

The President's condition today is about the same, with a slight improvement. (Signed) GRAYSON.

The earlier bulletin, issued at 12:15 P. M., read as follows:

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Oct. 3.—Following the ratification of the Versailles treaty by the French Chamber of Deputies yesterday, interest in the diplomatic circles of Paris today turned to Washington and Rome, at one of which capitals will be performed the act that will bring the treaty into operation and officially restore peace.

Both American and French quarters reported advices from Rome, saying that the Italian King would issue a decree ratifying the treaty, and thus Italy would be the third allied power to ratify.

If the attitude of the Italian delegation here is any sign, these advices may be taken with several grains of salt. Members of the Italian Commission said today that they doubted if the King would take such a step because of the criticism it would bring upon him from some parties now opposing the Government. They are inclined to believe that he will wait until the convening of the new Chamber in December. On the other hand, it is thought possible that the delegation here has not the latest information as to developments in Rome.

Great Britain has ratified the treaty and France will have done so completely in a few days. They want the treaty sealed by the action of a third power. There are those who see gain for Italy's Fiume position in swift action by Rome, for the Italians make much of the assertion that France and England would give them Fiume. Thus, if there is any background for their picture of France Great Britain, and Italy standing together on Fiume as opposed to America, this background would gain color, should England, France, and Italy together bring the treaty into force. Possibly this consideration may have weight on Rome's decision.

Members of the American peace delegation expressed the hope today that the action of the French Chamber in ratifying the treaty by such large majorities would have the effect of speeding up action by the United States Senate. They held that the Deputies' action destroyed one of the opposition arguments of delay by France. This point is widely reflected in the French press today.

All the French newspapers give prominence to the news of the illness of President Wilson and express regret that he should be incapacitated at this time.

The editorials become stronger each day in their expressions of belief that the Senate will ratify the treaty without textual changes.

PARIS, Oct. 3, (Associated Press.)—Advices from Rome received by the Peace Conference delegates have persuaded the members of the Supreme Council that Italy will ratify the German Peace Treaty by royal decree. The general opinion in the Council is that such a ratification will be valid under the Italian Constitution, as the treaty does not involve any Italian territorial changes.

The Echo de Paris asserts that Italy will so ratify the treaty. It asserts that, fearing a long delay in ratification, the French Government, upon learning of the Italian Government's resolution to dissolve Parliament, made representations to the Italian Cabinet. News has just been received, it says, that Tomasso Tittoni, Italian Foreign Minister, has informed the French Government that ratification would be made by decree.

Treaty Laid Before Senate.

The Peace Treaty and the military conventions between France and the United States and France and Great Britain were laid upon the table of the Senate this afternoon for action. Senator Leon Bourgeois, reporter for the commission of the Senate which has considered the treaties, will present the report of the committee Monday and Tuesday. General discussion of the treaties is expected to begin Thursday.

In the Chamber today the proposal of Deputy Andre Lefevre, inviting the

RAIL MEN MAY JOIN TRADE CONFERENCE

Hines Submits New Plan to Settle Dispute on Selection of Delegates.

NAMING OF JEWELL HELPS

Ida Tarbell, Mrs. Catt, and Miss Barman to Represent Public —World Meeting Stands.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—Amicable settlement of the dispute over the railroad unions' representation in the Industrial Conference called by President Wilson appeared possible tonight. A new suggestion transmitted by Director General Hines was under consideration by the unions, with optimism frankly expressed in official circles that it would be accepted.

Timothy Shea of the Firemen, who announced today that the four brotherhoods did not expect to have delegates at the conference because the basis of representation offered the unions was unsatisfactory, said he was in communication with the chiefs of the three other brotherhoods and with the unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, but that no decision was possible before tomorrow. He declined to state what the Railroad Administration had offered until the proposal was acted upon finally.

Appointment of B. M. Jewell, Acting President of the railway employes' department of the federation, as one of the representatives of the public in the conference was expected to be a conciliatory factor in the dispute.

The trouble arose when the railroad unions were asked to appoint four delegates to the conference. The four brotherhoods desired to name all four men, maintaining that the American Federation of Labor delegates would represent the unions affiliated with that organization. These unions, however, insisted that they should be allowed to participate in selecting the four men representing the railroad employes especially, and when an agreement seemed impossible the unions joined in suggesting to Mr. Hines to change the basis of union representation by allowing the heads of all recognized labor organizations to participate. As this was impossible, owing to the short time remaining before the conference opens, the countersuggestion was made which it was hoped would end the trouble.

Appointment of Mr. Jewell, announced by the Labor Department and not by the White House, gives the railroad unions outside the four big brotherhoods a special delegate, which meets their demands. Considerable surprise was occasioned in some quarters, however, by the inclusion of one of the most active of Federation officials, who has been a leader in the movement for higher wages during the reconstruction period, as one of the representatives of the unorganized public. It was said he took the place of Charles G. Dawes of Chicago, who declined to serve.

Railroad executives will have only two representatives in the conference. Mr. Hines announced that he had appointed Carl Gray, President of the Western Maryland, and R. H. Aishton, regional director for the Northwestern region, in that capacity.

Three women were added to the list of representatives of the general public at the conference, bringing the total number of delegates expected to be present up to 58. The women named are Miss Ida Tarbell, writer; Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, President of the National American Woman Suffrage Association, and Miss Gertrude Barman of Chicago, who during the war was assistant to the Director of the Bureau of Investigation and Inspection of the Department of Labor.

Illness of President Wilson will not cause the postponement of the conference, it was officially announced during the day. In the event the President is not able to address a communication to the gathering, Secretary Tumulty will notify the delegates of the President's desires regarding the selection of a permanent presiding officer.

Bankers Select Delegates.

The Investment Bankers' Association today announced that their representatives will be Edgar L. Marsten of Blair & Co., New York, and Howard W. Fenten, vice president of the Harris Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago.

DR. GRAYSON ENCOURAGED

"A Slight Improvement," in Wilson's Condition Told in Bulletin.

NATURAL SLEEP FOLLOWS

REST REGIME ENFORCED

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—"A slight improvement" in President Wilson's condition was reported in Dr. Grayson's 10 o'clock bulletin from the White House tonight.

After Dr. Grayson had returned to Mr. Wilson's room, following the issuance of the bulletin, he came back to the Executive Offices and told the newspapermen that the President was having his first natural sleep in several days. This deep sleep encouraged Dr. Grayson very much. He had seemed, when he gave out his bulletin, to be in better spirits than for the last few days.

It is understood that the President was able to take some nourishment during the day and also got some sleep.

The noon bulletin of Dr. Grayson stated that Mr. Wilson's condition was then unchanged from last night when he was officially declared to be "a very sick man."

Two consultations were held on the President's case during the day. The morning conference lasted about two hours, Drs. Ruffin and Stitt attending. During it Dr. Grayson talked over the telephone with Dr. Dercum, the Philadelphia neurologist.

Following the consultation, Dr. Grayson said that the President's temperature was practically normal and his blood pressure good. It was said, however, that inasmuch as the President's appetite had lessened, his physical condition was a little weaker.

The consultation late today was brief, Dr. Ruffin and Dr. Stitt being at the White House but a short time.

Altogether the impression was gained tonight that the President was holding his own. He was kept in bed all day.

More Inclined to Take Rest.

The President proved a more amenable patient today than heretofore, it was learned. Although unwilling up to this time to concede that he has been in a serious condition, he has been persuaded that it is absolutely necessary for him to rest and rid his mind of executive problems. He was more willing to acquiesce in this today than since he was taken ill.

Details of the affairs of the country are being kept from him as much as possible. He was told of the defeat in the Senate of the Fall amendments yesterday, and this news appeared to give him cheer.

The difficulty which both the doctors and the President himself experience in resting his mind was again apparent today. He is mentally keen and active and asks many questions. Some of these the doctor thinks must be answered or the President would worry still more. At the same time Dr. Grayson is all the time intent on keeping his mind free from all official business.

Rumors of an impending operation on the President spread through Washington today. But Dr. Grayson has told newspaper correspondents that no operation was contemplated at this time, and that if an operation were contemplated this would not be kept secret. One theory today was that there might be an operation on the President's nose to remove a polypus growth.

Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, who was Miss Jessie Wilson, arrived at the White House tonight from Cambridge. Mrs. William G. McAdoo, formerly Miss Eleanor Wilson, came earlier from New York. Miss Margaret Wilson, the youngest daughter of the President, is already here, and his brother, Joseph Wilson of Baltimore, also came to the capital today. It was said that some of them was summoned.

Ex-Secretary McAdoo went back to New York this afternoon, having not been able to see the President.

Mrs. Wilson has assisted Dr. Grayson very much in caring for the President. She spent nearly all last night in the sick room with her husband. It is said that although she has been under great strain ever since the President was taken ill near the end of his transcontinental tour she is bearing up well under the ordeal.

Many Callers and Messages.

Many visitors called at the White House today to express their regrets. Foremost among these was ex-President Taft, who saw Joseph P. Tumulty, Secretary to the President. He remained half an hour and expressed his hope for the President's quick recovery.

Ambassador Jusserand of France brought a message conveying the sympathy of Premier Clemenceau and President Poincaré. Samuel Gompers,

President of the American Federation of Labor; Chief Justice White of the Supreme Court, and General March, Chief of Staff, were others who appeared in person.

Hundreds of messages of sympathy for the President arrived by mail and telegraph. Cardinal Mercier tonight wired: "Accept my sympathy. I pray for your prompt recovery."

One of the messages of sympathy came from the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, which incidentally mentioned that at its regular meeting today the members unanimously indorsed the League of Nations. Another message came from Wisconsin, saying that 40,000 farmers of that State hoped for the recovery of the President.

It was announced officially today that the President's illness would not interfere with the industrial conference next week. If the President is not able on Monday to address a communication to the conference, Secretary Tumulty will notify them of the President's desires regarding the selection of a permanent presiding officer.

President Wilson's illness will affect but will not suspend the work of the Peace Conference at Paris, it was said at the State Department. "The department," it was stated authoritatively, "knows the President's ideas and will carry on the negotiations, somehow, because they cannot stop."

No Sign of a Weakened Heart.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3, (Associated Press.)—Although reticent about details of the condition of the President today, those who attended him indicated that his ailment had not yet clearly revealed the extent of its inroads upon his system and that some days might be required to disclose its full effects.

Nervous exhaustion, of which he is suffering, complicated with long-standing weakness of the digestive organs and a lingering touch of last Spring's attack of influenza, the doctors say, have considerably weakened the President's powers of resistance.

For a man of his years, however, Mr. Wilson's general physical system is said to be in good condition to withstand the combined attack against which he now is fighting. There have been no intimations of depleted heart action.

The prohibition against official acts of any kind, modified several days ago long enough to permit him to sign a few bills and nominations, has been rigidly imposed again by Dr. Grayson, who is insistent that no executive business shall come before the President until he has shown marked improvement.

In enforcing their rest prescription the physicians attending the President have been particularly concerned about his sleeplessness. This is understood to be connected with the after effects of the influenza attack.

Cabinet members kept in close touch with the President's condition and throughout official Washington the feeling of concern continued. The White House telephone was kept busy with inquiries as to whether there had been a change in the President's condition.

Dr. Thomas A. Le Breton, the Argentine Ambassador, called at the White House today by special direction of the President of Argentina to inquire as to the President's health. The Swedish Ambassador and the Spanish Ambassador also called.

Dr. Dercum to See Wilson Again Today.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 2.—Dr. Francis X. Dercum will leave for Washington tomorrow morning for another consultation with Admiral Grayson and other physicians attending President Wilson. The visit will be in accordance with pre-arranged plans.

"I shall leave on an early train," said Dr. Dercum tonight, "but my trip must not be allowed to create any alarm. I am not going in response to an urgent call."

Dr. Dercum said earlier in the day: "The President's condition is grave, but he is of a cheerful frame of mind."

Speaking of his summons to the White House yesterday, he said:

"We merely confirmed Dr. Grayson's diagnosis, made previously, and found the President very much in need of rest. He is very cheerful, and takes an interest in what is going on. This is an encouraging indication.

"The President is not the type of man to be worried by his symptoms. This led him to overtax his strength, when he should have been husbanding it after the strain of the Peace Conference.

"The President is profoundly exhausted and very weak. He had no temperature, but the fact that he was up and about on Wednesday, and became so completely exhausted later, caused everyone to be a little apprehensive."

Mr. Wilson, according to Dr. Dercum, realizes that he is a sick man and is making an effort to cease chafing under the restraint which compels him to relinquish temporarily the helm of the Administration. By nature, said the neurologist, he is a "hard man to handle," from the viewpoint of a physician.

JEWS TO PRAY FOR WILSON.

Yom Kippur Services Will Include Petition for President's Recovery.

Today is Yom Kippur, the Jewish Day of Atonement. The observation of the day began at sundown yesterday and will continue until sundown tonight. One feature of the observance this year is that the Jews throughout the country will pray for the restoration to health of the President. Maurice B. Blumenthal, general counsel for the Independent Order, Free Sons of Israel, sent out this appeal yesterday:

"Woodrow Wilson has collapsed under the strain of his tremendous labor for our country. His condition is alarming. As the world's greatest leader and the real guardian of our nation in the present crisis he occupies the unique position of being indispensable. Tomorrow, the most holy day in the Jewish year, on which the Jew throughout the centuries has appealed to the Creator for the favor most to be desired on this sacred day given additional solemnity, you are requested to make as a chief prayer in the services in your respective synagogues the prayer to the Almighty that even as He guided the hand of our President out of the horrors of the world war, so may He lift up His Divine Countenance upon our great leader and restore him to his sphere of activity and usefulness."

Rabbi Herbert S. Goldstein delivering his Eve of the Atonement sermon on the "Reconstruction of the Synagogue," in the International Synagogue in West 116th Street, last evening predicted a religious revival for the Jewish people of this country, and this through the reconstruction of the synagogue.

Using as his theme the words of General Petain at Verdun: "They shall not pass," Dr. Maurice H. Harris, at the Temple Israel of Harlem, compared the world today in its stand against demoralizing influences to the stand of the French before Verdun.

SAYRES START FOR CAPITAL.

Daughter and Son-in-Law Had No Special Word, It Is Said.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 3.—Francis B. Sayre, son-in-law of President Wilson and a member of the Faculty at Harvard Law School, left this afternoon for Washington. He was preceded a few hours earlier by Mrs. Sayre.

It was said they had received no personal word of an alarming nature regarding the condition of the President, but both wished to be with him at this time.

Bay State Republicans' Message.

BOSTON, Oct. 3.—Members of the Republican Club of Massachusetts, at its annual gathering tonight before the State Convention, by unanimous vote sent a telegram to President Wilson expressing "their sincere hope that recovery from your present indisposition may be speedy and complete."

Mormon Conference Prays for Him.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Oct. 3.—A special prayer for the complete and rapid recovery of President Wilson was said here today at the opening of the semi-annual conference of the Mormon Church, held in the tabernacle in which President Wilson spoke Sept. 23.

PITTSBURGH PLANTS ARE ALMOST NORMAL

Police Hold Aliens Arrested for Federal Authorities—Allegheny Steel Reports Sabotage.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 3.—The steady return of employes since the beginning of the strike, twelve days ago, has restored steel production almost to its normal, according to a statement issued after conferences of officials of the subsidiaries of the United States Steel Corporation and independent companies here today. The statement follows:

There is absolutely no foundation in fact for statements that the strike situation is at a standstill. Not for a single day since the strike was called in this district and utterly failed to close down steel making here has there been a backward step. All has been gain. Some works have operated 100 per cent. throughout. Others which were hit by the withdrawal of foreign labor commenced to recover ground the day following the calling of the strike, and have gained slowly but irresistibly ever since. Other plants, closed down as a result of rioting during the first day of the strike, have since opened up and are operating at normal capacity.

Steel tonnage, which is the test of the situation, has been increasing with growing momentum every day since the walkout took place, until at this hour all our works in this district are operating close to normal. Facts to bear out this statement are available, but are not being furnished to the strike leaders. These latter know full well that they have lost out absolutely and finally and are clinging to misrepresentation and innuendo and absurd claims in the hopeless task of restraining their waning following from reurning to work else finding themselves out of a job.

The strike will be practically dead in the Pittsburgh district next week, according to steel officials, but a long-drawn out battle is expected at Youngstown and Johnstown, where the biggest victories of the strikers were gained and where they have been holding their ground. These claims are disputed at the headquarters of the strikers here, where it is asserted that the strikers have as much reason to expect success as they had on the first day of the strike.

Plan to Deport Two Agitators.

Federal officials, who have been keeping a close watch on the activities of radicals, have arrested and are holding for deportation as Bolsheviki two agitators, Frank Broida and A. Belesta, who were arrested charged with printing and attempting to circulate the following appeal:

To the American working class:

We ask you, in the name of the brotherhood of workers the world over, in the name of the solidarity of the working class, to raise your mighty voice in protest against the terrible injustice and inhumanity to the Russian people. Let your Government know that you are opposed to the blockade against Russia, and if they will not listen to your protests, then use the last and most effective weapon in your arsenal, the general strike. The American workers should and must fix a day not later than Jan. 1, 1920, to call the general strike to enforce the lifting of the blockade against Russia and correct injustices and abuses against Russia.

RUSSIAN WORKMEN'S CONVENTION.

Chairman John Fitzgerald of the committee, organizing the strike, has arrived from Chicago to take charge of the strike fight here and started a campaign tonight to organize the employes of the big independent steel plant of Jones & Laughlin, which is almost unscathed by the strike, and which has been the main stumbling block in the way of the strike in this city.

Brackenridge Reports Sabotage.

The Allegheny Steel Company at Brackenridge announced last night that, in cleaning up their plants preparatory to reopening, nuts, bolts, and scraps of iron had been found in machinery. Had not these been discovered, great damage would have been done to the plant, it was stated. This is the first instance of sabotage reported during the strike.

The following statement was issued from the strike headquarters by Chairman Fitzpatrick:

Judge Gary's stand is clear. He will not arbitrate. He has challenged the Government and organized labor repeatedly. Such a condition cannot continue to exist in America.

The lying press controlled and owned by capital says that 10 per cent. of the steel workers are out; the steel industry is more nearly 95 per cent. tied up. Newspaper manipulation would make it appear that the strike has scarcely touched the steel corporation. The mills, however, are shut down and the movement of freight in and out of the yards in steel centres is but 15 per cent. of normal.

Here, in control of the steel industry, is a group of men so despotic and tyrannical that they have plunged the mass of workers in the steel industry into direct poverty and degradation. They are continually defying and violating the laws of this country and the Constitutional rights of the workers.

We have the right to develop our plans legally and lawfully regardless of the terrorism exercised. That is what we are doing.

The working people have been lawful and orderly, while the other side has not. The arrests, being made in large numbers, of innocent people all through the steel district are mainly for the purpose of terrorizing the rest.

Police Commissioner P. P. Walsh of Pittsburgh announced today that all alien strikers threatening the lives of persons for the purpose of making them join the strike would be turned over to the Federal authorities for deportation. Commissioner Walsh said that 102 foreigners had been arrested on one charge or another in connection with the strike and that not one of the number had been able to tell what the strike was about. Commissioner Walsh's announcement came after the arrest of Alexander Diwida, a striker, who was arrested charged with threatening Mrs. Mary Manko because her husband was at work.

To Arrange for Strike Benefits.

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 3, (Associated Press.)—The twenty-four International Presidents of the unions involved in the strike will meet with the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor at Washington Monday to discuss plans for the paying of strike benefits, it was announced at national headquarters here. The federation is expected to levy assessments on all its members to aid the benefit fund. The individual international unions are reported to have large defense funds available for paying benefits.

The average benefit paid by some unions is $7 per week for single men and $9 for married men, H. C. Hughes, International President of the Coopers' Union, said. The amount varies in the different unions. He estimated that $2,000,000 per week will be necessary to cover the benefit fund.

BETHLEHEM STRIKERS ADMIT LOSING GROUND

Williams Now Says Less Than 60 Per Cent. Are Out—New Appeal to Washington.

Special to The New York Times.

BETHLEHEM, Penn., Oct. 3.—David H. Williams, leader of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation employes who went on strike last Monday, admitted today for the first time that his cause is losing ground. Williams has stuck steadfastly hitherto to his assertion that 80 or 85 per cent. of the men obeyed the order to walk out. Today he declared at first that he "could not say just how many men are out," but later he admitted to THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent that "something under 60 per cent. is all we claim now."

Asked what hopes the strikers had of winning if they had lost 25 per cent. of their own most optimistic estimate during the first five days of the strike, Williams answered:

"I am not going to tell you."

The company reiterated its assertion that "The strike is over," its official spokesman adding that there "really is nothing more to talk about in connection with it."

There are only about 800 absentees altogether now, the company maintains, of which about half it regards as strikers, while the others, in its opinion, are staying away because of intimidation or fear or other causes. In connection with accelerated return of men to their jobs, now acknowledged by the strike leaders, an amusing incident transpired today.

An American employed in one of the company's machine shops, though not a union man, "struck" rather than be called a "scab." This afternoon, tired of enforced idleness and having in his possession his brass employe's check, which admitted him through the gates, he decided to stroll down to see how things were going. He wandered into his own shop and the first man he saw there, bending busily over a lathe, was the Strike Committeeman who had persuaded him to go out.

"How long have you been back here?" he asked the committeeman, and received the reply:

"Oh, I decided I might just as well come back last Tuesday."

Yesterday's boast on the part of the strikers that they would put the whole Bethlehem works out of business today proved an idle one. The mills ran, as far as could be either learned or observed, very close to full capacity, though the strikers' claim that they have seriously embarrassed a few minor units seems to have considerable merit.

The effort to get the electricians to go out in a body either proved a failure or the company succeeded in replacing them, for the electrical power which animates all the five miles of mills and shops was not impaired. If a number of bricklayers went out, as the strikers maintain, their loss evidently did no serious damage, though they must be replaced eventually because of the necessity of relining the blast and open hearth furnaces from time to time.

The fifth day of the strike passed without disorder.

Further efforts to implore Federal aid for their cause was made this evening by 1,500 strikers assembled in a mass meeting in Lyric Hall, Allentown. Telegrams were sent to Secretary of War Baker and Secretary of the Navy Daniels asking them to use their influence to have Senator Kenyon extend the scope of his investigation to include the Bethlehem Steel Corporation. The request is based on the assertion that the strike is holding up work on Government contracts.

NEGRO WORKERS SHOOT PICKET AT BUFFINGTON

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—The first serious trouble in the steel strike in the Chicago district came with a volley of revolver shots and the wounding of a union picket today at Buffington, Ind., near Indiana Harbor. Casemir Kersis of Indiana Harbor was shot in the thigh by one of two negroes with whom he had been arguing. A crowd of union men threatened to kill the two negroes and might have done so if the police had not charged and scattered them.

The negroes, Sam Blair and Clyde Brackeen, were coming from the Universal Portland Cement Company's plant at Buffington at about 5 o'clock when Kersis asked the two men to join the strikers.

"Fourteen hundred of the 2,000 men employed by this plant," he said, "have gone on strike. We want the other 600."

Blair and Brackeen drew their revolvers. Blair fired two shots, Brackeen fired four. Kersis fell. Leo McCormack, Mayor of East Chicago, and Acting Chief Edward J. O'Donnell and ten policemen witnessed the shooting. They saw the other pickets picking up bricks and clubs, and they rushed to the rescue of the two men with drawn revolvers.

It was not necessary to shoot, however, as the crowd dispersed peacefully and the negroes were placed in the East Chicago Jail.

The situation in general was more favorable for the steel companies today. William Loweran, roller at the Union Steel Company's plant in Indiana Harbor, Chairman of a committee of 100, said he had canvassed the strikers and obtained the signatures of 2,931 men who want to go back to work. The company employs 7,000 normally, and 1,000 remained on duty. There is to be a meeting in the Indiana Harbor Civic Club Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock to discuss the question of returning to work.

Union leaders generally admitted today that quite a few of the strikers had gone back to the mills, but they said these were all unskilled laborers. The skilled workers they contended were all on strike.

The Republic Steel and Iron Company and the Interstate Company in Indiana Harbor were given copies of the union's demands today and were allowed until Monday morning to accept them. Otherwise the men in their employ will be called out on strike.

The situation remained much the same in Gary and South Chicago, more men going to work, the union leaders paying little attention to them, and in both places the police guards were redoubled.

Officials of the Indiana Steel Company in Gary said that about 6,000 of their men were at work, and nearly every department operating on a 50 per cent. basis. The American Sheet and Tin Plate Company is doing 75 per cent. of its regular business. The Inland Steel Company and the Mark Manufacturing Company are working on a limited scale for the first time since the strike started, claiming half their employes were at work.

Nine strikers were arrested in Gary today. Five were charged with trespass, three with carrying weapons, and one with making threats.

SAY 45,000 WORKERS ARE OUT.

Leaders Assert 5,000 More Shipyard Employes Struck Yesterday.

Strike leaders asserted yesterday at the headquarters of the Metal Trades Council, the administrative body of the striking shipworkers, that 5,000 more men went out yesterday. They claim that there are now a total of 45,000 workers on strike. The Emergency Fleet Corporation and the Atlantic Coast Shipbuilders' Association minimize the situation, placing the number of strikers at 5,500.

The strikers say the figures announced by the Emergency Fleet Corporation are ridiculous. In a statement they claim that more than 6,000 workers are out at Staten Island yards. The leaders say that the boilerworkers alone have remained at work. The strikers are asking for a forty-four-hour week and a 25 per cent. increase in pay.

The executive committee of the strikers met yesterday morning and drafted a telegram to John Barton Payne, Chairman of the Shipping Board, asking him to issue an order for the forty-four-hour week. Strike leaders said that the Shipping Board had rescinded its former action to the extent of permitting the forty-four-hour week if the employers care to grant it.

INSURANCE MEN ORGANIZE.

Union to Demand Higher Wages and Better Working Conditions.

Employes of the Prudential, Metropolitan, John Hancock, Colonial, and several other insurance companies met in Newark on Thursday night and formed a union, which they called the Industrial Insurance Agents' Protective Association. No definite plans or demands to be presented to the employing companies have as yet been decided upon, but it is admitted that better working conditions and more money, together with certain changes in the general methods of the companies' dealings with the men, will be their basis.

Just as the meeting was about to be called to order it was noticed by several of the agents that Inspectors in the employ of the companies were present. They were ordered from the room. Patrick J. Lang, who was active three years ago, when an attempt to organize the workers was made, presided. More than 200 agents signed union cards. The men claim that the guaranteed wage is $17 a week. Within a week, the agents say, they will meet and draw up their demands.

CLERGY TO INQUIRE INTO STEEL STRIKE

Protestants, Through Inter-Church Movement, Adopt a Social-Industrial Program.

HEAR PLUMB ON HIS PLAN

Frederic C. Howe Blames the Railroads for New York's Backwardness in Agriculture.

The Protestant Churches of the United States, acting through their social service organizations, will investigate the steel strike. The decision was made yesterday at the National Industrial Conference of the Inter-Church World Movement at the Hotel Pennsylvania. In a statement concerning the investigation it was declared that the conference represented 200,000 Protestant churches, with 25,000,000 membership.

In addition to deciding upon the investigation, the conference yesterday adopted a program of policy in the present industrial and social situation in America which will be presented on Monday to the conference called in Washington by President Wilson. The program in part follows:

Recognition of the right of collective bargaining and of labor's right to share in the control of industry and in its profits.

Statement that the churches are not called on to tie up with any existing, or any other, industrial system.

Recognition that labor's right to be heard at this time is fundamentally greater than capital's.

Condemnation of the exploitation of negro labor for private gain and insistence upon the application of Christian principles to the racial situation.

Recognition of the principle of freedom of choice to women in occupation, and assurance of equal opportunities with men in technical and vocational training, the determination of wages on the basis of occupation and service, and not upon the basis of sex; the establishment of healthful conditions of employment, and an equal voice with men in the democratic control and management of industry.

Promotion of the rational extension of the co-operative movement in both the distribution and production of goods.

In an interview after the adjournment of the session yesterday afternoon Dr. Fred E. Fisher, who will have charge of the steel strike investigation, said it would begin without delay. "We will not attempt a forced investigation demanding testimony," Dr. Fisher said, "but will take all the records available, visit each centre, and through personal contact, interview, and direct observation strive to arrive at the truth. We will unflinchingly tell the truth as we see it, and are ready to take all consequences of telling that truth, and our report will receive the widest publicity."

The morning session was taken up with speeches and telegrams from Cabinet officers, United States Senators, and other public men interested in the discussions going on in the conference.

Glenn E. Plumb, author of the Plumb railroad plan, in a short address declared that every man who earns a living should get the living he earns and that every man who gets a living should earn the living he gets. Telling how, under his plan, the Government would acquire the railroads, Mr. Plumb asserted that the transfer could be accomplished in five minutes. The value of the property, he said, could be determined by judicial procedure, the form of which should be decided by Congress.

Frederic C. Howe, ex-Commissioner of Immigration, following Mr. Plumb, declared that the Plumb plan proposed to take the railroads out of the hands of half a dozen Wall Street banks and put them into the hands of the community.

"Why," asked Mr. Howe, "are there only half a million agriculturists in New York State? Because it is more profitable to haul a train 3,000 miles than it is to haul it fifty. Lack of transportation has killed agriculture in New York State."

The conference ended last night. A report of its proceedings will be a feature of President Wilson's Industrial Conference in Washington Monday.

FOUNDRYMEN ASSAIL STRIKE.

Philadelphia Convention Sees Radicals Directing Steel Workers.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 3.—Departing from its policy forbidding discussion of labor problems, the American Foundrymen's Association, in annual convention here today, adopted a resolution opposing the steel strike and declaring that the walkout was brought about by "a foreign element and those who wish to overthrow the organized form of government of the United States."

The convention directed that letters announcing its action be sent to United States Senator Kenyon and other members of the Senatorial committee investigating the steel strike.

Agree on Inoffensive Picketing.

A system of inoffensive picketing in the millinery district on Broadway, between Houston and Canal Streets, was agreed upon yesterday by Max Vackerman, President of the Millinery Workers' Union, and Captain Burke, in command of the Elizabeth Street Police Station, at a conference before Magistrate Raphael Tobias in the Tombs Court. The conference resulted from many complaints of disorder. Twenty-three girls, who were on picket duty on Broadway, between Bond and Bleecker Streets, were arraigned before Magistrate Sweetser in Jefferson Market Court yesterday. They were given suspended sentences.

Bayonne City Workers Want Rise.

The Bayonne firemen, policemen, school teachers, and janitors are about to demand an increase in salaries to combat the high cost of living and petitions are being prepared to present to the city officials. The police declare they have no idea of going on a strike.

Agrees to Tugboat Men's Demands.

The Atlantic Coast Transportation Company, which operates five tugboats on the Atlantic Coast, was said by union leaders yesterday to have signed the demands of the Master and Mates' Union and the Marine Engineers' Beneficial Association. The demands include an increase in pay and the employment of a third engineer on the tugboats. The strike, which began Wednesday, affects 100 coastwise tugboats engaged in the hauling of coal, oil, and timber between Norfolk, Va., and Bath, Me.

RAIL UNIONS LIKELY TO JOIN CONFERENCE

The National Industrial Board has not yet made public its five delegates.

The conference will be opened at 2:30 o'clock Monday afternoon in the Pan-American Building. John Barrett, Director General of the Pan-American Union, will welcome the delegates and turn over to them the use of the building. Secretary Wilson of the Department of Labor, it was announced today, will officially open the conference. The body will prescribe its own rules, and in the absence of suggestions from the President will elect its own permanent chairman.

Regardless of whether any additional nations ratify the Peace Treaty in the meantime, there will be no postponement of the International Labor Conference called for October 29 in Washington by President Wilson under authority conferred by the treaty. This announcement was made today by H. H. Greenwood, of the Department of Labor, who is in charge of the arrangements for the meeting.

The thieves at present in control of the industries must be stripped of their booty and society so reorganized that every individual shall have free access to the basical means of production. This social reorganization will be a revolution. Only after such a revolution will the great inequalities of modern society disappear.'

"And under the title of 'The Means to the Revolution' it reads," continued the Senator: "'The class struggle. For years progressive workers have realized the necessity for this revolution. They have also realized that it must be brought about by the workers themselves.' Is that your composition?"

"That sounds like it," replied Foster. "I won't dispute it."

"Is your belief, the doctrine of revolution, as there enunciated?" asked the Senator. "Is that your honest belief now?"

"Well, I will say this," answered Foster, after trying to evade the question, "I will say, not only with regard to that, but to everything that is in there, that it was written some eight or nine years ago; I do not know exactly when, and at that time—well, I might state this, that I am one who was raised in the slums. I am one who has had a hard experience in life. I have probably seen some of the worst sides of it, and I have knocked around in the industries and I have seen many things that I did not agree with in the industries, and at the time that that was written I want to say that I was a follower and an advocate of the Spanish, French, and Italian system of unionism; and since then I have become possibly a little less impatient, a little less extreme, possibly, in my views, considerably so, in fact, and today I will state that I am an advocate of the system of unionism as we find it in America and England. Now, I will say that not only for that statement but for everything that is in that book."

"You have not answered my question, which is, 'Do you honestly and sincerely believe in the statement that is made on Page 3 of this book on the subject of "Revolution," which I have read to you'" insisted Senator McKellar.

"I will say that if I were writing that again, or if I were writing a book, I would not include any of that that is in that book," answered Foster, still dodging a direct answer.

"It is a question that is perfectly susceptible of being answered 'Yes' or 'No,' and then you can make any explanation that you like, because I want to be entirely fair with you," said the Senator.

Foster dodged again, refusing a direct answer, and switched to an attack on the newspapers.

"There has been a great deal of newspaper publicity and the newspapers have treated the men in charge of the campaign most unfairly, most unfairly, and I say that advisedly," he said. "President Gompers, who gained such a splendid reputation during the war, has been lambasted all over the country for the part that he has played in this work.

Foster Dodges Direct Answer.

Senator McKellar interrupted with: "I still want to know whether the witness is willing to answer the question yes or no—whether he now believes in the doctrine of revolution as stated in this pamphlet?"

Foster refused to answer and kept on attacking the newspapers.

"I would like to state again, Mr. Chairman," he continued, "that in this campaign the organizers and the officers of the American Federation of Labor have been entirely misrepresented. They (the newspapers) have tried to becloud the issue and to defeat the hopes and aspirations of 400,000 striking steel workers by making me the issue and John Fitzpatrick; and I want to protect these men. I am not here to lie, I am not here to cavil. I am not here to apologize for myself. I am here to tell the truth, as far as I can. But if I seem to hesitate about answering specific questions about what is in that book, it is with this distinct understanding; that I do not feel my answers will be properly handled by the press of this country. If the Senate Committee considers my personal opinions of any moment in this matter I am perfectly willing to talk frankly and openly, provided the press are excluded from the room."

"Mr. Foster," said Senator Kenyon, "you know it has been charged here before this committee that instead of the American Federation of Labor really being behind this strike, it has been incited by radical elements led by you, and we are trying to get at what you know."

"Well," continued Senator McKellar, "the thing I want to ask you is this —and I think it is but fair to have an answer, yes or no, to the question which I have repeatedly asked you, and then you can make any explanation you wish. Just answer the question, whether you now honestly and sincerely believe in the doctrine of revolution, just as you put it in this book, which has been read to you."

Foster again camouflaged. He would not give a direct answer.

"I will try to make myself clear, that is, as far as this committee is concerned," he replied. "I have not the least objection in the world to answering any question you may desire to put in regard to that book or anything else I have written, and I am satisfied I would get a square deal from the committee; but I will not, or I don't believe I should, in the interest of those men, make any statement here that is going to be heralded around and misconstrued in the newspapers of this country."

"Have not these statements in your book beene heralded through the country?" asked Senator Kenyon.

Foster's answer was "Yes."

Senator McKellar—And if you have not changed your mind we ought to know it.

Foster—I say I have, but I also say this: That the trade union movement is based on certain economic principles, the common economic interest of the workers, and I have strictly adhered to that proposition. I have never brought in any outside issues. The question of politics I never mention. The question of religion, the question of morality, the question of ethics, the question of new forms of organization I have not touched on. I have not in this work used my own opinion in any way, sense or form. This campaign has been conducted strictly upon the principles laid down by the American Federation of Labor, and I say again that the attempts to make my personal opinions an issue are being made for the purpose of defeating the hopes of 350,000 steel workers, and I think they are entitled to some protection. I do not object to the committee going into it; but I do object to a lot of biased newspapers lying about me, and lying about our movements, as they have done since the inception of this campaign. Now, it is my judgment that a repudiation of that pamphlet as a whole and a general statement that I do not subscribe to the doctrines in it is sufficient.

Senator McKellar—When did you change your mind about it?

Foster—I will state again that in my opinion the changes in my mind have nothing to do with this campaign here. I do not inject my personal opinion. My personal opinion is of no influence in this matter at all.

Read from "Red Book."

Senator McKellar—Here are some of the expressions in this book of yours that trouble the committee. "In his choice of weapons to fight his capitalist enemies, the syndicalist is no more careful to select those that are 'fair,' 'just,' or 'civilized' than is a householder attacked in the night by a burglar. He knows he is engaged in a life and death struggle with an absolutely lawless and unscrupulous enemy and considers his tactics only from the standpoint of their effectiveness. With him the end justifies the means. Whether his tactics be 'illegal' or 'moral' or not, does not concern him, so long as they are effective. He knows that the laws, as well as the current code of morals, are made by his mortal enemy, and considers himself about as much bound by them as a householder would himself by regulations regarding burglary adopted by an association of housebreakers. Consequently he ignores them in so far as he is able and it suits his purposes. He propose to develop, regardless of capitalist conceptions of 'legality,' 'fairness,' 'right,' &c., a greater power than his capitalist enemies have; and then to wrest from them by force the industries they have stolen from him by force and duplicity, and to put an end forever to the wage system. He proposes to bring about the revolution by the general strike."

In view of that statement, I would like to have, if it was the truth that they were your views, whether in your part in the conduct of this strike you are still animated by the views expressed in the paragraph I have read to you, or do you no longer entertain those views?

Foster—I say that I do not.

Senator McKellar—Mr. Foster, do you still feel that you are what you yourself call a syndicalist?

Foster—I do not.

Senator McKellar—I want to read to you this paragraph and what I desire to read to you is on Page 28 of the pamphlet: "The syndicalist, on the other hand, is strictly an anti-statist. He considers the State a meddling capitalist institution. He resists its tyrannical interference in his affairs as much as possible and proposes to exclude it from the future society. He is a radical opponent of 'law and order' as he knows that for his unions to be 'legal' in their tactics would be to become impotent. He recognizes no rights of the capitalists to their property, and is going to strip them of it, law or not."

Now, as I understand you, you wrote that some years ago, but do not now believe in it?

Foster—No, I would have to condemn that. I say this much, that to try to enter into any explanation is futile. With this committee alone I will talk for a week, but I cannot talk to the newspapers. I say that because I know I have been quoted at length on things that I never said.

Senator Sterling—When did you first repudiate the doctrine laid down in this book?

Foster—Oh, that is a matter of growth.

Senator Sterling—Oh, a matter of growth. Well, cannot you fix about the time when you underwent your change in views in regard to these questions, and in regard to the propositions involved in what the Senator just read you, radical as that is?

Foster—Well, I could not say that. Some of that I would still believe. Some of it I would not.

Senator McKellar—Which of it would you believe? I think it is very important for the committee to know which you believe and which you do not. I understood you to say that you did not believe in it, and if I am mistaken, I would like to be corrected, and I think that the committee would like to know that.

Foster took Senator McKellar's copy of the "Red Book," as the Senator called it, and glanced casually through those parts marked by the Tennessee Senator. After a moment he said he did not think he could defend "any of that," referring to the parts indicated.

Says "Syndicalism Means Unionism."

Foster added that after all "Syndicalism merely means unionism." He denied that he had advocated bloodshed or violence of any kind in the present strike. It was his intention to do his part in carrying on the strike strictly in conformity with the principles of the American Federation of Labor. "My personal opinions are not involved here at all," he said.

During the years he had been organizing the steel workers, he said, he had not advocated any of the principles laid down in his book on syndicalism.

"When was your other book, the one on trades unionism, published?" asked Senator Kenyon.

"Three or four years ago," replied Foster.

"Do you announce any of the same doctrines in your book on trades unionism that you announced in the red pamphlet?"

"There may be a remnant of it left—I don't know."

"It was stated here by a witness—I think by Mr. Gompers," said Mr. Kenyon, "that you were a delegate to the convention at Budapest of the I. W. W. in 1910 or 1912."

Foster—Yes.

Senator Kenyon—And that you had some controversy there with a Mr. Duncan, which matter afterward came up in the American Federation of Labor.

Foster—Yes, Sir.

Senator Kenyon—You were the representative of the I. W. W. at that time?

Foster—Yes.

Foster said he had severed his connection with the I. W. W. eight or nine years ago. He had contributed to an I. W. W. paper called Solidarity eight or nine years ago. His attitude during the war was that Germany had to be defeated no matter what the cost. He had spoken for Liberty Loans and bought for himself about $500 in bonds.

Senator McKellar wanted to know if Foster had at any time, up to today, "publicly or privately repudiated the doctrine contained in this red book."

"My work," Foster answered, "has been such for the last couple of years that nobody has ever questioned me about that."

"So that up to date, up to the time that I asked you the question a while ago, you have never repudiated the doctrines in this book," said the Senator.

"Only through my activities," was the answer.

Senator Phipps—Under the present situation, you have stated that there are about two million members of the five international associations. These members have paid an initiation of $3 per head, have they not?

Foster—No; these two million men are the members affiliated with these. That is not counting those in the steel industry. Those in the steel industry have paid the $3 per head.

Senator Phipps—But these twenty-four international unions have recognized the strike, have they not—they are standing behind the men who are out on strike?

Foster—Yes, Sir.

Senator Phipps—Now, those members paid dues of $2.75 per quarter.

Unions Collect $20,000,000 Yearly.

Foster—They vary. Every union is different. They run from 50 cents a month to three or four dollars a month.

Senator Phipps—If we were to take an average of a dollar a month, would that be about fair?

Foster—I suppose that would be all right.

Senator Phipps—Suppose we put it even a little lower than that. With 2,000,000 members, figuring at $10 a year, you would have in the course of a year $20,000,000 for the purposes of conducting the operations of these organizations, would you not?

Foster—You would; but you have got to understand how that money is applied. Probably 75 per cent. of those dues would never get beyond the local unions. They are used for local purposes of the men themselves; only a small percentage goes to the International for their general expenses; so it would not be anywhere near $20,000,000.

Senator Phipps—But say it was $20,000,000. Three quarters of that would be $15,000,000 to use among the locals. That would be more than could possibly be required for the payment of the organizers and the expenses of secretaries and other headquarters upkeep.

Foster—When you consider that there are 40,000 local unions or more in this country, a few million dollars does not spread very thick over it, especially as they have paid Secretaries and business agents and heavy expenses of all sorts.

Foster expressed the opinion that the steel and other corporations subjected applicants for jobs to physical examination to keep union men out of the plants, but was unable to give a single specific instance in which any steel concern had barred a physically qualified man because he was a union man.

Senator Sterling, near the close of the hearing, reverted to Foster's book on trade unionism.

Foster—As compared with the other?

Senator Sterling—I call your attention to two or three extracts from "Trade Unionism." On Page 24 you speak as follows: "Under the new order as pictured above, Government, such as we know it, would gradually disappear. In an era of science and justice, this makeshift institution, having lost its usefulness, would shrivel and die." Now that was written two or three years ago, I suppose. Do you still entertain that belief concerning government?

Foster—Well, I have my own ideas about the functions of government, of course. I do not know that I would take that position now, though. I think I would take the same position on it, if my personal opinions are germane here at all, that Lester F. Ward takes.

Senator Sterling—Well, I am not familiar with Lester F. Ward's opinions, but does he believe in doing away with Government by peaceful revolution or otherwise?

Foster—Lester F. Ward, in my estimation, and in the estimation of many others, was one of the greatest minds that America ever produced, and he is honored wherever science is known in this country. And Lester F. Ward states the opinion that Government—that is, many of its forms, is developing into a system of commissions.

Believes in Employes' Operation.

Senator Sterling—I call attention to another paragraph in this book, written three or four years ago, according to your statement. "The industries now in the hands of national, State, and municipal government would be given over completely into the care of the workers engaged in them. Unlike in our days of graft these workers would then have every reason to give the public the best possible service." Do you believe in that doctrine now, that the industries now in the hands of national, State, and municipal government should be given over completely into the care of the workers engaged in them?

Foster—That does not seem to be a very startling proposition nowadays. I do not know that I would state it in just exactly the same terms, but I believe that the men in the industries as far as possible should be given a right to operate those industries.

Senator Sterling—I want to call your attention to another thing. Do you remember the date of your last communication with Solidarity, the I. W. W. organ?

Foster—Oh, about eight or nine years ago.

Senator Sterling—Do you remember a letter that you wrote on Nov. 4, 1914, to them? It was about the organization of the steel workers and about the I. W. W. I will read an extract from it: "I am satisfied from my observations that the only way for the I. W. W. to have the workers adopt and produce the principles of revolutionary unionism—which I take is its mission—is to give up the attempt to create a new labor movement, turn itself into a propaganda league, get into the organized labor movement, and by building up better fighting machines within the old unions than those possessed by our reactionary enemies revolutionize these unions, even as our French syndicalist fellow-workers have so successfully done with theirs. This letter was signed 'Yours for revolution,' 'William Z. Foster.'" That was an expression of your sentiments at that time, I suppose.

Foster—It was! I try to be honest at all times.

Senator Sterling—In those days, when you wrote syndicalism and prayed unionism and wrote this letter, you believed in the doctrines of syndicalism and you believed also in the doctrine of direct action, did you not, on the part of the workers?

Foster—Oh, yes.

Senator Sterling—And that direct action meant that you might accomplish your purpose by peaceful means if you could reasonably well, and by violence if you could not accomplish them by peaceful means?

Foster—I wrote the book as it stands.

Senator McKellar—Bearing on this very subject, I want to call your attention to certain other extracts from your book on syndicalism and ask you whether you now believe in them. On Page 18, under the title "Bloodshed," is the following: "Another favorite objection of ultra-legal and peaceful Socialists is that the general strike would cause bloodshed. This is probably true, as every great strike is accompanied by violence. Every forward pace humanity has taken has been gained at the cost of untold suffering and loss of life, and the accomplishment of the revolution will probably be no exception, but the prospect of bloodshed does not frighten the syndicalist worker, as it does the parlor Socialist. He is too much accustomed to risking himself in the murderous industries and on the hellish battlefields, in the niggardly service of his masters, to set much value on his life. He will gladly risk it once, if necessary, in his own behalf. He has no sentimental regards for what may happen to his enemies during the general strike. He leaves them to worry over that detail. The syndicalist knows that the general strike will be a success and the timid fears of his opponents will never turn him from it, any more than will their arguments that it is an 'illegal,' 'unfair,' and 'uncivilized' weapon." You believed in those views at that time, and you still believe in them?

Foster—I did at that time, yes.

Senator McKellar—Do you still believe in them, or have you changed your views on that subject?

Foster—Yes, Sir.

Senator McKellar—I want to now call your attention to page 14 of this book, under the headline The Scab.

"A large portion of the Syndicalists' success in their strikes is due to their energetic treatment of the strikebreaker. According to Syndicalist ethics, a poverty-stricken workingman, in his predicament, can do anything save scab. He may beg, borrow, steal, starve, or commit suicide, and still retain the friendship and esteem of his fellow workers; but let him take the place of a striker and he immediately outlaws himself. He becomes so much vermin, to be ruthlessly exterminated." Have you changed your views on that subject?

Foster—Well, I would never state that. I don't admire a scab.

Senator McKellar—I did not ask you that. We are not discussing that subject. I am asking you if you still adhere to that doctrine or if you have changed your views about it?

Foster—I stated that it was not my intention to express my personal opinion, if I could avoid it, but I believe a working man can do anything but scab. I think that is the lowest act of his life.

Senator McKellar—You think a scab should be, to use your words here, ruthlessly exterminated as so much vermin?

Foster—I believe we can exterminate them.

Senator McKellar—Do you believe they ought to be killed, the scabs?

Foster—I wouldn't go that far, probably.

Senator McKellar—What do you mean by "ruthless extermination"? That is a right serious question, Mr. Foster, and I want to say to you before you answer it——

Foster—I understand that but it seems to me a proposition like that ought to kind of stand on its face. You do not think for a minute that I would write there that people should be murdered?

Senator McKellar—What do you call exterminating as so much vermin? To exterminate vermin you kill them and if you exterminate scabs you are obliged to kill them.

Foster—I wouldn't understand it that way at all.

Senator McKellar—What do you understand by it? What would you do to them?

Foster—There are various ways of exterminating them.

Senator McKellar—How would you go about it? Would you do it quietly, by poison, or what other way would you suggest to exterminate them?

Foster—Well, the principal weapon of course is education. There is no question about that.

Gives Views on Race Suicide.

Senator McKellar—Well, but you cannot exterminate anything by education. Now I want to call your attention to this: "The Syndicalist is a race suicider. He knows that children are a detriment to him in his daily struggle." Do you still adhere to that doctrine? Do you believe in race suicide?

Foster—I think it is foolishness on the part of the workman to undertake to raise a large family on the wages that are paid.

Senator McKellar—That answers the question. I now call your attention to Page 18 of your book on Syndicalism, where you say: "The Syndicalist is as unscrupulous in his choice of weapons to fight his every day battles as for his final struggle with capitalism. He allows no consideration of 'legality,' 'religion,' 'patriotism,' 'honor,' 'duty,' and so forth, to stand in the way of his adoption of effective tactics. The only sentiment he knows is loyalty to the interests of the working class. He is in utter revolt against capitalism in all its phases. His lawless course often lands him in jail, but he is so fired by revolutionary enthusiasm that jails, or even death, have no terrors for him. He glories in martyrdom, consoling himself with the knowledge that he is a terror to his enemies, and that his movements, today sending chills along the spines of international capitalism, tomorrow will put an end to this monstrosity." Is that your belief now?

Foster—If you put all those terms in quotation marks, that stands.

Senator McKellar—In other words, you still believe it is your duty to allow no considerations of legality, religion, patriotism, honor or duty to stand in the way of your adoption of effective tactics to secure your ends? And to that you answer yes?

Foster—I just say this much, at the risk of being misquoted and misunderstood, that all of those terms are relative terms.

Senator Kenyon—What did you mean by "Yours for the revolution"? What revolution had you in mind?

Foster—Just what I have stated in my writings.

Senator Kenyon—The social revolution?

Foster—Yes, Sir.

Senator McKellar—Are you in sympathy with the Bolshevistic movement in Russia?

Foster—I don't know much about it.

Senator McKellar—Then you do not believe in it?

Foster—Not knowing about it, of course I cannot say that I do.

The rest of Foster's testimony had to do with the foreign element in the strike situation, which element, he said, predominated the question of increased wages and the subject of collective bargaining.

Claims 363,600 Strikers.

Michael F. Tighe, who preceded Foster on the stand, said there were now 363,600 men on strike in the steel districts. He gave the following list of the number of men estimated by the unions to be on strike in the various districts:

Pittsburgh	25,000
Homestead	9,000
Braddock	10,000
Rankin	5,000
Clairton	4,000
Duquesne-McKeesport	12,000
Vandergrift	4,000
Brackenridge	5,000
New Kensington	1,100
Apollo	1,500
Leechberg	3,000
Danera-Menessen	12,000
Johnstown	18,000
Coatesville	4,000
Youngstown district	70,000
Wheeling district	15,000
Cleveland district	23,000
Steubenville district	12,000
Chicago district	90,000
Buffalo	12,000
Pueblo	6,000
Five Bethlehem plants	20,000
Total	363,600

The hearing will be resumed at 10:30 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Feared I. W. W. Rivalry.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3 (Associated Press.)—Giving a detailed history of union activities in the steel industry, Michael F. Tighe, President of the Iron, Steel and Tin Workers' Union, told the Senate Committee investigating the steel strike today that the United States Steel Corporation instead of "leading the van in advancing wages, as Judge Gary has claimed, has lagged behind our organization.

"Information given to you by Judge Gary," Tighe said, "was not first hand evidence gained from practical knowledge of the industry but instead consisted of the statements made to him by his employes, foremen and superintendents. It was far and away from being the truth about the industry."

Tighe repeated the charge that the Steel Corporation early in its history had appropriated $20,000,000 to fight unions, and gave the names of his informants.

"I was very much put out yesterday by Judge Gary's refusal to compromise or arbitrate this issue," said Tighe. "He is sowing the seeds of anarchy; promoting the insidious doctrine that there is no way out of industrial difficulties except by the destruction of one side or the other."

Tighe reiterated that the "closed shop" was not an issue and said the union leaders could not comply with President Wilson's request to postpone the strike until after the Industrial Conference next week, because the I. W. W. organizers were active among the men and would have succeeded in calling some "sporadic strikes."

Tighe read an advertisement of 1909, credited to the United States Steel Corporation, which said:

"Men Wanted—Syrians, Poles, and Rumanians preferred."

"The gentleman's [Judge Gary's] remarks about foreigners now," Tighe remarked, "are not well taken, in view of that."

"Do you charge that from 1909 on there was a steady increase of foreign workmen in the steel company's mills?" asked Senator Walsh, Democrat, Massachusetts.

"Yes, I do."

"How many of the strikers cannot speak English?" asked Chairman Kenyon.

"To be frank about the matter, I think the largest percentage of them are foreign born."

"Why could not the strike be delayed at the President's request?" asked Chairman Kenyon.

"Because there were a number of I. W. W. organizers among the men," said Tighe. "If we had delayed they would have said that the American Federation of Labor could not do anything. They were getting some influence, and would have succeeded in calling some sporadic strikes, anyway."

"Then, in the last analysis, the I. W. W. caused this strike," said Senator Stirling.

"Oh, don't take that view," Tighe responded. "If we had gotten a conference we would have had something to show the men that their interests were being protected and could have held them on the job."

The committee hearings after today's testimony will be transferred to Pittsburgh and other steel centres, where the Senators plan to investigate personally the underlying causes of the strike. Transfer of the hearings was approved in a resolution adopted by the Senate, and the committee was empowered to summon witnesses.

REPLY TO GARY TESTIMONY.

Labor Organization Headed by Gompers Disputes His Contentions.

The American Alliance for Labor and Democracy, 280 Broadway, of which Samuel Gompers is President, last night made public its analysis of E. H. Gary's testimony in Washington on the steel strike. Quoting his statement that it is "immoral for a small minority of men, organized, if you please, to compel by force a large majority to yield to their desires and to submit to their control," the alliance says that the application of this belief to the steel situation is not clear as Mr. Gary states it.

"But the situation," continues the statement, "becomes decidedly clear when Judge Gary's statement is reconstructed, providing it is admitted for the sake of argument that there is a moral point at issue. For example, it is immoral for a small minority of men—the Board of Directors of the Steel Corporation, perhaps—to compel by force of economic pressure a large majority—the Steel Corporation employes in this case—to submit to their control.

"Morality is morality, and it applies as effectively to one set of men as to another, if it applies at all. Beyond that it is not necessary to go with the moral question at this time."

Replying to Mr. Gary's contention that the fundamental issue in the steel strike is the open shop or a closed shop, and that the closed shop means less production, less work, and higher costs, the statement defines "open shop" as a non-union shop, "closed to union men in almost all cases," and a "closed shop" as a "union shop," and says that the union demands these things:

"A proper wage to maintain the worker according to American standards of living, with a minimum wage usually fixed as a sum for less than which no worker can so maintain himself.

"Proper hours of work, having regard for the health of the workers and their families and the condition of the industry.

"Healthful working conditions, in order that the health of the workers may be conserved and their usefulness to themselves and to society prolonged and heightened."

"These conditions," it is asserted, "do not make for high prices and low production. If dishonest and unfair forces did not enter into costs at other points and beyond the control of the workers, we should have fair prices and high production."

Mr. Gary is charged with advocating "unmodified and unqualified autocracy" in his statement that the ideal condition in industry is an industry "unrestricted by labor unions or anybody else." After describing a despot and despotism, the statement continues:

"When trade unionism enters an industry that industry ceases to be a despotism, because the union workers have a voice. Their chosen representatives speak for them in helping to determine the conditions under which they shall give service."

"The fundamental rights of human life and liberty," the statement ends, "are too vital to be subjected to any condition that is not the fruit of wisdom and justice working in the service of democracy."

MORE PRINTERS QUIT WITHOUT SANCTION

President Rouse Tells Employers He Has Ordered Men Back to Work.

LITERARY DIGEST MAY STOP

Only Large Magazine to Come Out This Week Likely to Suspend Unless Situation Improves.

With a total of nearly 1,000 members of "Big Six" Typographical Union on strike in the commercial printing houses of the city, Marsden G. Scott, President of the International Typographical Union, is expected to arrive here today from Indianapolis, Ind., to take a hand in the situation. Bert Brady, chief organizer of the international, arrived yesterday, and had interviews with some of the employing printers. Aside from the promise of President Leon Rouse of "Big Six" to place the proposals of the employers before the meeting of his organization Sunday, very little headway was made yesterday toward a settlement of the differences in the printing trades unions. Practically all the pressrooms in the commercial shops remain closed, the men having been locked out Wednesday because they were not members of the new locals of the international.

Two hundred compositors went out yesterday. At the Publishers' Printing Company, 207 West Twenty-fifth Street, 50 men went out; Bartlett-Orr Press, Eighth Avenue and Thirty-third Street, 30; Hamilton Press, 40 Stone Street, 10; Francis Emory Fitch, 47 Broad Street, 25; Redfield, Kendrick, Odell Co., Inc., 311 West Forty-third Street, 10; Collier's Weekly, 416 West Thirteenth Street, 70. At the Hamilton Press the men walked out when the company tried to reopen its pressrooms with help supplied by the International Union through the two new local unions. Major George L. Berry, President of the International Pressmen's Union, said last night that no more pressmen will be sent to jobs at present.

The strike in the Publishers' Printing Company, where the fifty compositors employed there walked out, means that The Literary Digest, which was the only large publication to come out this week, will have to suspend temporarily unless the situation improves. The pressmen employed at this plant were furnished by the International Union, the members of the local unions having gone on strike some weeks ago, when the employers refused to discharge some International men.

President Rouse told the employers yesterday at a conference at the Hotel Pennsylvania that the strike of "Big Six" members was unauthorized, and was not sanctioned by him, and that in all cases reported to him he had ordered the men to return to work. The employers said that none had returned to work. Specific instances where the men had walked out were pointed out to Mr. Rouse, with the request that he send the men back to work or send others in their places.

The proposal from the employing printers, which Mr. Rouse is to place before his meeting Sunday afternoon, was made to Mr. Rouse two weeks ago, and provides for an increase of $6 a week, forty-four hour week, effective May 1, 1921, arbitration agreement overlapping contract, contract to be approved by the International Typographical Union. The employers also offer to arbitrate any or all of the demands of the union. Mr. Rouse has refused to arbitrate the hours.

Mr. Rouse told the conference that he continued to represent Franklin Union No. 23 and the New York Printing Pressmen's Union No. 51 at the request of these organizations, but the employers would not recognize this representation, as they refuse to deal with the "outlawed" unions. He again offered himself as mediator to reconcile the differences between the local pressmen's union and pressmen's international. The employers said that there was nothing they could do, and again suggested that the only way the situation could be handled would be for the local leaders and the international officials to get together. Major Berry has refused to meet the leaders of the "outlawed" unions—James J. Bagley and Bernard Nolan—and he said last night that he had not changed his position.

Rose Schneiderman, Secretary of the Women's Trade Union League, announced last night that there will be a meeting of copyholders at the rooms of the league, 7 East Fifteenth Street, this afternoon at 1 o'clock for the purpose of unionizing that branch of the printing industry.

In a statement issued last night William Green said that the 250 members of the Printers' League Section stand solidly against recognizing any union not in good standing with its international organization. He denied reports that between 1,400 and 1,500 compositors were out, and said the number was nearer 800.

"It is a peculiar situation," continued Mr. Green, "when a man like Leon Rouse, head of 'Big Six,' a union in good standing with its international, should say that he is 'protecting' the interests' of outlaw locals in the same trade."

Publishers of periodicals, magazines, and trade papers to the number of 152 or more held a meeting yesterday afternoon in the Engineering Societies Building, in West Thirty-ninth Street, at which resolutions were adopted showing the publishers to be unanimous in their stand against the demands of the local unions. The report that certain publishers had acquiesced to the demands of the union was denied. It was also learned at the meeting that none of the publishing houses expects to leave the city. John Adams Thayer, Secretary of the meeting, said that twenty-six more publishing houses yesterday joined the ranks of the publishers who are fighting the demands of the unions.

Judge Otto A. Rosalsky of General Sessions had a "heart to heart" talk yesterday with 500 of the striking printing pressmen near their headquarters at Lafayette and Franklin Streets. He told the strikers that he didn't know anything of the merits of the strike, but if they were in the right he hoped they would succeed. The strikers were urged to preserve the peace and conduct their strike in such a manner that their organization would not be brought into ill repute. "I would suggest," he said, "that you do not stand in groups on the streets, and if a policeman should demand that you move on you should do so, as the policemen are merely doing their duty." The Judge was heartily cheered.

100 DEAD IN SPANISH FLOOD.

$1,930,000 Loss Caused—Cartagena Still Is Isolated.

MADRID, Oct. 3, (Associated Press.)—One hundred persons have been drowned and loss exceeding 10,000,000 pesetas has been caused, it is estimated, by the floods in southeastern Spain, and bad news continues to come in.

The city of Cartagena, where so many were drowned by the inundation of the lower part of the town, and thirty villages were still isolated by the floods Thursday night. Two fishing boats were wrecked in the Strait of Torrevieja, near Alicante, by the violent hailstorm, by which also the roofs of a number of buildings were crushed in. Many small houses have been demolished and larger houses undermined.

In one region two huts in which eleven persons had taken refuge were carried away bodily by a torrent and all the occupants were drowned.

LABOR BOARD TO ACT IN BUILDING CRISIS

Conference with Employers and Unions to be Held in Albany.

ALBANY, Oct. 3.—In an endeavor to bring about an understanding between the building trades and employers of New York City, in order that building operations may be resumed on a larger scale, Governor Smith's Labor Board, which met today, decided to call before it representatives of both sides next Thursday. The conference will be held in Albany.

This action was taken upon the receipt of a letter from the Tenement House Committee of the charity organizations of New York City calling attention to the serious situation in the building trades of the city, where, it was stated, the uncertainty and instability of labor was apparently one of the causes of the slowness with which building is being resumed. The letter pointed out that there were fewer apartments in New York today than there were a year ago, due to the demolition of some tenement houses and the alteration of others into business buildings.

The Labor Board also determined to take up the strike of hatters at Beacon, and this situation will be considered here next Wednesday. A letter from the American Federation of Labor specified several other situations needing attention. The Maritime Association of the Port of New York notified the board that it had appointed a special industrial committee to represent the association in any question affecting labor disputes and industrial unrest in which it could co-operate with the board.

PLEAD FOR DAYLIGHT SAVING

Three Opponents at Aldermanic Hearing Say It Violates Divine Law.

It remained for Health Commissioner Dr. Royal S. Copeland to discover who was perhaps the first advocate of the daylight saving plan, and he brought forward his name as one who had favored the plan at a hearing yesterday before the Welfare Committee of the Board of Aldermen on the proposed ordinance establishing daylight saving in this city. The Health Commissioner, who spoke in reply to opposition to the proposed law, reminded his hearers that it was Joshua who commanded the sun to stand still so that the Children of Israel could continue a battle by daylight. Of the many who attended the hearing only three opposed the passing of the ordinance.

Another who opposed the ordinance was Alfred Roeder, who said he was a banker. He, too, thought changing the clock was flying in the face of Providence. He said that when children went to school under the new order they were tired and sleepy. A new argument in opposition was offered by a Mrs. Dunlap. She opposed it because it made the housewife prepare supper in the hottest part of the day and the laborer had to go to bed in the hottest part of the evening.

"If we wanted our clocks to run by the sun we would have to change them every minute," said Marcus M. Marks, President of the National Daylight Saving Association. "The people of New York with a very small exception are in favor of the ordinance. The real objection to the ordinance is that if New York does this alone it will cause confusion in time. There was no confusion in Cleveland or in Detroit when these cities changed their time some years ago. If New York passes it we have word that cities in the Eastern zone will also pass it."

Dr. Copeland said that he favored the passing of the ordinance because he was present to represent 700,000 poor children in the tenements.

"One of the best things that could happen to these children," said the Health Commissioner, "is giving them one hour more of sunlight. I am here in the interest of the public health, and in that interest the Board of Aldermen should pass this ordinance."

Miss Margaret Doty of the First National Bank, speaking as the representative of the clerical class, strongly advocated the passage of the ordinance. Alfred H. Smith, manager of the Industrial Bureau of the Merchants' Association, said the association fought for the daylight saving law before Congress and was just as strongly in favor of it now.

The committee will talk the matter over in executive session and possibly report at the next meeting of the Board of Aldermen.

COUPLE ACCUSED OF BIGAMY

Frank H. Gibson and Woman Said to be His Fifth Wife Arraigned.

Frank H. Gibson of Manhattan, who, it is alleged, has been married five times, and his wife Ida, who is said to be his fifth wife, were arraigned yesterday before County Judge Frank L. Young at White Plains, under indictments for bigamy. Mr. and Mrs. Gibson were arrested on bench warrants issued by District Attorney Lee Parsons Davis, at Richmond, Va.

Mrs. Gibson, who was Ida May Usted of Ossining, was married in that township two months ago. She is under indictment for having feloniously married a man who has a wife living. Gibson, who is 50 years old, denies that he is a bigamist, and entered a plea of not guilty.

According to Captain Thomas Anderson of New York, Salvation Army prison reform worker, who caused his arrest, Gibson was located through the efforts of Mrs. Bessie Gibson, alleged to be wife No. 3, of 47 West Sixteenth Street, New York. She helped find Gibson in Richmond, after it was alleged he had married Miss Usted at Ossining. This was soon after he finished a term of three years in the Eastern Penitentiary, Philadelphia, to which he was sentenced after he had married a Westchester county girl, his fourth wife.

After his fifth marriage the police say Gibson, who is a proofreader, obtained employment with Doubleday, Page & Co., Garden City, L. I. From there he fled to Philadelphia, and then took his fifth wife with him to Richmond.

Deputy Sheriff Crawford says that he learned that Gibson's first wife died and the second divorced him.

The last Mrs. Gibson is 23 years old and during the trip from Richmond the officers say that she was very devoted to the prisoner.

CITY HORSE NOT A CRIPPLE.

Court Decides Against Society for Preventing Cruelty to Animals.

A two-hour argument took place yesterday in the Williamsburg Bridge Plaza Court between the representatives of the Street Cleaning Department of the city and the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, the subject of the discussion being whether a horse which walks two steps, then limps and misses a step, should have an honorable discharge from service, or be continued at work.

On Sept. 12 last, Nicholas Cappeler, 35 years old, of 136 Jefferson Street, Manhattan, attached to Station E of the Street Cleaning Department, was summoned by W. W. Evans, of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals to appear in the Bridge Plaza Court, charged with driving a horse lame in the right rear leg. In the hearing, the city was represented by Assistant Corporation Counsel Joseph Goldstein, and the society by Attorney William Grace. J. J. Schuller, a veterinary, testified for the Street Cleaning Department, and made an attack on the society. The department said that its horses were examined every morning and evening by its own veterinaries. Magistrate Dale finally decided that the horse was not a cripple, and dismissed the case.

WILSON'S ILLNESS CURBS KING'S TOUR

and the King was escorted over the Noma, formerly owned by Vincent Astor. The King smiled broadly, almost contentedly, when he was told that the Noma had just been released from Government service with a German submarine sinking to her credit.

With the yacht, a mass of flags, and with two bands aboard, the party moved well into the stream, while the crews of liners tied up at adjacent piers sent up cheer after cheer. So that the King might get a "close up" view of docks and ships, the yacht came near to the New York side, and as the Noma's bow turned again southward the Fire Department band struck up "Over There." First the King started humming, then the Prince joined in, and finally the Queen, the latter nodding her head and trying to keep time with the music.

Remembered Brooklyn Bridge.

Down the shore front to the Battery and around the tip the Noma steamed. As the yacht passed under the Brooklyn Bridge the King recalled that he had ridden over it in a trolley car some years ago, and after looking intently at it for some time, remarked that it "hadn't changed much." Under the Manhattan Bridge the yacht steamed, and then turned, coming down so that a near view of the Brooklyn Navy Yard might be obtained. Several battleships were in the yards undergoing repairs, and their names and records were told by Rear Admiral James H. Glennon, Commandant of the Third Naval District, who was among the Noma's passengers.

Swinging back around the Battery wall, the passengers caught a glimpse of the thousands upon thousands jammed into the park, waiting the time when the King would debark. The countless windows of the broad, high front of the lofty Whitehall Building were filled with office workers releasing clouds of ticker tape, confetti and torn paper, which floated like snowflakes out over the thronged park.

Promptly to the scheduled time of 11:45 o'clock the Noma was docked and King Albert stepped ashore, Rodman Wanamaker escorting him to a flag-decked automobile waiting at the end of the pier. The Queen, accompanied by Mrs. Breckenridge Long, entered a second car, while the Prince, with his military aide, Lieutenant Coffin, occupied a third machine, with the Baroness de Cartier de Marchienne, wife of the Belgian Ambassador. When the cars moved slowly out into the plaza to form for the parade to City Hall, the royal couple were cheered time and again.

The parade was quickly off, headed by Lieutenant George Wood with thirty mounted policemen from Traffic Precinct A, followed by a band of the 22d Infantry from Governors Island. Colonel John C. Tillson, commanding the 22d, followed leading a provisional regiment, which included two companies of his own regiment, a detachment of reenlisted men, all wearing medals, and two detachments of coast artillerymen from Forts Hamilton, Schuyler, and Totten, fewer than 1,000 soldiers. These were followed by nine companies of sailors and marines from the Brooklyn Navy Yard. Major Gen. Thomas H. Barry, Commander of the Department of the East, was in charge of the soldiers, while Admiral Glennon directed the movements of the navy's quota.

Directly back of the "champion" band of the U. S. S. Arizona came the King, escorted by motorcycle detachments and hedged in between almost solid lanes of special agents of the State Department. As the parade moved into lower Broadway, the tumult of New York's appreciation of the rulers and their heroic conduct during the war began. The sidewalks were solid with people from curb to wall and the windows held thousands of other spectators.

20,000 Massed at City Hall.

Moving slowly, the procession of more than 100 automobiles passed up Broadway, the King doffing his cap repeatedly, while the Queen smiled her pleasure at the outbursts from the crowds. When the Post Office was reached the parade instead of continuing up Broadway turned into Park Row and arrived at the City Hall, which was a mass of banners, a few minutes after noon.

The comparatively narrow confines of the park in front of the City Hall must have been occupied to the last inch, for, according to the police estimate, nearly 20,000 persons were there. Roar after roar of greeting arose as the regulars wheeled sharply into the park and lined up three deep in front of the hall. When the big black motor carrying Rodman Wanamaker and the King arrived at the steps of the building the plaudits of the crowd reached a remarkable volume. The Mayor, Mrs. Hylan, and their daughter, Miss Virginia Hylan, were grouped at the bottom of the steps, and were quickly presented to the King, who saluted.

Mayor Hylan then escorted the King to the Aldermanic Chamber, which held the biggest crowd in its history. As the King, Queen, and Prince ascended the dais at the east end of the chamber they and the Belgian people received three cheers each, and the police band, stationed in the gallery, launched into the stirring measures of "The Stars and Stripes Forever." Mr. Wanamaker, after paying high tribute to the Belgian sovereigns, introduced the Mayor, who formally welcome the visitors to the city.

The Mayor's Welcome.

"We are glad to welcome the soldier-sovereign who has earned the plaudits of an admiring world by his courage, sincerity, and unselfish devotion to the interest and life of his people," he said.

"We honor the leader who is ever ready to share common dangers with his fellow-citizens, and who instills in their hearts a confidence of security and a hope of victory, freedom, and glory.

"We greet with profound admiration and love the woman, ever his constant companion in the hours of darkest peril, whose ministering hand on the fields of battle and beds of pain lifted up her sorrow-stricken but indomitable kinsmen, and cheered the fading spirits of those who were doing battle in their country's cause.

"We salute their majesties, King Albert and Queen Elizabeth of the Belgians. The world knows the sad story of Belgium's wrongs, of violated treaties, invasion, deportation, terrorism, starvation, and massacre.

"Belgium has indeed been the great pivotal point of the war. It was her cry which caused a rush to arms by liberty-loving manhood and welded the armed hosts of freedom into an invincible fighting organization.

"While extending our sympathies we also felicitate Belgium on the fact that the condition of its industries is not as hopeless as generally supposed. We rejoice that in agricultural development, in the manufacturing and related industries there has been a steady resumption of the old activities, that the railroads are rapidly being placed in serviceable condition, that navigation has already been resumed between Antwerp and the sea, and the most profitable business relations carried on with other countries.

"We also venture to express the hope that any difficulty existing between Belgium and Holland, which latter country rendered very material assistance to the American colonies in their early struggle for independence, may be amicably adjusted.

"The Belgian people have developed a new capacity for national as well as personal sacrifice. Bruised and scattered, they will arise superior to their surroundings in the building of a new and greater Belgium.

"In this work the aid of the United States will be sought, and will be freely and cheerfully given. There will be the manifestation of American generosity in connection with the reconstruction of Belgium, as characterized our action throughout the period of the war. Our aid, of course, will be only enlisted for necessary pursuits and not in the projects of territorial aggrandizement.

"The generally acknowledged thrift, industry, and dependability of the Belgian workers are assets of incalculable value in the problems now confronting the nation. The confident manner in which the Belgian people have already entered upon the task of reconstruction is the best index that Belgium will achieve as triumphant a victory in peace as she did in war.

"The Government of Belgium is in strong hands—in the hands of those subjected to the hardest test and found equal to the situation.

"I refer to that peerless, triumphant King Albert, Queen Elizabeth, and Cardinal Mercier. This soldier, woman, and prelate, whose judgments have been matured by the wonderful deeds in which they had so signal a part, will manifest that same able leadership in peace as in war.

"On behalf of our vast citizenship I now take pleasure in presenting to your Majesties the freedom of the city which bore upon the first shield the words, 'New Belgium,' a city whose history, past and present, has been one of whole-hearted service to the cause of liberty and democracy, a city proud of its Americanism, the glorious City of New York."

King Kisses the Flag.

Responding to the Mayor, King Albert said:

"Mr. Mayor—I thank you heartily for your words of welcome. I appreciate highly the honor that the City of New York does me in making me one of its citizens. I prize all the more highly this manifestation, because in Belgium municipal institutions have always played in the past and continue to fill today a marked rôle in the public life of the country. I think that there is not in the history of the world another example like that of the City of New York which, born not three centuries ago, has become in this short space of time one of the centres of universal activity. New York is, indeed, worthy to be the commercial and financial metropolis of that admirable American democracy, which showed itself to be as great in war as in peace and always generous toward those who suffer. I am happy, Mr. Mayor, to be able to bear to the immense city which surrounds us with its splendor, the salutations of Belgium."

After the King had been formally invested with the freedom of the municipality, the ceremony consisting of the receipt of an engraved scroll testifying to the fact, Mr. Wanamaker spoke, eulogizing the war services of the rulers. He then presented to the King a large American flag of silk, draping it about the sovereign's shoulders.

As the flag fell about him the King lifted it and pressed it to his lips. This was the signal for a great burst of cheering from the spectators. Albert then turned to the Mayor and shook his hand, and, as the band played the Belgian national anthem, the royal party, with its escort of prominent men and women, passed out of the chamber.

While the waiting throng outside cheered with renewed vigor the party entered the automobiles and started back to the Waldorf. The passage of the procession up Lafayette Street, east through Ninth Street to Fifth Avenue, and up to the hotel was witnessed and applauded by hundreds of thousands of persons. It was about 1 o'clock when the royal party arrived at the hotel, which was banked on all sides by dense crowds. The party entered through the Thirty-third Street entrance, which was decorated with bunting and flags. The passage from the door to the two special elevators set apart for the royal party was piled on each side with flowers, while from the ceiling hung Belgian and American flags intertwined.

After luncheon in their suite the King and Queen remained in seclusion until just before 3 o'clock, when they departed to witness the assembly of 30,000 children from the schools on the sheep meadow in Central Park. Meeting with a continual reception along Fifth Avenue, the procession entered the park at Fifty-ninth Street and Fifth Avenue and up to the meadow, about opposite Seventy-second Street.

Inclosed within a cordon made up of thousands were 30,000 children, and as the car containing the King, in his uniform of Commander in Chief of the Belgian Army; the cars carrying the Queen, again in white, and the Prince, in his private's garb, came whirring along the East Drive, shrill cheers burst from the 30,000 young throats and as one 30,000 American flags waved in a great field of red, white and blue.

The Pledge to the Flag.

Albert was escorted directly to a large stand which had been erected, and as he entered the Police Band played the American and Belgian national airs, while the children silently stood at salute. When King Albert, Queen Elizabeth, and Prince Leopold had come to the centre front of the stand, the children at a signal raised their right hands and in a mighty monotone, that thrilled because of the eager earnestness that was in it, recited the pledge to the flag. As the young voices slowly intoned the words of the pledge, the King, his face gravely betraying his emotion, kept his hand rigidly at the brim of his cap.

Anning S. Prall, President of the Board of Education, then introduced Albert as "the fighting King, whose story, together with the story of his devastated country and sufferings of his people, you all know." As soon as the enthusiasm of the children permitted, the King said:

"Children, the Queen and I want to thank you for your warm welcome. We express to you the great pleasure we have in being with you here, and we wish you all every good luck and happiness."

Following this, the King and Queen left the stand and accompanied by Mr. Prall and other city officials walked about among the children who were assembled in great squares, according to their schools. Often, the greeting of the children was rather informal, such as "Hello, King Albert," and to all of them the King returned a salute, sometimes with a hearty laugh.

Passing through the rank after rank, his eye caught the black, yellow, and red of his own flag and he walked over to the two diminutive bearers of the colors. And little Miss Matilda de Mulda and her even smaller brother, August, both of 783 Tenth Avenue, got the surprise of their lives, for the King bent down and shook hands with both of them. He asked them how they came to bear the colors of Belgium. For a second the girl looked roundeyed at the King; then she said: "We were refugees in Belgium." Albert said nothing more, but he reached down to shake hands again, and his shoulders seemed a little squarer and there was no smile on his face as he moved away.

King Plants a Tree.

But the episode—it seemed to carry the King back to the war again—soon passed; it could not withstand the school "yells" and the shouts of the youngsters. As the last rank of children was passed, the royal party moved over to the east side of the roadway bordering the Fifth Avenue side of the meadow and planted a European beech tree, just fifty feet from the oak planted recently by General Pershing.

The first spadeful of earth was thrown in by Albert, then the Queen threw some earth into the hole, but when Prince Leopold took the spade he wasn't content with one or two spadesful. Remarking that it reminded him of his trench-digging days, he threw in a half dozen spadesful.

This ceremony completed, the party left the park by the Seventy-second Street entrance, going straight across town to Riverside Drive and on up to Dyckman Street. As they were passing along the Drive at 158th Street, the automobile occupied by Queen Elizabeth and Prince Leopold punctured a tire and they were held up for several minutes until they were transferred to another machine. In the meantime, the King's car had proceeded at a rapid pace, and the Queen had to violate the speed regulations to regain her place in the line.

At Dyckman Street the procession turned and came back down the Drive. At Grant's Tomb the party halted and passing through a large crowd that had hastily assembled, groped their way into the dim interior of the tomb down to the sarcophagus on the top of which Queen Elizabeth placed a large bunch of American Beauty roses.

After a few moments of silent prayer beside the huge bronze sarcophagus, they retraced their way through the semi-darkness, and, acknowledging the applause of the onlookers, re-entered the automobiles. Coming down the Drive the King expressed desire to visit the Metropolitan Museum of Art, and the party drove through the Park to Fifth Avenue. In the building the King and Queen closely scanned the famous paintings. The Prince, although both his father and mother at various times called his attention to paintings—once to a Rembrandt—failed to betray any outward evidence of deep absorption. He seemed to regard the paintings as all right enough, but nothing to get excited about. When the party reached the corridor devoted to the Egyptian mummies and to relics of ancient days the Prince was at the front all the time. He gazed at the mummies with the deepest interest, asking questions at a rapid-fire rate.

Following the visit to the Museum, the party motored quickly back ot the hotel, where a big crowd was waiting to greet them once more.

DINNER FOR ROYAL PARTY.

Thirty Guests at Belgian Ambassador's Table at Waldorf.

King Albert, Queen Elizabeth, and Prince Leopold attended a dinner given last night in the East Room of the Waldorf-Astoria by Baron de Cartier de Marchienne, Belgian Ambassador to the United States. The guests, about thirty in number, were seated around a large circular table which was decorated profusely with dahlias. Flags of the Allies, with the Belgian emblem predominating, were used in ornamenting the East Room.

A short reception preceded the dinner. The King and his party arrived a few minutes after 8 o'clock, and stayed until 10:30, when they retired to their suite on the third floor of the Waldorf.

Among those who attended the dinner were the Baroness de Marchienne, Mrs. A. J. Hemphill, Mr. and Mrs. Brand Whitlock, James W. Gerard, Thomas Fortune Ryan, Mr. and Mrs. Rodman Wanamaker, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Lamont, Third Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Breckinridge Long, Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Kahn, Pierre Mali, Henry P. Davison, Rear Admiral Andrew T. Long, and Major Gen. William T. Wright.

KING'S PROGRAM FOR TODAY.

Special Train Will Take Royal Party to Boston Tonight.

King Albert's decision to cancel engagements because of the illness of the President does not apply to the program arranged for him in New York, it was announced last night. The King and his party will depart tonight on a special train for Boston, arriving there early tomorrow morning.

According to the announcement made at the Waldorf-Astoria last night, the King and Prince Leopold will begin today with a visit at 10 o'clock to the Woolworth Building. They will be conducted through the world's tallest building by William E. Walsh, Superintendent of Buildings for the Borough of Manhattan.

Meantime Queen Elizabeth, if other arrangements do not interfere, will visit several of the city's hospitals with Mrs. John F. Hylan, and also pay a visit to the Rockefeller Institute, Avenue A and Sixty-sixth Street, going through the War Demonstration Hospital which is maintained there.

Following their inspection of the Woolworth Building, the King and Prince will go to the Stock Exchange and the Produce Exchange, and at noon will be the guests of the Committee for Relief in Belgium at a luncheon in the Bankers' Club, 120 Broadway.

At 3 o'clock this afternoon the royal family will hold a reception in the Public Library for representatives of the various organizations that engaged in war work. Both the King and the Queen are expected to speak after the reception. The Young Men's Christian Association announced last night that among those who would represent it at the reception would be Alfred E. Marling, William M. Kingsley, George W. Perkins, William Fellowes Morgan, Mr. and Mrs. John Sloane, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Bedford, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Irving Pratt, and William Sloane Coffin.

The Belgian rulers will attend the meeting of the American Legion tonight at Madison Square Garden, arriving there at about 10 o'clock. The King will address the legion members, and upon leaving will go directly to the Waldorf, and thence to the State Department special train, which will be waiting in the yards of the New York, New Haven & Hartford.

CONDEMNS STRIKE OF BOSTON POLICE

Citizens Committee Approves Acts of Authorities in Preserving Order.

THEIR MOTIVES PRAISED

Holds It Is Vital That Officers of Law Should Not Affiliate with Outside Bodies.

BOSTON, Oct. 3.—The Citizens Committee of 34, of which James J. Storrow is Chairman and which was appointed by Mayor Peters when a strike of the police appeared imminent to co-operate with him in attempting to reach an amicable settlement, submitted its final report to Mayor Peters today, together with a resolution condemning the police for leaving their posts and for their effort to enforce by strike the right of policemen to join the American Federation of Labor.

The resolution which was adopted at a meeting this afternoon, follows:

"Resolved, That the policemen of Boston were unjustified in leaving their posts, that it is vital for the preservation of law that officers of the law should not be permitted, by organization or otherwise, to become affiliated with any outside bodies, the rules or interests of which might conflict with such duty, and that the Committee fully supports the acts of the authorities in preserving law and order and toward defeating finally and conclusively the effort to enforce by strike the right of policemen to join the American Federation of Labor."

The report which was signed by the Executive Committee, dealt chiefly with events before the strike, as the Committee practically ceased its efforts when the police went out on strike—"because the preponderance of opinion against the policemen joining the American Federation of Labor or exercising the right to strike, was overwhelming."

The report reviewed the efforts of the committee to reach a satisfactory settlement of the issues involved by inducing the police to surrender their American Federation of Labor charter. It explained that at a conference with the men and with the authorities the committee position was "one of scrupulous, rigid, and unyielding adherence to the Commissioners' and Mayor's position that the men must give up their A. F. of L. charter, that on no other basis could their retention as policemen be countenanced, that if the men should strike the committee would do the utmost in their power to see that they were defeated."

"In fairness to all parties," the report said, "it should be stated that at no time did the union vote to surrender their union affiliation or in any way act upon the matter, except by vote to strike following the suspension of nineteen members who were placed upon trial.

"And in justice to the Commissioner it should be stated that at no time did counsel for the union or officers of the union or men upon trial take any position with the Commissioner other than to insist upon continuing and retaining their membership in the union.

"And in justice to the Governor it should be stated that at all times he assured the members of the committee that whenever called upon for a military force he would provide sufficient men, if they could be secured, to maintain law and order.

"And in further justice to all parties it should be stated that the Governor, the Mayor, and the Commissioner, in the opinion of the committee, acted at all times from the highest of motives and with but a single thought, namely, the welfare of the Commonwealth and its people.

"It seems proper to say that all the members of the committee who came in contact with Messrs. Vahey and Feeney as counsel for the men are of the opinion that counsel for the men exerted every honorable means in their power to co-operate with the committee in order to find a way out of the apparent impasse in which the men had become involved when before receiving the advice of counsel they joined the American Federation of Labor."

In reviewing incidents leading to the strike the report said that when the committee wrote Commissioner Curtis asking him to defer pronouncing sentence upon the nineteen patrolmen who were found guilty of affiliating with the American Federation of Labor in the belief that its efforts to reach an amicable settlement would be successful with a little more time, counsel for the Commissioner, (Herbert Parker,) to whom the letter was delivered, refused to submit it to the Commissioner. Later, through the Mayor, the matter was called to the attention of the Commissioner, who granted a postponement.

The report further said that the committee felt concern for the safety of the city when the strike was declared and suggested that troops be immediately called in, but that Commissioner Curtis assured them, the Mayor and the Governor that he had the situation well in hand and "that he did not need or want the State guard."

DISCUSS IMPERATOR'S FATE.

Head of Shipping Board and Lansing Await More Information.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—Final disposition of the Imperator and the seven other German ships allocated to the United States after the signing of the armistice was discussed today at a conference between Secretary Lansing and Chairman Payne of the Shipping Board. No decision was reached, and a further conference will be held when additional information on the subject has been obtained.

Meantime the board's division of operations is proceeding with plans for their use as passenger and freight liners. D. H. Rosseter said that allowing for time needed for their repairs after use as transports, they could be in service by next April. Some of the German liners seized in American ports when this country entered the war will be in passenger service long before that time.

Besides establishing regular freight and passenger lines to South America and Europe, the Shipping Board is planning a service between Atlantic Coast ports and the Black Sea and between Pacific Coast ports and the Orient. Owing to the pressing need for service to the Black Sea the first vessel was dispatched last week, and arrangements are being completed to add the Köln, a former German vessel of 8,970 deadweight tons to this service. The Black Arrow, the ship now on her way, was coaled for the round trip, it was said, and she will touch at the Piraeus, Constantinople, and Constanza.

TO BRING BODIES HOME.

Our Dead Soldiers to be Removed from All Countries Except France.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—Bodies of all American soldiers interred in Germany, Belgium, Italy, Great Britain, Luxembourg, and Northern Russia will be returned to the United States as soon as necessary transportation can be arranged.

Secretary Baker announced today that he had issued instructions for the purchase, storage, and traffic division of the General Staff to take charge of the matter and to hasten it as much as possible.

This action, Mr. Baker said, did not indicate any change in the department's attitude toward the return of the soldier dead in France. It was hoped that the great majority of American parents would decide to let them remain there, but the wishes of the relatives desiring the bodies returned would be carried out.

CARDINAL TELLS HOW HE AWED GERMANS

Assumed Role of Accuser Instead of Allowing Them to Accuse Him.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Oct. 3.—A public reception was tendered to Cardinal Mercier, the Belgian Primate, in the Municipal Auditorium tonight. It was attended by 5,000 persons, while many more were unable to gain entrance. The distinguished visitor was the principal speaker, outlining briefly his experiences in his mother country during the German occupation.

Mayor Arthur A. Adams extended the welcome of the city to Cardinal Mercier, and was followed by Judge James B. Carroll, of the Supreme Court, who delivered an address. The Right Rev. Thomas F. Davies, Bishop of the Western Massachusetts Episcopal Diocese, and the Right Rev. Thomas D. Beaven, Bishop of the Springfield Catholic Diocese, also spoke.

Cardinal Mercier, in speaking of his success in dealing with the German invaders, said it was due wholly to the fact that he assumed the appearance of the accuser instead of the accused. Thus when German officers were accused of evil in their invasion of Belgium, he was able to deal with them, whereas, if he had allowed them to accuse him, he doubted if he would have attained the success he did. The noted visitor gave many instances of suffering in his country, brought about through the atrocities of the German army and the resulting conditions.

The Cardinal is the guest over night of Bishop Beaven and tomorrow morning will celebrate mass in St. Michael's Cathedral. He will leave for Boston at noon.

KNIGHTHOOD FOR MERCIER.

K. of C. to Confer a Degree on Belgian Primate at Reception.

Cardinal Mercier will have the degree of knighthood conferred upon him at a reception and dinner at which he will be the principal guest of the Knights of Columbus at the Hotel Commodore next Thursday evening. James A. Flaherty, Supreme Knight, will confer the degree upon the Belgian prelate, which will make him a member of the order.

The dinner to honor the Cardinal was placed in the hands of the New York Chapter of the Knights of Columbus by Archbishop Patrick J. Hayes, who will be one of the speakers. Mayor Hylan, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., Rodman Wanamaker, Major Gen. Thomas F. Barry, and Admiral William S. Benson will be at the dinner. Dr. Harry P. Swift will be toastmaster. John McCormack has volunteered to sing the Belgian national anthem.

Transfer Tax Appraiser William C. Clark of Mount Vernon yesterday filed with Surrogate Slater of Westchester County his appraisal of the estate of the late Mrs. Cecilia Doyer Faile, who was one of the wealthiest women in White Plains, and who left real and personal property valued at $241,354.85. She owned stocks, bonds, and mortgages on real estate worth $183,804.85, and real estate which is appraised at $57,550. The expenses of administration, funeral expenses, reduced the total value of the estate to $230,998.97.

Mrs. Faile owned twenty-four mortgages of various amounts on high-class real estate, and she had $18,363.79 cash in various banks. Among her effects was also found $25.41 in pennies. The estate is inherited by three sons, two daughters, and several grandchildren.

Asks to Keep Up Employment Work.

Resolutions asking the Community Councils to take up the work of the Federal Re-employment Bureau when it suspends operations on Nov. 1, were passed last night at the weekly meeting of the Central Federated Union in the Labor Temple, on East Eighty-fourth Street. The body also passed a resolution instructing the Secretary to write to the Governor of Pennsylvania demanding that the steel strikers should receive their constitutional rights of free speech.

Chinese Rugs

and rugs from other parts of the Orient have come from the land of the rising sun to grace the cultured homes of this Occidental clime. If you are furnishing a home you owe it to yourself to visit our Oriental Rug Section and see how well eastern art may be adapted to western decorative schemes.

There Is An Artistic Charm

to rugs woven in China by the native weavers which Occidental adapters have never successfully imitated. In the first place the yarns are of superior strength and the dyes of more enduring quality. Then the patient hand weaving gives the fabric a finish which stamps it as a work apart from the mere machine product.

The Cultured Homes of the Country, ever quick to embrace the best that the world can offer in furnishings, have accepted Chinese Rugs with enthusiasm, for their subtle color schemes executed in beautiful designs appeal to the eye as no other floor coverings can.

Added to Their Charm

is the assurance of long service, and when to the charm of design and color and the assurance of long service comes the knowledge that these rugs are priced less than other stores charge the temptation to buy is irresistible.

P. S.—When buying Oriental Rugs, consider well the reputation of the store selling them.

PERRIS SAYS WILSON DOMINATED IN PARIS

Declares League Can't Exist Without America, Which Has "Fantastic" Power.

URGES BOND WITH BRITAIN

Correspondent, Alton B. Parker, and Others Speak at Sulgrave Institute Luncheon.

Speaking at a luncheon given by the Sulgrave Institute yesterday, George Herbert Perris, war correspondent of The London Daily Chronicle and THE NEW YORK TIMES, declared that the idea of England's having six votes to America's one in the League of Nations was "absurd," as the power of the United States would be "so unlimited that without her there would be no League of Nations." In his address he advocated a closer relationship between the United States and England.

The luncheon, held at the Lawyers' Club and attended by many prominent persons, served as a welcome home for ex-Judge Alton B. Parker, and he, Dr. M. E. Aubrey of London, and Mr. Perris were the guests of the institute. Judge Parker has just returned from England, where he presented the Barnard statue of Abraham Lincoln in Manchester on behalf of the Sulgrave Institute. The presentation was made possible through a contribution of $50,000 by Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Taft.

Mr. Perris in his speech declared that the Government and the people of Great Britain were one for some League of Nations which would bind this country and England closer together, because the alternative would greatly increase armament and at the same time greatly lessen the security of peace for the world.

League Depends on America.

"It seems extraordinary," he said, "that when Englishmen are praying the United States to take more power we are suspected of trying to rob the United States. The idea of England's having six times as much power as the United States in the League of Nations is perfectly absurd. The League of Nations would be a fiasco and tumble like a house of cards without America.

"The votes are not the same as in a Parliament. If the people of this country had seen President Wilson in Paris they would have no doubt as to where the power lay. They would have seen a man who said, 'I want this' and 'I don't want that.' The voting consisted of his telling the others what he wanted—and getting it. The power of the United States today is fantastic, it is beyond description, and so offsets the tale of six to one that only a fiction writer could do it justice."

Mr. Perris said that he did not know what effect President Wilson's illness would have on the outcome of the League of Nations. He said the news of the President's condition was received with great pain by all Englishmen.

Dr. Aubrey in his address told of the bonds of friendship between the two countries. He said the people of England realized the war debt they owe America. They knew the critical situation on the battle line and that America had been asked to send 500,000 men.

"When America answered that we could have 5,000,000 it put a new heart in France and England and broke the heart of Germany," he continued.

John A. Stewart, Chairman of the Board of Governors of the institute, was toastmaster. After telling of the work at the Washington Manor House in England, he announced that the society would present a bust of George Washington, valued at $5,000, to St. Paul's Cathedral in London.

Barnard's statue of Lincoln, over which there has been much bitter controversy, was stoutly defended by Judge Parker, who called it a "shrine to which Americans on the continent would travel." It was said that Mr. Barnard's art was not energetically defended at the time of the controversy because President Wilson had written a letter to the Sulgrave Institute asking that no attention be paid to those who opposed Barnard's Lincoln.

Mr. Stewart explained that the President, who was Honorary Chairman of the institute, sent word that he was engaged in other tasks "so big that he did not desire to be drawn into a controversy on art," and asked that the matter be dropped. The speaker said that the matter "was going to come to the front," and added:

"I stand, as I always have stood, a proponent of Mr. Barnard and his art, and I feel that we may safely leave to the future the decision as to the artistic value of the statue of Lincoln."

Among those present at the luncheon were the Rev. Dr. William T. Manning, Oscar Straus, George W. Wickersham, James W. Gerard, Theodore E. Burton, Andrew B. Humphrey, Dr. Albert Shaw, Martin Vogel, Assistant United States Treasurer; Dr. Alexander C. Humphrey, President of Stevens Institute of Technology; ex-Governor Benjamin B. Odell, and Lord Swaithling.

HOLDS PERSIAN TREATY FLOUTS LEAGUE RULES

State Department's Protest Also Says the Shah's Subjects Were Opposed to It.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—The State Department has obtained no satisfaction in its correspondence with Great Britain in regard to the Anglo-Persian treaty, and there is no present indication that England contemplates either an abandonment of it or a modification of its provisions.

It was learned today that this Government, in objecting to it, takes the position that the treaty violates the principles underlying the League of Nations, and that, while the League is not yet organized, the acceptance of its principles by the powers at Paris morally obliged all the signatories to abstain from practices contrary to their letter.

The State Department also maintains that England concluded the treaty with the Persian Government against the will of the Persian people.

RARE FOSSILS FOR AMHERST

Remains of Giraffe-Camel and Other Oddities Found in Colorado.

AMHERST, Mass., Oct. 3.—A camel with the neck and legs of a giraffe ranged the plains of Colorado a million and a half years ago with the three-toed ancestor of the horse, the Amherst College geological expedition found in its researches of the past Summer. The expedition, which has just returned from Western Nebraska and Colorado, brought back what is considered a prize collection of fossil bones.

From incomplete but representative parts of the skeletons of the "giraffe-camel" the scientists have reconstructed in theory an animal which although a camel had the build of the modern giraffe, and was nearly its size. Ancestral members of the deer, rhinocerous, mastodan, and some rodent families were represented by other bones which came from sandy flood plain deposits, twenty miles to the north of the South Platte River.

Under the miocene sandstones, in prairie deposits of fine clay a million or more years older, were found other skeletons, including one of a tiny camel no larger than a half-grown sheep. At the Pawnee Buttes, a fossil egg similar in size and shape to that of the present-day hen was uncovered, indicating the existence in those days of a bird no part of the skeleton of which has ever been found.

DUTCH FEAR LACK OF LEAGUE PROTECTION

Sudden Change of Policy from Enthusiastic Support to Criticism.

UNWILLING TO DISARM

Newspapers Argue That the Great Powers Will Not Reduce Fleets and Armies.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Oct. 3.—Although the Netherlands up to the present time has been an energetic supporter of the League of Nations, there has been a sudden change of policy, and it is now asserted that there is danger in the League for Holland.

The Queen, in her speech at the opening of the States General, spoke of Holland's adherence to the League, but, in spite of this speech, semi-official and obviously inspired papers are now setting forth objections. The Rotterdamsche Courant, in an inspired article, asks who is to decide which party is the assailant if two countries go to war, and says that President Wilson does not appear to have given attention to such details. This means, the paper argues, that Holland will have no advantage from the League and she cannot think of disarmament. The advantage for little countries, says the paper, is in their facility for retiring from the League, and the big powers will use all their force to prevent the small nations from doing this, and thus ruining the principle of the institution.

Another danger, the paper says, is that big powers such as America, France, and Japan will never consent to reduce their fleets and armies. It argues that this is only possible if the Article IX. of the treaty is technically realizable, and even then that treaties such as the Franco-British-American treaty of June 28 form obstacles, as also the Dutch-Belgian convention which, it is hoped in Paris, will settle the questions of Limburg and the Scheldt.

Dangers are also seen in Article X., and the Courant says it will be necessary to take military precautions until the time when an international force is created and mutual action is assured. It concludes by saying that it is, however, necessary to enter into discussions with other countries about the League and not merely to deride it.

At the recent Dutch Congress for National Defense under the Chairmanship of ex-Minister of War Snyders, which was attended by the Ministers of War, Marine, Finance, and other departments and the Prince Consort, the general trend of the speeches was that the people had exaggerated hopes in the League and that it was nothing but a "confidence game." Ex-Minister Snyders, who still has influence in the country, said that the immediate danger had passed, but that dangerous optimism existed which might undermine the energy and defensive strength of the country.

Protests have been made because Holland retains such a large army, larger than Germany's, as some papers have pointed out. There is every evidence that Holland is very much on her guard and ready to defend immediately any infringement of her sovereign rights by Belgium. The relations between the Dutch and Belgians are extremely tense, and most Dutchmen are very willing to fight Belgium if necessary. There are many rumors about troops being sent to the frontier and munitions, gases, and planes being bought from Germany in preparation.

Dr. Kuyper, in the Standard, asserts that if Belgium is to have Ambassadors at Washington and London, Holland cannot afford to take lower rank.

FRENCH APPLAUD PLEA FOR RHENISH AUTONOMY

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Oct. 3.—That France has a well-defined intention of attempting colonization projects in the occupied sections of the Rhineland and tying it up closely with France commercially during the period of occupation was indicated by the cordial reception in the Chamber of Deputies of the declaration read yesterday by Maurice Barres.

In discussing the French policy toward the Rhineland he said:

"France has heard already and will respect the wishes of the country of the Valley of the Rhine, which, without separating itself from Germany, hopes for autonomy that will relieve it from Prussian domination. She is ready to aid with her moral influence and with all economic collaboration this evolution of the population of the Rhineland, of all parties and all classes, toward a régime which will insure their prosperity, the free expression of their sentiments, and the unhindered development of their genius.

"In return we ask that under no form shall Prussian influence re-establish itself on our borders. In particular, we ask that the German commission now installed at Coblenz be dismissed. The treaty provides for direct contact between the local authorities and the commanders of forces of occupation, and as for the relations between Germany and France the Ambassadors at Berlin and Paris seem best qualified to deal with them.

"Furthermore, we ask that all measures be taken to associate more intimately the Rhineland with France through commerce, through ways of communication, through co-ordination of railroad tariffs, through a program of public works, through banking and co-operative institutions, through the co-ordination of labor and social laws. To this end there should be created without any delay mixed commissions of Rhinelanders and Frenchmen."

It goes without saying that this sort of allied program in occupied Germany is not in accord with the ideas which representatives of the United States hold.

PAGET TAKES BRAZIL POST.

First English Ambassador to South American Republic Arrives.

RIO JANEIRO, Oct. 2.—Sir Ralph Spencer Paget, first British Ambassador to Brazil, arrived here today on board the British battle cruiser Renown.

Sir Ralph Spencer Paget leaves the post of Minister to Denmark to take the Ambassadorship to Brazil. His most notable service in the British diplomatic field was in the Balkans as Minister to Serbia just before the war and as expert on the Balkans under the British delegation at the Peace Conference. He was Assistant Undersecretary of State for Foreign Affairs from 1913 to 1916.

Lady Paget, who is a granddaughter of the late Mrs. Paran Stevens of New York, was engaged in Red Cross work in Serbia during the invasion and was taken prisoner by the Bulgarians, afterwards engaging in hospital work behind the Bulgarian lines until released.

Gov. Smith Dances on Sidewalk.

ALBANY, Oct. 3.—To the strains of "Tammany" Governor Smith danced tonight on the sidewalk in front of the Executive Manssion with his daughter, Miss Catherine Smith. The dance was in honor of ward candidates of the Democratic Party, who first serenaded the Governor and his family.

LOS ANGELES HEARS JOHNSON ON TREATY

DENOUNCES THE LEAGUE

Says United States Cannot Be Isolated While the Atlantic and Pacific Remain.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 3.—Addressing an audience of several hundred persons here today at a luncheon given by the Los Angeles League for Preservation of American Independence, United States Senator Hiram W. Johnson attacked the Peace Treaty and the League of Nations covenant, saying that the United States now stood at the cross roads of its destiny.

The people must decide, he exclaimed, whether the United States should enter into a partnership with "malodorous European and Asiatic diplomacy" or pursue the straight path of pure Americanism.

He spoke in the ballroom of a hotel where, two weeks ago, President Wilson defended the treaty and urged its early ratification.

"We saw the high principles of President Wilson discarded," said Senator Johnson. "We saw altruism gone and idealism buried, and we saw open covenants openly arrived at accomplished behind barred doors. We looked to see the removal of economic barriers; we looked to see national armaments reduced, but we never heard the semblance of any accomplishment. We saw arbitrary power have its will in the adjustment of world affairs, and we saw a defensive and offensive alliance brought about instead of a desired understanding for world peace."

He denounced the League of Nations as tantamount to conferring on foreign powers the exercise of America's participation in foreign affairs. The threat that the United States would be isolated if the Senate refused to ratify the Peace Treaty and the covenant was ridiculous, he contended. So long as the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans remained the United States would not in any sense remain isolated, "and President Wilson cannot dry up those oceans."

Tonight the Senator spoke to about 7,000 persons. His address, which followed the lines of his afternoon speech, being interrupted frequently by applause and cheering.

To persons who have addressed telegrams to him asking that he abandon his tour against ratification, Senator Johnson said: "Why ride the clouds like some of my friends and ask me to change my mind?"

Senator Johnson will leave Los Angeles tomorrow for San Francisco, and from there will continue his tour to Portland, Ore., and Seattle.

REED SPEAKS IN LINCOLN.

Missouri Senator Says League Will Breed Wars.

LINCOLN, Neb., Oct. 3.—Speaking here tonight in opposition to the League of Nations, Senator James A. Reed, Democrat, of Missouri, said the League would breed rather tahn prevent wars.

For the United States to become a party to the League, he asserted, would mean that Americans would "have to pour out their blood in controversies 9,000 miles from our shores." He described the Assembly as a powerful part of the League and declared that it elected four of the nine members of the League's Council.

As a member of the League the United States, Senator Reed asserted, would undertake to preserve against external attack the existing political independence of members of the League.

"This," he said, "would be an absolute contract, and the United States would have to defend against attack member of the League whether they are right or wrong. If the province of Shantung were given to Japan Shantung rebelled and China went to her aid the United States would be bound by contract to use her blood in the quarrels of those yellow men."

SEES LEAGUE VICTORY.

Houston Predicts That the Treaty Will Be Ratified.

More that 600 residents of White Plains attended the opening meeting of the White Plains Branch of the League of Nations Association last night in the auditorium of the High School Building, which was presided over by Mrs. Oliver Harriman. At the opening of the meeting the Chairman called for one minute's silent prayer for the President on his sick bed in Washington.

Herbert S. Houston, Vice President of Doubleday, Page & Co. and a member of the Executive Committee of the League to Enforce Peace, said that the tide of opinion had surely turned and was now flowing with irresistible strength toward the ratification of the treaty.

"The final victory of the war," he continued, "is to be the speedy establishment of the League of Nations. The Senators are seeing a light on the horizon. It is the flaming opinion of the country in behalf of the Peace Treaty with the League of Nations."

Government to begin negotiations with the allied and associated Governments for additional steps to make the disarmament of Germany more effective, was under discussion. Premier Clemenceau earlier obtained a vote of confidence on his refusal to undertake such negotiations before the ratification of the Peace Treaty, and the commission to which the subject had been referred prepared a substitute resolution to conform to the desires of the Premier and the Government.

Deputy Chaumet, Bordeaux representative in the Chamber, has introduced a motion inviting the Government to propose to all nations the creation of an independent, permanent juridical body, having as its purpose to guarantee the independence and sovereignty of nations and the execution of treaties. The motion proposes that this new variant on the League of Nations should have at its disposal for the above purpose an international force, the disarmament of all individual nations having been assured.

Opponents of the ratification of the treaty who boasted openly in the Chamber for weeks that they were able to line up 100 votes against the pact, showed keen disappointment when only fifty-three were polled. Several Deputies who were thought certain to be against the treaty faltered at the last moment and declined to assume the responsibility on the eve of the coming elections. Defections in the Socialist Party alone amounted to thirty-three, including Albert Thomas, the Labor leader.

HITCHCOCK LEADER IN TREATY FIGHT

ervation must substantially be an amendment.

Mr. McCumber, in telling of the conference, left the impression very clearly that Mr. Taft saw a need for strong reservations, not only as a means of getting the votes in the Senate to insure ratification of the treaty, but also because the treaty required them if American interests were to be adequately guarded.

Wants Interpretative Plan.

No other statement than that obtained from Senator McCumber in regard to the Taft draft of Article X. is available, but some of those who talked with Mr. Taft got the impression that he was opposed to any amendment or reservation that would cause the resubmission of the treaty to the Peace Conference or to the Governments of the signatory nations. This understanding is at variance with the statements made by Senator McCumber, but it is pointed out that Mr. Taft was specific in declaring to those with whom he discussed the covenant that the changes he would make in that document would be merely interpretative.

To a question as to his attitude toward the covenant, the former President said that he sided with the mild reservationists. When he was asked what he would mean by mild reservations, he replied that he meant reservations that would not cause the resubmission of the treaty to the signatories. For this reason doubt is expressed that Mr. Taft desires to alter Article X. through an interpretative reservation in a way that would reopen the treaty negotiations.

Thomas Attacks Amendment.

In the discussion of the treaty in the Senate, Senator Thomas took up the Johnson amendment for equalization of the voting strength of the United States and the British Empire in the League Assembly.

"The proposed amendment," said Senator Thomas, "does not appear to me to accomplish the purpose its author seeks to reach. Indeed, I believe that instead of removing the British voting preponderance, the amendment would confirm it."

Answering intimations that British imperial statesmen desired each self-governing dominion to have a separate vote in the Assembly as a means of providing the British Empire with the means of controlling League action when it desired, Senator Thomas said:

"Great Britain did not approve the granting of separate votes to her dependencies. The separate vote was granted only because of the insistence of the dependencies themselves. They had sent men to the war and had spent vast sums. They had made great sacrifices, and they demanded to be recognized before the world as self-governing, distinct, and sovereign over their own affairs. They appealed to the Peace Conference, and England finally withdrew her opposition."

The Senator said the fear that the British dominions could be coerced by the mother country into voting against the United States was ill-founded.

"The institutions of the United States harmonize so with those of Canada, Australia, and New Zealand," he said, "that the representatives of those countries in the Assembly will more frequently than not be found voting with the United States."

Senator Lenroot briefly took up the divergent constructions placed upon Article X. of the League covenant by Senators Walsh of Montana and Wolcott of Delaware, leading Democrats, in recent speeches. He said that Senator Wolcott construed Article X. as putting no obligation whatsoever upon the United States to send armed forces to the defense of the territory or sovereignty of any member of the League, while Senator Walsh found in the article a duty imposed on this nation to prevent, by whatever means might prove most effective, the development of a threat of aggression.

Mr. Lenroot then quoted from President Wilson's Des Moines speech, in which Mr. Wilson said that some Senators evidently had not read the covenant, or if they had, they could not understand plain English.

"It is not for me to say," commented Senator Lenroot, "which of these distinguished lawyers and Senators the President meant, but it is clear the President thinks one of them ought to be in the kindergarten class. The reservation President Wilson denounced at Salt Lake City would give Article X. the construction Senator Wolcott puts upon it, so why should that Senator then object to the reservation?"

McCumber Says Public Is Misled.

Senator McCumber, in giving notice that on Monday he would discuss the Johnson amendment, replied briefly to what he termed misleading statements being given to the public regarding the voting strength of the British Empire. Mr. McCumber said:

"It is alleged and is understood generally by the country that the council or the assembly has the power to decide disputes between nations, and that in such decisions Great Britain would control six votes and the United States but one. These claims are without any foundation whatever, because:

"First, neither the council nor the assembly is a board of arbitration.

"Second, neither of them decides international disputes at all.

"Third, the only jurisdiction which either the council or the assembly can have over a dispute between nations is the right to investigate and report what the true facts are concerning the dispute and make recommendations in regard thereto.

"Fourth, as neither Canada nor any other British dominion or possession has a separate membership in the council, of course, neither could have a vote in the council.

"Fifth, if the investigation of the facts concerning the dispute should be transferred to the assembly, Canada, Australia, and other British dominions would still have no vote if either the British Empire or any of its constituent parts was a party to the dispute, inasmuch as a dispute with a part is necessarily a dispute with the whole and a dispute with the dominant nation is necessarily a dispute with all its parts.

"Sixth, if the dispute were between nations entirely outside the British Empire and the case were referred to the assembly, then these self-governing dominions mentioned could vote, not in settlement of the dispute, but only on the question of what are the true facts concerning the dispute.

"Seventh, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, and South Africa are self-governing nations, governed solely by their own separate parliaments. And on these investigations of facts and recommendations, the only questions on which the representatives of these dominions could pass, their votes would in no way be subject to the control of Great Britain."

Senator Jones of Washington sharply criticised President Wilson's personal methods of conducting the treaty fight in a speech in which he expressed sympathy with what the President was trying to accomplish in the way of world peace. Mr. Wilson had gone about it in the wrong way, Senator Jones said, and therefore was "due for a rude awakening."

Recalling the President's application of the term "willful men" to a little group of Senators, Mr. Jones said:

"The number has multiplied many fold and today the terms 'pigmy,' 'lovers of war,' 'haters of truth,' and 'contemptible quitters' arouse only distrust and derision. It may bring a cheer from the thoughtless crowd, but it shocks and repels the thoughtful citizen.

"The President assumes that when he speaks all wisdom is exhausted and further effort is useless. The people are willing to concede that he is a learned man, that he is a wise man, that he is a great man, but they are beginning to resent the assumption that he knows everything, past, present and future, that he is the sole interpreter of their will, and that his judgments should be accepted by all without question."

While speaking for democracy, Mr. Jones said, the President practiced an autocracy hardly paralleled in the annals of history. He declared that Mr. Wilson delayed peace by his demand for a League of Nations, and used industrial chaos and business unrest as a club to force acquiescence in his desires. His course allowed other nations to fulfill their covetous desires, Senator Jones said, while the President got only "a shadow of his idealistic dream."

The President's effort to "coerce" the Senate into ratification of the treaty unchanged "embodies the spirit of the mob and justifies lawlessness," the Senator continued. "It is a more dangerous attack upon democracy and the integrity of this republic than any armed attack could be. I regret to say it, but the President, by word and deed, has done more to undermine orderly, peaceful representative government than any other human agency.

"The time has come for our people and this nation to get back to those principles of government upon which the republic rests, but we cannot do it so long as the acts and words of those in highest position can be used to justify those who seek to overthrow law, order and liberty."

Predicting that the treaty would fail unless reservations were adopted, Senator Jones said that the whole controversy could have been avoided had the President left the League of Nations covenant out of the treaty. He asserted that it did not belong in the peace settlement.

Mr. Jones said he would vote for the Johnson amendment because the President had made it impossible to "reduce the British Empire to our level." He would also support reservations on the various questions which the treaty left in doubt.

The Senate took a week-end recess. Next week the reading of the treaty is to be resumed, with the Shantung amendment likely to come up for discussion and action.

HITCHCOCK SEES TREATY GAIN

Says Majority Opposes Resubmitting It to the Powers.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—Senator Hitchcock, leader of the Senate forces which seek the ratification of the Peace Treaty and covenant with change, declared in a statement issued tonight, through the Washington Bureau of the League to Enforce Peace, that the developments of the last week in the Senate have been particularly satisfactory to those who want the treaty ratified without amendments or reservations. The statement follows:

"The developments of the past week in the fight to ratify the treaty have been particularly favorable and satisfactory. As I interpret the vote yesterday on thirty-six amendments proposed by the Foreign Relations Committee, a very substantial majority of the Senate stands opposed to any textual amendment of the treaty. This opposition is not based altogether on the character of the amendments, but is based on a determination not to do anything to the treaty which would result in sending it back.

"The majority of the Senate appreciates the fact that if the treaty is amended the amendment must be submitted not only to the nations associated with us in the war but to Germany. Germany would not accept any amendments because Germany would like to see us left out of the treaty settlement. The nations associated with us would accept no amendments because they would endanger their contract with Germany.

"The result would be a failure on our part to participate in the treaty. That would make it necessary for us to have an unconditional peace with Germany or to negotiate a peace with Germany. In either case we would lose the enormous advantages in trade, reparations and shipping which were exacted from Germany in the treaty, and which those nations which ratify the treaty will enjoy.

"I think the other amendments will be beaten when they are reached, and then the contest will come over reservations on conditions which some Senators want to put in the resolution of ratification.

"I have great hopes that enough Senators who have opposed amendments will realize that a reservation, if it changes the terms of the treaty in any respect, is just as objectionable as an amendment and that for that reason no reservations will be adopted which will endanger the treaty.

"I am very sorry to say that in addition to this good news about the treaty we have some very bad news. In this I refer to the serious illness of the President. It is a terrible thing for the United States, and I believe for the other nations, that he should at this time be stretched upon a sick bed. Unquestionably he is exhausted because of his enormous labors in the cause of peace. He sacrificed his health and his strength in a great cause."

In a telegram to the Washington bureau of the League to Enforce Peace, dated Los Angeles, Marshall Stimson, a prominent lawyer and director of the league for Southern California, says that Los Angeles is "aflame with progressive Republican opposition to Senator Johnson's position." Senator Johnson is now making speeches in California against the ratification of the Peace Treaty. The telegram from Mr. Stimson follows:

"Immediately following the announcement by the Johnson Committee of Vice Presidents for Senator Johnson's meeting at Los Angeles, twenty-four prominent Republicans, former supporters of Hiram Johnson, issued a statement repudiating the action of the committee in using their names. Among the signers of the statement are: Captain Walter Brinkop, head of the American Legion here; Judges Hewitt and Kraig, Mrs. Simons, Miss Kenney, Mrs. R. W. Richardson, Mrs. Lewis and Miss Mary Smith, leading clubwomen. The Directors of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce passed resolutions unanimously indorsing the ratification of the League of Nations. Los Angeles is aflame with progressive Republican opposition to Senator Johnson's position."

AUSTRIA TO TAKE UP TREATY.

First Business to Come Before Assembly Meeting Oct. 14.

VIENNA, Oct. 2, (Associated Press.)—Ratification of the Peace Treaty between Austria and the allied and associated powers will be the first business submitted to the Austrian National Assembly when it comes together Oct. 14, according to the present understanding.

After that the financial problem will be attacked. In an address to a deputation of peasants who called to ask assurances that the Government would not declare a state of national bankruptcy, Chancellor Renner said that the whole system of State finances was rotten at many points, and that only great energy and drastic reforms would prevent bankruptcy.

The Government's plan for coping with the financial situation is held secret, but according to newspapers one feature will be a grant to subscribers to foreign and internal Government loan of exemptions from the compulsory contribution which it is proposed to impose upon all wealth.

GUATEMALA RATIFIES.

Proposal Made to Send a Delegate to Thank Wilson.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—The State Department was informed today that the Legislative Assembly of Guatemala ratified the treaty with Germany on Wednesday.

Guatemalan press reports received by the department assert that a bill has been introduced in the Assembly proposing that the republic voice "its eternal gratitude to Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States." Should the bill be approved, a committee of Deputies will visit Washington to convey this message personally to President Wilson.

Police Detain Man Who Sought Loan on It—Bronx Thief Uses Ropes.

A clerk in the offices of Greer, Crane & Webb, brokers at 74 Broadway, yesterday handed to an office boy an envelope containing a certificate for 100 shares of American Tobacco stock with instructions to deliver it to a customer immediately. A few minutes later the boy returned to the office, apparently having completed his errand.

About an hour later the client telephoned, asking that his certificate be sent to him. After the client had denied that any messenger had delivered the certificate, valued at $35,000, the brokers called their messenger boy and questioned him about the fulfillment of his mission. The boy said that he had passed it on to a second messenger boy who said that he would deliver it.

Clerks in the office were instructed to find the second boy. He was not easily found, but he readily admitted that, having more pressing affairs of his own to attend to, he had passed the certificate on to a third obliging messenger boy. This messenger could not be found by clerks or by the police, who said they would search until they found him.

The brokers sent out the number and description of the paper on the tickers. Late in the afternoon a man walked into the office of Kardos & Co., brokers, Exchange Place, and sought to borrow $5,000 on the certificate, the value of which was $35,000. A clerk there noticed that the number and description fitted that of the missing certificate and, pretending to be trying to borrow a larger sum for the visitor, telephoned the police. Upon returning, the clerk opened a long discussion with the visitor about the financial features of the Peace Treaty, and they were still at it when two other "brokers" joined in.

The other "brokers" were detectives from Police Headquarters, who decided to hold the man until they finished their investigation. He said "a man standing in front of the Equitable Building at 120 Broadway" had passed the certificate to him. Upon visiting that building they detained a man who fitted the description given by the caller at the offices of Kardos & Co. They also detained a man who was talking to him. The police had not succeeded late last night in finding the missing messenger boy or in tracing the certificate through the series of hands through which it was believed to have passed.

Burglars Blow Safe Open.

The offices of Lutz & Sheinkman, lithographers, at 2 Duane Street, were visited by burglars on Thursday night. The burglars entered the building through a basement window and, going to the tenth floor, battered down the door of the office. Then they attached an electric drill to a lamp socket and bored a hole through the outer door of the safe, in which they inserted a charge of nitroglycerine. Plaster was torn from the walls and furniture was overturned by the force of the explosion. The inner door of the safe was opened with a jimmy. About $800 in bonds and two small articles of jewelry were found in the safe. Until a few days ago the same had contained $25,000 worth of bonds.

Members of the Citizens' Vigilance Committee organized by persons who live in apartments in West 146th Street on Thursday night arrested a man who described himself as William Tierney of 2,707 Eighth Avenue. He was held for the Grand Jury by Magistrate Schwab in the Washington Heights Police Court.

Citizens who were patrolling the streets during the night heard the noise of breaking glass, apparently in a house at 410 West 146th Street, and notified the police of the West 152d Street station.

Sergeant Knowles commandeered an automobile and on his way to the apartment house picked up six additional policemen. Arriving at the house, he placed a cordon of police around the building and, with a patrolman, went to the roof of the house at 146th Street and Convent Avenue, which is two floors higher than the surrounding buildings.

Rope Used by Thief.

An investigation of the roof disclosed a rope dangling from the chimney to the roof of the adjoining house. Upon arriving on the roof of the house surrounded by the police they discovered a broken skylight and a rope dangling into the building.

A man was found crouching on the top floor of the building. Sergeant Knowles drew his revolver and commanded the man not to move.

Knowles and the patrolman then descended by the rope to the floor below, where, according to the police, they found several bathrobes containing jewelry, silverware, and furs.

Negro Burglars in Bath Beach.

Several attempted burglaries by persons believed by the police to have been negroes were reported in the Bath Beach section of Brooklyn on Thursday night. Policeman James Long of the Bath Beach station arrested one negro, who was held in $1,000 bail on a charge of burglary. Mrs. Ida Topp of 2,213 Bath Beach Avenue identified the negro as the man who had broken into her house and who had fled when she screamed.

Another complaint was made by Solomon Land of 1,744 Sixty-third Street, who reported that his cousin, Margaret Land, was awakened by a negro in her room. She struggled with the man, and the negro escaped when the household was aroused. Charles Lipschitz of 186 Bay Thirty-first Street said that a negro tried to enter his home through a side window. The noise awakened him, and when he flashed on a light the negro fled.

BANDITS KILL BARTENDER.

Holdup Men Escape After Shooting—Driver of Car Is Held.

During an attempt by two young and well dressed men to hold up the saloon of William Heddendorf, at 175th Street and Webster Avenue, early this morning Louis Siegold, a bartender, was shot twice by one of the bandits. He died on the way to Fordham Hospital. The pair escaped, but the chauffeur of a car into which they climbed after the shooting was arrested and locked up in the Tremont station.

There were three men in front of the bar when the pair entered. They drew revolvers almost as soon as the door swung behind them. Covering the three in front of the bar, they backed them into a rear room and told them to stay there. Then one of them went behind the bar and was at the cash register when Siegold interfered. He jumped for the man at the cash drawer, but a bullet stopped him. A second followed the first and as he collapsed the bandits turned and ran from the place.

Both of the men ran to the automobile, which was drawn up near the saloon. They leaped in, but instead of starting off the engine stalled. The pair jumped out and escaped by running.

The chauffeur made no attempt to escape. He was in his seat when the police came. He was arrested and taken to the station, where he was questioned by Assistant District Attorney Albert Cohen. He denied knowledge of the robbers, and said that he had been hired to drive them to the saloon, which he did not know was to be robbed. He told the police he was William Dator, of 149th Street and Bergen Avenue.

Siegold was 38 years old and lived at Second Street, North Pelham.

STRAY SHOT HITS DETECTIVE

Policeman Wounds Comrade Who Ran to His Aid During Chase.

Policeman William Kiel, attached to the Warrant Squad, was at Seventh Avenue and Forty-eighth Street early this morning when he caught sight of George Graham, a chauffeur, for whom he had a warrant charging non-support. Graham saw him about the same time that the policeman spied him and started for his taxicab. A lighter man and a better runner than Kiel, he got there first, jumped in, and started away at an unlawful rate of speed. Kiel, seeing that his man was getting away, fired three shots in an attempt to puncture the taxicab's tire.

The sound of the shots brought a crowd from the restaurants and cross streets. Among those who ran up were Detectives James E. Smith and Joseph Wey. They took in the trouble at a glance and started in pursuit of the fleeing chauffeur. Smith took two steps forward and suddenly clasped his hands to his stomach. "I have been shot," he said to his partner, and collapsed. He had been struck by one of the bullets fired by Kiel. Wey called a taxicab and ordered the wounded detective to Polyclinic Hospital. There it was found that he was seriously wounded, and after being attended by a physician from Bellevue Hospital was rushed there.

TOWNLEY SEES PLOT TO SHUT FARGO BANK

Non-Partisan League Says That "Political Purposes" Prompted Proceeding.

DENIES LOANS ARE ILLEGAL

Bank Is Expected to Take Legal Action Against Officials on Conspiracy Charge.

Special to The New York Times.

FARGO, N. D., Oct. 3.—A. C. Townley and several other officers of the Non-Partisan League are here today, it was said at the local offices, and probably will assist in legal action said to be contemplated by officers of the Scandinavian-American Bank, which was closed yesterday, against State officials. Oliver S. Morris of the Non-Partisan League issued a long statement, charging that the closing of the bank was due to politics, and declaring that proceedings will be started on the ground of "conspiracy to wreck the bank for political purposes."

It was expected, he said, that the bank would be reopened in a week or ten days.

In his statement Mr. Morris says:

"The Scandinavian-American Bank is a farmers' bank, doing a large and profitable business. It is one of the largest banks in North Dakota and has been meeting all its obligations in the course of regular business. But Attorney General William Langer and Secretary of State Hall constitute a majority of the Banking Board of North Dakota. These men are enemies of the Non-Partisan League. They formed the plot to close the Scandinavian-American Bank some weeks ago.

"According to the plan they mapped out, they sent State Bank Examiner O. E. Loftus to Florida, supposedly to investigate a company which desired to sell stock in North Dakota. In his absence they obtained an order from Loftus's office permitting one of the Deputy Bank Examiners to investigate a trust company at Fargo. They had the Deputy Bank Examiner, an assistant to Mr. Langer, make a hurried examination and draw up a report.

"The report alleged that the bank was making loans to individual borrowers in excess of the limit allowed by law. The character of the paper and security in the bank was not questioned. Langer and Hall proceeded to railroad through the Banking Board an order closing the bank and appointing a temporary receiver, and to start proceedings to cancel the bank's charter.

"The league has been doing a large part of its business through this bank, and the bank has made large loans to the league and its subsidiary organizations, all secured, however, by collateral double in value to the loans. Officers of the bank state that they expect to start proceedings against State officials on the ground of conspiracy to wreck the bank for political purposes."

Mrs. Emma Clayton, the employe of the Non-Partisan League and the Consumers' United Stores Company who is said to have had charge of the collateral of these organizations for loans advanced by the Scandinavian American Bank of Fargo, which was closed yesterday, was ordered today by P. E. Halldorsen, temporary receiver, to surrender all authority over such collateral to him as receiver.

The State Banking Board today outlawed for collateral purposes the post-dated checks which were the basis of the loans to the league.

Virtually all of the collateral to the loans was in the form of post-dated checks. These checks are accepted by the Non-Partisan League from farmers in payment of membership dues. When an organizer goes to a farmer and asks that he become a member of the league, the farmer's plea that he has no ready cash with which to pay dues is met with the suggestion that he post date his check. Thus the organizer receives checks which are dater usually between Oct. 1 and Dec. 1, so that they come due when the farmer harvests his crop and has ready money. These post-dated checks then were hypothecated by the Non-Partisan League as collateral for loans, and it is this policy that the State Banking Board said today must be abandoned as unlawful. The post-dated checks are held to have no value in law or in fact.

Other North Dakota banks, in addition to the Fargo Bank, which was closed yesterday, have been giving heavy loans to the Non-Partisan League and its subsidiary corporations on the same basis. Under the Banking Board's order these banks will be required to eliminate such collateral, and they will be required to call on the Non-Partisan League for collateral which will meet the State's test, or the league will be required to return the loans.

YOUTH OF 19 ENDS HIS LIFE.

Mexican Boy Who Had Studied Philosophy Dies by Gas.

Penniless and despondent over his failure to receive a check from his uncle in Mexico, Carlox Paddilo, 19 years old, yesterday went to the furnished room he occupied at 44 Greene Place, Brooklyn, stuffed the door and window cracks, and turned on the gas. Dr. Leve, from the Holy Family Hospital, who answered a call after the finding of the body, said the young man had been dead for some time.

On a dresser in the room not far from where the body lay upon the bed was a note, unaddressed. It read:

"Due to my present deplorable condition, and embittered by seeing before me many days of deep bitterness, I am compelled to commit suicide. Please give this little item as little publicity as possible, as I do not want my relatives in Mexico to hear of my end at my own hands."

Once every six months the lad received from a wealthy uncle in Mexico a check for $100. He spent most of this money buying books, and said many times that he had but one ambition, and that was to be a philosopher.

ACCUSED OF MAIL FRAUDS.

Six Seattle Men Indicted in Mine Stock Sale Involving $400,000.

Six residents of Seattle, Wash., were indicted by the Federal Grand Jury yesterday on charges of having used the mails to defraud and of conspiracy. The six are George Francis Rowe, D. K. McDonald, George E. Snyder, W. Bertram Hancock, Patrick J. Gearon, and Christian Tjosevig.

Prosecutor George Winship Taylor, who gathered the evidence on which the indictment was found, said that the defendants had sold worthless stock, mainly to the people of New York and New England, and received for it about $400,000. The alleged plan of the accused men was the usual one consisting of a widespread advertising campaign containing misrepresentations.

Mr. Taylor said that the defendants had organized the Josevig-Kennecott Copper Company in the State of Washington and through a firm of brokers here had disposed of 500,000 shares of the stock in three weeks. Among the alleged misrepresentations of the accused were statements to the effect that they own twenty-two mining claims in Alaska, that 800 tons of copper ore had been taken out which contained $19.20 in silver to the ton, and that the mine was superior to the famous Kennecott mines.

It was alleged in the advertisements that geological surveys of the company's property had been made by experts, and alleged extracts from these reports were used in disposing of the stock.

The defendant Snyder, hearing that the Grand Jury was investigating the company, came here voluntarily to testify, but before he appeared the investigation was completed. Snyder was held in $3,000 bail by Federal Judge Sheppard. It was said that the other defendants are somewhere in the Northwest.

BRITISH STRIKERS REJECT ALL OFFERS

sides of a case, but he felt it right to tell the deputation that in his opinion the railway men had a very poor case. The members of the deputation expressed themselves as satisfied.

Strikers Stand Firm.

LONDON, Oct. 4, (Associated Press.)—After seven days the railroad strike situation last night became the gravest in the history of any labor crisis of the British Empire in the present generation. All efforts of the Transport Workers' Federation to find a bridge to enable a renewal of negotiations between the Government and the National Union of Railwaymen failed.

The Government's proposal for a seven days' truce to enable the railwaymen to return to work and permit the resumption of negotiations on the disputed points, coupled with the offer of the Government to resort to arbitration in the event of failure to reach an agreement, has been rejected by the railwaymen's union, and the whole possibility of mediation for the moment seems to have completely collapsed.

The officers of the executive body of the National Union of Railwaymen have separated for the purpose of engaging in campaign meetings throughout the country.

A congress embracing all the trade unions of the United Kingdom has been called to convene Tuesday for the purpose of discussing the situation.

The Premier's Statement.

The statement issued from the Premier's office follows:

"A series of meetings with the Prime Minister and Mr. Bonar Law, which commenced Wednesday last at the instance of a deputation of trade unionists headed by Mr. Gosling, President of the Transport Workers' Federation, came to an end this afternoon.

"Thursday the Government proposed as a basis for the continuance of the negotiations:

"First. That on the strikers returning to work the negotiations shall be resumed where they were broken off last Friday.

"Second. That in accordance with the Premier's offer of Friday, the Government will guarantee there shall be no reduction in wages until March 31, and the Government undertakes that at any time after the 31st of December they will be ready to discuss, in view of the circumstances then existing, the possible extension of that date.

"Third. That the Government is prepared to discuss with the railway men any unfairness or hardship affecting any particular grade of workmen through the operation of the scheme of standardization already put forward by the Government, and to consider any anomaly as between the various grades in the application of the percentage of increases proposed in each grade.

"Fourth. In the event of failure to agree upon any question arising out of the matter mentioned in Paragraph 3, the point of difference shall be referred to arbitration.

"The National Union of Railwaymen declined to accept these terms.

"At the meeting this morning the Premier proposed that the National Union of Railwaymen should agree to a truce of the strike for a limited period of a few days in order that the negotiations might be resumed with a view to reaching a settlement.

"The Premier offered, if the men returned to work on this basis, to pay arrears in wages. The National Union of Railwaymen agreed to the suggested truce, but only on conditions that the Government was prepared to make the basis of standardization and operation equally on the disputed grades as on the grades already settled. The Government rejected this proposal, because it already had undertaken to settle the disputed grades on their merits, as asked by the National Union of Railwaymen, and because the present proposal was only a repetition of one already declined.

"The Premier then made counterproposals, that the Government was prepared to agree to a truce of seven days in order to discuss, first, the period of the standardization of wages, and, second, that the Government was prepared to discuss with the railwaymen any unfairness or hardship affecting any particular grade of workmen, as set forth in Clause 3 of the above; and it similarly offered to arbitrate any disputed point.

"He proposed also that if, at the end of five days, after a full resumption of work, the National Union of Railwaymen arrive at a conclusion that the negotiations cannot be brought to a satisfactory issue they will give forty-eight hours' notice before any cessation of work occurs. If the negotiations again are broken off the men agree to hand over all plants in good working order and to run all trains to their destinations. The men agree to work harmoniously with railway servants who have remained at or who have returned to work. The railway executive agrees to undertake that there will be no victimization of strikers.

"This proposal was rejected by the National Union of Railwaymen, and the conference terminated."

Premier's Impassioned Plea.

The Premier in the course of a conference yesterday made an impassioned appeal to the railwaymen to accept the offer of arbitration, and it is reported that some delegates of the transport strikers were in favor of accepting the offer.

Robert Williams, General Secretary of the Transport Workers' Union, in a statement given to the press last night referred to the breakdown in negotiations today as "lamentable," announcing that a congress of trade unions had been convened for Tuesday to "engage in any form of moral and sympathetic support of the railwaymen in the struggle they are waging for trades unionism."

In the meantime, Mr. Williams added, the delegates who had been consulting with Premier Lloyd George from day to day would be made officers of the Transport Workers' Federation in order to formulate proposals they were convinced would prove acceptable to the entire trades union movement of the kingdom.

In addition to the delegation of the Transport Workers' Federation, which includes Arthur Henderson and John R. Clynes, Mr. Williams asserted, these new officers would include Frank Hodges, G. H. Stuart Bunning, Secretary of the Postmen's Federation, and Charles W. Bowerman, Secretary of the Trades Union Congress.

The view taken in Government circles is that the position is extremely grave, and all necessary steps are being taken by the Government to meet the new situation.

On leaving the conference in Downing Street all the delegates were grave and appeared to believe there was little possibility of a further conference with the Government.

President Cramp of the National Union of Railway Men expressed the conviction that the trainmen should have absolutely rejected the Government's offer.

Frank Hodges of the Miners' Union said tonight that the railroad strike had brought about the unemployment of more than half a million miners.

The actual situation on the railroads showed a further great improvement yesterday, all of London's underground railways working. The food supply service, although somewhat restricted, continues good.

Saw "Dangers of Revolution."

Secretary Thomas talked with The Associated Press representative yesterday afternoon with reference to the Downing Street conference on Thursday that had failed to result in an agreement.

"The Government demanded unconditional surrender, which was impossible," he said. "The railway men are more solid today than ever in their determination to see it through. Inspired tales that they are returning to work are untrue. I refuse absolutely aid from other unions. I have no excuse for the swiftness of the strike call, and did everything possible to avert it.

"I could have dodged responsibility for the strike by resigning, but, knowing the justice of the men's cause, such a withdrawal would have been rank desertion.

"I was profoundly satisfied that the strike held dangers of revolution, and I believed that I was the only one who could avert this. I am not allowing myself to be drawn into the debate, because I am determined to confine the issue to the sole cause of the strike, namely, the question of wages.

"The fact that there have been no disorders is the best tribute to my efforts and the best answer to the charges that subversive interests are responsible for the trike. Because of a lack of facilities the haulage of coal in the country will be at a complete standstill before another week."

Strikers' Message to America.

Later Mr. Thomas called in the representatives of American newspapers, and after declaring that the railway men had not had fair treatment from the British press, handed the correspondents the following statement, entitled "A Message to America":

"I am pleased to have the opportunity of sending a message to the American people, many of whom fought with members of my union in the struggle when Prussian militarism finally was crushed. I know, both from Americans here and from what I learned during my brief visit to your country last Spring, that your people are watching this industrial struggle with the keenest interest, not unmingled with dismay. I suppose it is partly because some of them see that same sinister spirit which nearly wrecked the settlement of the world after the war now playing its part in disrupting the industrial life of Great Britain.

"Speaking as the Chairman of the Parliamentary Committee of the Trades Union Congress, representing over 5,000,000 organized workers and their families—more than half the workers of Great Britain—I can tell you that the same spirit is operating now as operated in the invasion of Russia and in the refusal of her liberties to Ireland. I mention this not because this is in any way a political strike, or anything but a movement to resist a reduction in wages, but because the same camarilla that already has outraged the sense of justice of British democracy in these matters is behind this attempt to crush trades unionism and bring down wages.

"United States employers all tell me that, according to American standards, the average British worker is living under sweated conditions. Out of sweated conditions come servility. Servility must be avoided in this nation at all costs. It is not the men who are going back; it is the country that is going back.

"The wheels of production are rolling slowly. Another week and the lack of coal will further lessen the diminished activities. I tell you this with a heavy heart. Those Cabinet influences which made no effort for peace, but against those who barred the way when I was striving to find means for further negotiations to avert the calamity—they must bear the responsibility."

Many telegrams were received at the local headquarters of the National Union from provincial branches yesterday urging that the Premier's condition of a resumption of work pending negotiations be accepted, but it was said by leaders of the organization that the Government's order withholding the men's pay for the last day they worked had precluded resumption.

Why Government Withheld Wages.

Responsibility for withholding the men's wages is assumed by the Government in a statement issued from Downing Street Thursday night. It reads as follows:

"The members of the National Union of Railwaymen broke their contracts and stopped work without notice in complete disregard of the effect their action would have on the persons and property of ordinary citizens in their charge. They inflicted damage on innumerable people, left food upon which the public depended for subsistence to go to waste, put vast numbers to great expense by leaving them stranded without conveyances and inflicted great losses upon many by preventing them from reaching destinations. The damages to which they are liable in law are vastly greater than the amount now being withheld.

"If an early resumption of work occurs, different considerations may arise. In the meantime, the country is still subjected to unexampled injury by the railwaymen's action, and, in these circumstances, the Government would not be justified in handing over to the strikers a sum which would be used for prolonging a struggle undertaken without any consideration for the welfare of the public and which is endangering the whole life of the nation."

Bus Drivers Are Balloting.

The Union of Vehicle Workers, who operate the buses and other vehicular traffic in London, are balloting to determine whether to strike in sympathy with the railroad men. The result will be known Saturday night.

The Ministry of Labor has in the meantime posted an urgent call for the services of volunteer bus drivers.

The Home Office has issued an appeal for the formation throughout the country of "citizen guards" to assist the police and special constables in protecting peaceful citizens and for the maintenance of supplies of food and other necessaries of life.

BALMORAL, Oct. 3.—King George left here today for London in a motor car, using the automobile on account of the interruption of railroad traffic.

THOMAS FEELS MISSION AS SAVIOR OF SOCIETY

Sees Peril of British Revolution, and Himself Alone Able to Stop It.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—J. H. Thomas, Secretary of the National Union of Railway Men, discussing the strike today with THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent, revealed, perhaps unconsciously, his view of his own position and represented himself as the savior of the social order. England, he asserted, was on the verge of a revolution, and he alone could stem the torrent.

"I am running this strike alone," he said. "I am profoundly convinced that the country is in imminent danger of revolution, and I am the only man who can stop it."

Mr. Thomas showed plainly the strain of the last week. He was pale, worn, and nervous, and quick in his movements. He kept emphasizing his sense of responsibility, and asserted that he had not lost his constitutional position.

"I hope to limit the issue," he said, "and I admit that in certain circumstances the State is justified in saying that no part of the community can dictate to it, but in this case the State is in the position of employer, and the railroad men are under its control.

"I have steadily refused assistance from other unions, though at their conference last night they voted unanimously to support us to the uttermost. But I love my country and want to prevent revolution."

Mr. Thomas then defended himself for taking the leadership of the strike he had tried to prevent, on the ground that by so doing he had hoped to keep it on constitutional lines. He went on:

"Wrong as I believe the Government to be, I knew there would be an attempt to say that a section of the community had beaten the Government, and that would be a bad thing. Therefore I submitted yesterday an entirely new formula, which would make it appear that neither side had been beaten. I don't want it to appear that the Government is beaten; but, by God! the men are not going to be defeated!"

RADICAL ATTACK ON PREMIER.

Nation and New Statesman Accuse Him of Trying to Smash Unions.

LONDON, Saturday, Oct. 4.—An editorial in The Nation, written before last night's developments in the strike situation, while condemning what is termed the railway men's precipitate action, says:

"It will be civil war where there can be no victory in this war. Whoever wins it, it must mean that the one stable and fully active industrial community remaining in Europe has become involved in the continental bankruptcy and ruin.

"The heedless and violent will learn that 'smashing those unions' involves a general smash in which our industrial supremacy will be irretrievably lost and our national credit become the same as the august symbol of an overturned temple."

The New Statesman, the organ of the intellectual Socialists, says:

"If we were asked to explain the puzzle of the strike in a dozen words we should say that, stripped of all its essential details, what the nation has witnessed and suffered in the past ten days has been a desperate attempt on the part of the coalition Government to recapture the middle class vote."

Rarely in publishing history has a book received such unanimously warm, almost tender, appreciation as THE OLD CARD, by ROLAND PERTWEE. Not even one lukewarm review has appeared. All the critics advise their readers to buy THE OLD CARD for, to quote The New York Times, "its quiet humor, refreshing naturalness and simplicity, its farce, its high comedy, its thrilling drama, and its touch of pathos." THE MEANING OF "FIRST IS LAST."

Technically "First is Last" is a farce comedy. In fact, it is more farce than comedy, but behind the laughs is hidden a very serious meaning. Into this receptacle of farce comedy, the authors poured a basic idea, their conception as college graduates of the problem that a young man in college faces during his college period.

The average parents sending their children to college entertain mortal fears lest they may turn out high-brows. It is assumed that "high-browism" is a great obstacle in life. High-browism is supposed to be a hindrance to a successful business career. The high-brow college man is the laughing stock of the business world. Let any young man come home and show his father a poem or an essay on philosophy, and his father will invariably discourage him, and often stop his remittances. When I told my father I was specializing in the drama, he promptly informed me that he would take me out of Columbia unless I stopped taking out so many books from the library on Shakespeare. All artistic cultivation of the mind seems to be taken as the first step to financial failure. Thus, our class poet in "First is Last" is dubbed a sure-fire failure.

"First is Last" attempts to refute this prevalent idea among parents. It endeavors to establish that the young man at college who cultivates his imagination by writing poetry, or painting, or by any other art is as much and more preparing himself to meet the requirements of a business career as if he had confined his studies to commercial courses. At the basis of all success, either in the arts, science or commerce, is imagination. What helps to sharpen the imagination furthers a young man's chances of success.

Our class poet, Doug, our high-brow, is a promising poet at Columbia. All his fellow students are sure that he is bound to end up in the Mills Hotel. Poetry does not pay; it disqualifies a man from entering upon business pursuits. Doug disagrees with his friends. He believes he can make money even if he be a poet; that he can be a successful merchant if he uses his imagination for purposes of making money. They laugh at him, jeer and taunt him. He throws his poetry overboard and turns his energies to business. In three years he comes back a semi-millionaire.

What quality in Doug made him an instantaneous success? It was the imagination that he cultivated and developed in his studies of great poets, and his attempt to become one himself. It is easier to dope out the rise or fall of a stock than to grasp the meaning of a line of Shelley. The student who can understand a Browning poem will be less easily fooled by the fluctuation of the market than the man who dubs him a high-brow. Thus Doug can see possibilities of making money even out of garbage, and Harvey, who, at college, confined his studies to finances, returns a messenger.

The days of the so-called classical student who was destined for the garret are over. Today poets and artists have greater opportunities than Wall Street men. They are often richer men. Today there are novelists and painters and poets who are millionaires. We know one novelist who has made two million dollars writing novels—and good novels, and we know some who, having failed in the arts, turned to business and became rich men.

Thus the poor abused high-brow student has a great chance in life, and should not be laughed at. Parents should not fear if their sons dabble in poetry or any other art in student days. If they don't decide to make a profession of it, it is bound to help them in any commercial career they might choose to adopt. If your son comes home as the class-poet, do not for a minute suspect that he is going to be a failure. It makes him a better man, a finer man, and a more successful man.

In "First is Last" we attempt to project this idea, and the laughter carries with it a lesson we hope will be helpful to the college man as well as to his parents.

FIUME PROTESTS AGAINST BLOCKADE

ENTHUSIASM THERE DROPS

ROME, Oct. 3.—The National Council of Fiume has sent a message to Foreign Minister Tittoni protesting against the blockade of Fiume, declaring it is bringing about starvation in the city.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—The news that Premier Nitti of Italy had received a vote of confidence in the Chamber of Deputies has seriously alarmed the pro-Italian inhabitants of Fiume, according to a semi-official communication issued at Belgrade. The Fiumans, the communication says, organized a demonstration, shouting "Down with Nitti!" "Hang him!" "Down with Wilson!" and "Down with Jugoslavia! Down with Serbia!"

Gabriele d'Annunzio then appeared, the communication adds, and in a speech said:

"Nitti, who, out of fear, is bowing his head to the Allies, once more proved he is the avowed enemy of Italy. The same is true of all those who shouted in the Chamber, 'We want annexation!' and who have given a vote of confidence in Nitti's Cabinet."

This aroused the crowds to further enthusiasm, and brought from them demonstrations in favor of Fiume becoming Italian, says the communication.

FIUME, Oct. 1, (Associated Press.)—Bersaglieri, numbering 1,000, who joined the force of Gabriele d'Annunzio here a few days ago, marched to the Piazza Dante this evening and were reviewed by the poet-soldier. Always picturesque, the Bersaglieri presented their usual fine appearance, but there was a lack of enthusiasm on the part of the crowd, which did not cheer or otherwise applaud them as they took up their positions.

When, however, d'Annunzio arrived there was a slight demonstration of enthusiasm, frequent hand-clapping being heard here and there. The poet-commander had a worn-out appearance. His face was drawn and he seemed unsteady. He looked like a man who was fighting against illness. As he walked out to inspect the troops his bearing was anything but military. In the belt of his Lieutenant Colonel's uniform he wore an arditi knife.

After the inspection d'Annunzio made an address to his new adherents similar to those he previously had delivered, urging the men to stand by Italy for the acquisition of "our Fiume." The soldiers cheered the words of d'Annunzio and then gave three cheers for the poet.

D'Annunzio then received an address from the Lieutenant Colonel commanding the Bersaglieri. He kissed it and thanked the battalion for their expressions of devotion. The Fiuman Medal was bestowed on all the men.

The review was followed by the soldiers going past in double time, following the custom of their organization, the band taking its position opposite the poet. After the ceremony d'Annunzio with his staff left in an automobile. As he was leaving the piazza, which is rather small, d'Annunzio was heartily cheered by the crowds on the streets and in the windows. It was the first real demonstration of enthusiasm during the entire ceremony.

Mixed with the Italians watching the ceremony were many men and women speaking German. Two of the largest hotels in Fiume face the square. These are run entirely by Germans, with German servants.

The blockade of Fiume gradually is becoming tighter, although carabineers are constantly discovering "blind alleys" through which volunteers for the Fiume army pour into the city. There is a stricter watch being kept on the roads and the railroads, where the forces of carabineers have been doubled, and at some places trebled. Evasion of these guards is possible only through the most skillful scouting. Soldiers of the Italian Army stationed along the line are giving aid to volunteers, pointing out the outposts of the carabineers and giving advice how to avoid them.

Signora Magdalene Gori-Montaneli, who is of American birth and parentage, has arrived here and offered her services to d'Annunzio for hospital work. She is a former army nurse. Her father is Dr. Emmet Dent of the Manhattan State Hospital, New York City. She is married to an Italian, who is in command of the engineer units of d'Annunzio's army.

Signora Gori-Mantaneli has been in Italy for five years. She served at the front during the war and was awarded four decorations for meritorious service. She will undertake supervision of propaganda work for the present, but ultimately is expected to enter the hospital unit for children's welfare in Fiume.

The correspondent of The Associated Press, who made his first trip into Fiume hidden under the coal in a locomotive tender and left the city after several days' stay there, ran the gauntlet a second time successfully last night and entered the d'Annunzio domain. This he did by awaiting a train which was carrying railroad employes to their homes in Fiume.

In the darkness the correspondent took up a position between two carabineer posts and boarded the engine. Many regular soldiers who were passing had warned the correspondent of the carabineers, but told him that if he once got aboard the train he would be carried safely into Fiume. The engineer, when he found the correspondent, was averse to letting him ride, declaring that he had received explicit instructions not to take any passengers. He relented, however, and the correspondent remained aboard, but got off before the station in Fiume was reached so as not to get the engineer into trouble.

SEND MONEY TO D'ANNUNZIO.

Italians in South America Clamor for Annexation of Fiume.

ROME, Oct. 2.—A dispatch to the Giornale d'Italia from Fiume states that d'Annunzio has received a contribution of 500,000 lire from Italians at Sao Paulo, Brazil. A son of former Premier Orlando, a cavalry lieutenant, has arrived at Fiume, bringing to d'Annunzio an offer of 100,000 lire.

DIO DE JANEIRO, Oct. 2.—Several thousand Italians marched in procession through the streets of the city this afternoon in demonstrations in favor of the annexation of Fiume and Dalmatia to Italy. Addresses were delivered in the municipal theatre and also in the public square, approving the action of d'Annunzio and favoring the annexation of Dalmatia to Italy.

During the day two airplanes flew over the city, dropping invitations to the populace to join in the manifestations.

Officers Instructed to Avoid Clashes with Italians.

PARIS, Oct. 3.—Complying with suggestions made by various members of the Supreme Council the Jugoslav Government, it is learned, has given special instructions to all Jugoslav officers to avoid clashes with the Italians. This precaution was advised because there appears to be general belief among the Peace Conference delegates that certain elements among the Italians are seeking trouble with the Jugoslavs as an excuse for the seizure of additional territory along the Dalmatian coast.

BELGRADE, Oct. 3.—Stoyan Protitch, Premier of Jugoslavia, has failed in his effort to form a new Cabinet to take the place of the one which resigned a short time ago.

Move to Stimulate Religious Zeal Launched at Mass Meeting.

The Every Name Campaign of the Diocese of New York, which is part of the Nation Wide Campaign of the Episcopal Church, was launched last night at a mass meeting held in St. Thomas Episcopal Church, Fifty-third Street and Fifth Avenue. The plan and purpose of the campaign was explained to the audience by the Rt. Rev. John F. McCormick, Bishop of Western Michigan; the Rev. Ernest M. Stires, Rector of St. Thomas Church, and Lewis B. Franklin, who is in charge of the Nation Wide Campaign. Bishop Charles Sumner Burch of the New York Diocese at the close of the meeting expressed his faith in the success of the campaign, and pronounced the benediction.

The speakers pointed out that the Nation Wide Campaign was a movement within the church to awaken the membership to its responsibilities in facing the problems which have grown out of the war, and that an educational campaign was in progress in New York to impress upon churchgoers the part which the church must play in the solution of these problems. The campaign in New York will culminate on Nov. 16, when teams of workers who are now being trained for the purpose will visit every member whose name is on the church rolls and personally solicit reawakened interest in the cause of religion.

CLOTHIERS SUE NOBLEMAN.

Two attachments against the property of Prince Michel Murat of Paris, son-in-law of Edmund K. Stallo and a nephew of Prince Joachim Murat, at whose home in Paris President and Mrs. Wilson stopped during the sessions of the Peace Conference, were delivered to Sheriff Knott yesterday in suits to recover for haberdashery and clothing purchased during the Summer by Prince Michel Murat, who is living at the Ritz-Carlton.

One claim, filed by Peck & Peck, for haberdashery, is for $1,896, and a claim for clothing for $1,699 is held by Wetzel, Inc. A statement by the process server who delivered the papers to the Prince said that he knew the defendant, because he visited the Fifth Avenue store frequently, sometimes in civilian clothes and at other times in a French officer's uniform. The Peck & Peck suit is chiefly for hosiery, but a charge of $15 is made for placing monograms on underwear. The tailor's bill includes three sack suits at $115 each, overcoat, $125; dinner coat and trousers, $140, and a polo overcoat, $20.

Deputies Gorman and Kane served the attachment papers on the hotel, so that the management may not part with any jewels or other valuables held for the Prince.

SEEKS TO DISCOVER ESTATE

Administrator for Allaway Property Files Action in Court.

Papers in an action of discovery in connection with the estate of the late Hastings Allaway, who died in April, 1919, will be filed today by Attorney Joseph J. Tuohy of Corona in the Queens County Surrogate's Court at Jamaica in an effort to find some of the wealth that Allaway is believed to have left at his death.

Allaway was a well-known figure in sporting circles in this city for years and was for years banker for "Honest" John Kelly. He himself is said to have run gambling places in New Orleans and Hot Springs, Ark.

This action of Attorney Tuohy followed an interesting proceeding recently at the Knickerbocker Safe Deposit Company's building at Fifth Avenue and Thirty-fourth Street. After considerable search Mr. Tuohy, who was appointed administrator of the estate by Surrogate Noble of Queens County, located the safe deposit box of Allaway in this institution. The keys were lost. A locksmith was called, but he could not open the box. Then, under the eyes of the officers of the institution and a representative of the Tax Inheritance Bureau of the State Controller's office, and of Mr. Tuohy, the box was jimmied open. It was a long and difficult process, but when the box finally yielded those in attendance found reposing safely in the box a one-dollar bill.

The action in discovery has been brought to determine if possible what did become of the supposed contents of the box.

When Allaway died he left a will giving all of his property to Miss Sarah Gardner, with whom he lived in a palatial home on the Boulevard at Arverne. Relatives from Ohio, Michigan, and Minnesota engaged Attorney Tuohy to contest the will, and after several trials in the Queens County Surrogate's Court in Queens the will was set aside.

SIDEWALK AND STREET SINK

Water and Gas Mains Break and Basements Are Flooded.

Water and gas mains were broken and several basements were flooded yesterday when the sidewalk and street in front of 631 West 148th Street caved in. The collapse was on the line of a steep grade between Amsterdam Avenue and Riverside Drive, and the hole torn out by the water was about fourty feet across and seven feet deep.

During the forenoon people living on both sides of West 148th Street, between Broadway and Riverside, were without water or gas.

Anti-Jewish Movement in Vienna.

VIENNA, Oct. 2, (Associated Press.)—Placards have already appeared in the city, signed by the German-Austrian Anti-Semitic Association, calling for a mass meeting Sunday to voice a protest against the presence of large numbers of foreign Jews in the republic and to demand the expulsion of Rumanian and Galician Jews in order to make room for non-Jewish citizens.

RED TERROR STILL IN FULL SWING

MOSCOW SHOOTINGS GO ON

By ARTHUR E. COPPING.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HELSINGFORS, Oct. 3.—A naval officer and a military officer just escaped from Petrograd gave me an interview.

First I asked if the reign of terror was pretty well ended in Russia. They shook their heads and explained that in connection with the recent bombing in Moscow, a number of persons had already been shot, not for participation in the tragedy, but for belonging to the same party as its authors.

Chinamen have recently been executed for selling human flesh as butchers' meat. This awful traffic has been dealt in at prices up to 139 rubles per pound. In this connection I learned of dogs being openly sold in Petrograd at 6 rubles per pound.

Naval officers' pay is stated at 19,000 rubles per month with a pound and a half of bread per day and the following monthly rations: 2½ lbs. of sugar, 3 lbs. of fish, 1 lb. of salt, 3 lbs. of buckwheat, 3 lbs. of wheat, 6 lbs. of salt fish. Army officers meanwhile received the paltry sum of 1,200 rubles per month and an allotment of only half of the above rations. Sometimes they received good rye bread and sometimes an inferior article full of chaff.

Here and at Archangel are Russians and Anglo-Russians who have been cut off from all contact with their wives and children and other relatives left behind in Russia and are tortured by the thought that with their limited cash resources long since exhausted those dear ones must be starving or already dead.

The testimony of my informants did not confirm these misgivings. All children, they explained were fed by the Government free of cost, and everybody else without regard to age, sex or conditions had opportunity to work for his or her living.

Many middle-class persons still have a residue of clothes and other desirable possessions which they can barter for money or food. Apparently the death rate from downright starvation is not considerable, but there is a heavy mortality from illness caused by bad food, anxiety, and hardships.

Jolting through the streets of Petrograd may often be seen a cart containing eight or ten coffins, one serving the driver for a seat. Scrawled in chalk on each lid is the name of the deceased.

The interment, which takes place in a communal grave, is associated with no religious ceremony, for these are Government burials, open to everybody, and involving no expense to the individual. Persons who retain private means are permitted to pay for special funerals and to engage the services of a priest.

In confutation of the general rumor, these latest fugitives from Bolshevism state that Petrograd's water, tramway, and electric light systems continue in good running order. They, however, confirm the report that disaster threatens in the coming Winter, not so much from shortage of food as of fuel, a fact more remarkable since Petrograd, in addition to railways, has lake and river communications with great timber areas. But it would seem that the Government's coercive powers do not extend beyond Soviet elections and the three millions of Red Guards.

It is contrary to the principles of Bolshevism that men should be told when or at what they are to work, so instead of the fueling of Petrograd being systematically undertaken, everybody is allowed to do what he or she likes, with the result that many of the city's wooden houses, left vacant through the heavy wastage of population, are being broken up for firewood.

One of my informants claimed to have knowledge that British bank notes were being cleverly forged in Russia with a view to their distribution for propaganda purposes in Great Britain.

SEE WAY TO AVOID DISPUTES.

Russians Urge Closer Co-operation by Americans in Siberia.

Evidence of the regret and apprehension with which Russians observe the rapidly accumulating misunderstandings between Russians and Americans in Siberia, was received here yesterday in a cablegram addressed to V. N. Bashkiroff, chairman of the American Committee of Siberian Agricultural Co-operative Unions, and signed by Prof. Ustrialov, in charge of the Russian Telegraph Agency. In it M. Ustrialov explained that certain bands of Cossacks in Far Eastern Siberia under irresponsible leaders were difficult to control and were subjected to outside influence directed to creating enmity between Americans and Russians.

"It should be understood clearly," the massage goes on, "that these Cossacks are in no way, other than in name, connected with the Cossacks who are rendering such valuable aid to General Denikin in South Russia, and to Kolchak.

"That a propaganda against America has been conducted through certain newspapers is known to Kolchak and is regretted by him, but he has established the policy of free speech such as you have in America. The Siberian people like America. But it seems only natural that they should disapprove of direct methods in dealing with this propaganda problem. It would seem that courtesy would call for diplomatic presentations to the existing Government.

"It was the consensus of opinion at our committee meeting this afternoon that if American officials in Siberia while conducting their affairs would co-operate more directly with the recognized officials in Russia these unfortunate, though small, misunderstandings which are so apt to be magnified, would never occur. We are sure that disturbances created by irresponsible private institutions and by lawless forces will not be permitted to disturb the larger relations existing between two friendly nations."

IDEALS FOR NEW CITIZENS.

Court Finds Them in the Constitution and Laws.

In administering the oath to 200 newly naturalized citizens at the Hudson County (New Jersey) Court House yesterday, Judge James W. McCarthy of the Common Pleas Court said:

"Each of you men has taken an oath to support and defend the Constitution and laws of the United States against all enemies, foreign and domestic. The Constitution is the rock upon which this Republic is founded. If any one should remove the foundation of this beautiful Court House, our temple of justice would become a heap of ruins. So, if our Constitution should be overthrown the greatest free Government known to mankind would perish from the earth. So long as our people support and defend the Constitution and laws there need be no fear that the virus of Bolshevism will affect the body politic of America.

"A man who is entitled to vote and fails to exercise that privilege is not a good citizen and ought to have his citizenship taken from him. He is a species of slacker, and you men who have served in the great American army in the recent war know what a slacker is and with what contempt he should be regarded."

A majority of the 200 new citizens were discharged soldiers or sailors.

Copyright, 1919, by The Chicago Tribune Co.

PARIS, Oct. 3.—Sabie Lacointe is the first man who ever traveled three miles in one minute. Lacointe, who was official tester for French airplanes during the war, covered the three miles in a new type Monocoque at an altitude of 2,000 feet this morning.

Lacointe will pilot the world's largest airplane upon its trial trip. The giant machine has 175 feet wing spread and a length of 60 feet. The entire fuselage is a cabin. The tail, to which the rudder is attached, has a cupola where machine guns could be placed.

A speed of 120 miles an hour is expected to be attained. The giant machine has a cruising radius of 500 miles.

Texas Fliers Reach Binghamton.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Oct. 3.—Seymour Cox, Jr., traveling with his mother and pilot, Harold Block, by airplane from Houston, Texas, to Highland-on-the-Hudson, where the lad is to enter school, is spending the night here. Their airplane alighted here for gasoline too late in the day to continue the journey. Their flying time from Texas to this city was eighteen hours.

French Academy to Seat New Members.

PARIS, Oct. 3, (Havas.)—The French Academy will receive newly appointed members in the following order, according to announcement: Jules Cambon in November, Marshal Foch in February, General Louis Lyautey in March and Henri Bordeaux in April. It has been arranged that Premier Poincaré will be at the February meeting to receive Marshal Foch.

FIXES DEHYDRATION LUNCH.

Process for Drying Foods Is Exhibited at Electrical Show.

By means of a new dehydration process, which was demonstrated yesterday at the Electrical Show, a six-course luncheon, taken from a package smaller than a shoe-box, was served to four persons. The lunch, which consisted of vegetables, fruit, soup, meat, salad and dessert, had been dried by an electrical process which reduced the bulk 70 to 90 per cent.

According to the demonstrator the home method of drying fruits and vegetables and meats by the dehydration process removes the water without affecting the flavor.

This is the last night of the Exposition after a ten days' run. It was announced that the attendance this year had been unusually large, and it is expected that when the figures have been tabulated a new record will have been established.

Serbs Suffer from Salt Famine.

VIENNA, Oct. 2, (Associated Press.)—Reports from Serbia state that great suffering prevails there as a result of the salt famine. A large part of the peasants have had no salt for more than six months and a serious impairment of health has become general in consequence. Nine hundred cars of salt have been lying in Saloniki for months, but it has been impossible to get them transported to Serbia.

ALBERT I

that master description of the tragic invasion of the Hero-King's little country. It has been called the most valuable literary work that has grown out of the war. Its pages are full of charming pen-pictures of King Albert, the Queen and our other distinguished guest—Cardinal Mercier.

"The King—down there on the battle line in the far corner of the land, behind the Yser, ... older, moustache grown long, a fixed sadness in his face and a steady flame in his eye, somehow like a Viking; and the little Queen, quite simple, going about on errands of mercy, a romantic picture—was never so near to the hearts of his people."

"Cardinal Mercier—in his mere presence one felt all little things shrivel up, and wondered why small annoyances should fret and irritate; when he had gone the impalpable influence of his lofty spirit hung for hours about one in the air."

VON DER GOLTZ COUP EXPECTED IN BALTIC

German Officers Predict That He Will Proclaim Himself Borderland Dictator.

ROYALIST HOPES AROUSED

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Oct. 3, (via Copenhagen.)—All the reactionary papers today call attention to Field Marshal von Hindenburg's birthday, publishing a eulogy of him by Ludendorff in which the monarchist officers are pictured as the perfection of virtue with the evident desire to undermine the authority of Noske and republican institutions.

There is another and more personal reason why Ludendorff, despite the advice of his best friends to keep quiet for a while, at least, should wish to be remembered by the officers as a class presently, and that is the ever growing popularity of von der Goltz, commanding General of the German forces in the Balkan region. Von der Goltz is today the last hope of all the army officers who will be discharged presently in compliance with the Peace Treaty, and who do not know what will become of them.

The most absurd and adventurous but also deeply significant stories concerning von der Goltz's intentions circulate among these officers. By some he is regarded as the strongest and most capable exponent of military reaction and Kaiserdom. That is why Ludendorff, who himself hoped to become the military centre of reaction, envies him.

Noske and other members of the Government believed until recently that von der Goltz entertained no counter-revolutionary ideas, but merely sought to do the best he could for the unfortunate Fatherland. Von der Goltz himself remains absolutely silent concerning his intentions. He has merely acknowledged Noske's urgent summons to return immediately with his troops unless he wishes to forfeit his own and all his officers' pensions and expose Germany to vengeful measures by the Entente.

The War Minister and Government are really serious. Though they fear von der Goltz's unruly troops, they fear even more the threatened blockade, and have already cut off all supplies to the Baltic Army. They have also dissolved what in the Prussian War Office was known as the Department for the White Russian Army, which was conducted by a Russian General.

Though it was almost a week ago when von der Goltz received the order to quit the Baltic he has not moved. Two days ago the Russian General mentioned was ordered to report immediately at general headquarters at Mitau to receive instructions concerning his new command in the White Russian Army, this order being signed "von der Goltz, commanding General, Grand Headquarters, Mitau."

Von der Goltz, beside commanding the German Baltic Army of 50,000 men, is also recognized head of the White Russian Army, numbering some 40,000 men and of certain Finnish forces, among whom he is represented by General Sebach, who held only a Captain's rank in the German Army, but distinguished himself in organizing a flying service for all the Baltic forces.

Officers only recently returned from the Baltic tell THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent that von der Goltz is immensely popular with all his troops, because he is a true soldier who shares his men's hardships and is always ready to hear their complaints personally. His German troops are sworn to remain with him in the Baltic region which to many is the promised land in more than one sense.

They say that with his 100,000 troops of various nationalities he is the real lord of the Baltic and may within a few days declare himself independent of the German Government, while his proclamation of dictator of the borderlands may be expected at any moment. His immediate program is said to be to overthrow the Russian Bolshevist Government and establish cordial relations between the new Russia and Germany.

Asked about the British attitude concerning these plans, my informants answered that the English might hold few coast towns with their navy, but that they could not seriously interfere otherwise. They also thought that von der Goltz's declaration of independence would absolve the German Government completely. Nevertheless Ludendorff is exceedingly worried about von der Goltz's silently working for the restoration of the German monarchy and playing the part he considers reserved for himself.

3 SHOT IN FAMILY FIGHT.

Husband, Father, and Brother-in-Law Prisoners in Hospital.

A pistol fight in a Bronx apartment house ended last night with three members of a family so seriously wounded that they were taken to Fordham Hospital. The wounded were Jacob Stein of 230 East 202d Street, who was shot in the breast; Karl Nelson, his father-in-law, shot in the right breast, and Charles Nelson, Stein's brother-in-law, was wounded in the chin.

Facts gathered by the police tend to show that Jacob Stein was the aggressor. He is said to have had trouble with his wife and her family, who live in the same apartment house, and are said to have sided with her. Last night, the police say, when Stein came home there was trouble. The Nelsons, father and son, came up stairs to reason with Stein, and Mrs. Stein went down to her parents' apartment.

Stein, the police charge, drew his revolver and opened fire on his wife's relatives. During the excitement, Mrs. Stein, the police say, came quietly up stairs, went into one of the bedrooms and got a revolver which her husband had brought home several weeks ago.

When she entered the room she found her father and brother wounded on the floor. Stein was going out the door. She promptly opened fire on him and he, too, fell wounded. The shooting caused much excitement in the neighborhood. Tenants ran from their apartments, and the place was in a turmoil when the police arrived. The wounded are prisoners in Fordham Hospital charged with felonious assault. Mrs. Stein was locked up in the Bronx Park Station on the same charge.

Seaplane NC-4 at New Haven.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 3.—Seaplane NC-4 with Lieut. Commander A. C. Read, crew and passengers aboard, reached here from Providence at 3:55 P. M. today. Of two other seaplanes which left Providence with the NC-4 one was delayed by losing its way in a fog. The commander and crew of the NC-4 will be entertained by municipal officials while on its stay here for recruiting duty.

TRACE PLOT TO STIR NEGROES TO RISE

WHITE LEADERS ACCUSED

Special to The New York Times.

HELENA, Ark., Oct. 3.—Additional evidence of the existence of organized propaganda among the negroes which caused the recent race rioting at Elaine, southwest of Helena, was obtained today from Edward Hicks, one of fifteen armed negroes captured near Elaine after a running fight in which numerous shots were exchanged.

Hicks, who made a detailed confession to the military authorities, said that the negroes had been organized by a white lawyer from Little Rock. This man is alleged to be O. B. Bratton, who is being held here under murder charges for alleged implication in the killing of W. S. Adkins, a special officer, on Tuesday night, which precipitated the trouble.

The negroes, Hicks said, had been organized for some time to demand their rights, and their arming had been planned by the negro leaders. Yesterday officers found a quantity of rifles and ammunition stored in a building here owned by D. A. Johnson, a negro dentist, who was said to be one of the officers of the negroes' association. Johnson was killed yesterday after shooting O. R. Lilly of Helena, white.

Officers raided the offices of Casey & Bratton, white lawyers, today and confiscated some socialistic literature. Papers were found representing the "Progressive Farmers' Household Union," the negro organization said to be back of the outbreak. Numerous contracts with negro share croppers, members of the organization, were found showing that the negroes had paid $50 down and were to pay an additional sum later for legal advice.

U. S. Bratton of Little Rock is a member of the firm and father of O. S. Bratton, who is being held here. O. S. Bratton is not connected with the firm as a member. Some of the literature pertaining to the "Progressive Farmers' Household Union" advocated social equality between negroes and whites.

A heavy guard is being maintained around the jail here to prevent possible violence against Bratton and the negro prisoners.

An investigation of the causes of the uprising was started today by a Committee of Seven appointed by the civil authorities with the sanction of Governor Brough. A similar committee existed two months ago to probe rumors of an uprising said to be pending among the negroes. The investigation will be conducted in co-operation with the military authorities.

A statement was issued by Sheriff F. F. Kitchins, of Phillips County, Mayor G. G. Knight of Helena, and E. M. Allen, President of the Business Men's League, today, giving assurance that normal conditions would be restored tomorrow. The statement said that many of the negroes were returning to work and charged that the uprising was due to white agitators and negro leaders who have been exploiting the blacks for their own gain.

The troops will be held in Phillips County until conditions are completely normal. One hundred soldiers are stationed in Helena, 400 in the vicinity of Elaine, 250 in West Helena, and 25 at Mellwood, a town several miles south of Elaine.

Two negroes were killed and one was wounded today by a military patrol near Elaine when the blacks failed to obey an order to surrender. This increases the death total to twenty-four, five whites and nineteen negroes. The bodies of other negroes probably will be found in the woods by searching parties.

At present 285 negro prisoners are being held in the Phillips County Jail, and the number is being increased hourly by additional blacks brought in by patrols. Not all of the negroes were arrested as rioters, some being held as witnesses or for investigation.

Special to The New York Times.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Oct. 3.—Governor Charles E. Brough returned today from Elaine and announced that the situation was completely under control. An investigation of the uprising would be made, he said, in an effort to determine the real agencies back of the outbreak.

U. S. Bratton of Little Rock, former Postmaster here, and a member of the law firm of Casey & Bratton, of Helena, issued a general denial today after Helena officers had raided the firm's offices and found socialistic literature and papers of the negro organization charged with inciting the riot. He said he had not been active in the affairs of the firm at Helena for several months and knew nothing concerning the papers found there.

COFFEE CROP IMPROVING.

Brazil Now Expects Fair Yield This Year.

After a period of uncertainty, as a result of damage suffered from frosts, Brazilian coffee planters are now becoming optimistic that the crop for 1919-1920, after all, may be a success. Late advices say the sections damaged by the frosts are recovering.

An estimate by the Brazilian Ministry of Agriculture places the crop in the State of Sao Paulo at 3,368,750 bags, the State of Minas at 430,000 bags, and the State of Parana at 20,000 bags, a total of 3,818,750 bags for the three States.

14.

If the war has taught anything about investments it has taught the great merit of guaranteed mortgages.

Institutions have seen the quotations on their stocks and bonds go down so much that if they needed money the last thing they wished to do was to sell these securities and incur the heavy losses involved.

They have turned to their mortgages and, of course, have not collected all that they asked for, but have got more from that source than from any other, and what they have received they have received at par.

It is not reasonable to expect mortgages to bear the double burden of payment in full and payment immediately, but they have met in hundreds of cases even this double demand and have come out of this crisis with much better reputation than stocks and bonds which could not be collected without loss and quite often could not be realized upon at all.

We have guaranteed $700,000,000 in the past 27 years and no investor has ever lost a dollar.

FRIEDSAM THANKED FOR PRICE EFFORTS

Food Administrator Sends Letter to Chairman of Sub-Committee on Shoes and Clothing.

CALLS ADVERTISING FAIR

Says Careful Shopping Would Stop Complaints of Profiteering or Misrepresentation Against Merchants.

Federal Food Administrator Arthur Williams yesterday made public a letter which he had sent to Michael Friedsam, President of B. Altman & Co., Chairman of the Fair Price Committee's Sub-committee on Clothing and Shoes, thanking the latter for his efforts to lower prices of the commodities supervised by his committee. In his letter Mr. Williams says:

"It gives me a great deal of pleasure to acknowledge the receipt of your favor of the 30th ultimo, conveying the report of your committee on the proposed 'Fair Price List' for clothing, shoes and dry goods. Though it is not practicable in your judgment to now issue such a list, it would seem that, in effect at least, this is being very well accomplished in the advertising now appearing in the daily papers of this city. Soon after the organization of your committee, the publication of many seemingly moderate and fair prices began to appear to an increasing extent in the advertising of the daily newspapers. Nearly all of today's larger advertising of shoes, hats, and clothing contains prices and quality references, and one of the largest advertisers refers directly to 'fair prices' giving a number of listings in connection with this heading.

"With careful shopping in making one's personal expenditures, somewhat like that observed in making business expenditures, with careful studying of the advertising appearing in the daily papers, and by following the rule of making purchases only from dealers of integrity and responsibility, there would be no just cause for complaint of either 'profiteering' or misrepresentation in the quality of the goods purchased against the merchants of this city."

In giving out today's issue of the fair price list, Mr. Williams said:

"The principal change of the week in the grocery list is in the first and second grades of butter, which have increased from ½ cent to 2 cents a pound. The committee is giving careful consideration to the reasons for this change. Apart from the change in butter the average of the schedule is practically the same as last week.

"In meats the tendency in reference to both beef and lamb is toward higher prices. It is reported that the receipts of live animals are decreasing and that the live stock men are receiving from the wholesalers an increase of 1 cent and more a pound for the animals on the hoof. In view of the investigation that is now being conducted in this city by Oscar Straus, the committee adheres to the wholesale prices used at the beginning of the investigation. Many of the retailers continue to carry the wholesale difference in their margins, and in consequence any increase in price to the consumer has been avoided. Pork and pork products show a reduction of from ½ cent to 2 cents a pound, the numerical decrease for the items on this part of the list being 3¾ cents."

Commissioner of Markets Jonathan C. Day announced yesterday that he had received a gratifying response from political clubs in all parties in the sixty-two Assembly districts of New York City in answer to his appeal for help in distributing the million pounds of bacon which are offered to the people of this city at 35 cents a pound. The bacon, Dr. Day said, was bought by M. J. O'Connor of 308 Lenox Avenue of a store of army issue bacon which a big packing company possessed. It is sold at a price scarcely sufficient to cover the total cost.

Captain Jaffray Peterson, in charge of the United States Army sales station at 22 West Nineteenth Street, announced last night that beginning Monday the station would open for business at 10 o'clock in the morning instead of 1 o'clock in the afternoon. It will close at 5:30, although persons in the building at that hour will be given until 7 o'clock to finish their purchasing.

FRAUD CASE TO GRAND JURY.

Inquiry Into Police Examinations May Disclose a Plot.

The District Attorney and Morris Cukor, President of the Municipal Civil Service Commission, continued their investigation yesterday concerning the forged initials and substituted papers in the examination of a Police Lieutenant for promotion to Captain, and it was decided to present the charges and evidence to the Grand Jury on Monday. Assistant District Attorney Pecora said he would ask for indictments for forgery and grand larceny in the second degree.

"I shall endeavor to present evidence to the jury to show that other Police Lieutenants and civil service employes were in a conspiracy and have participated in frauds of the same nature," said Mr. Pecora.

The investigation thus far implicated a civil service employe and a Police Lieutenant, Mr. Pecora stated. Thomas Murray, chief examiner for the civil service, said there were indications that two other candidates had entered into a corrupt arrangement to have similar frauds committed with examination papers, but it does not appear that the frauds were fully carried out. Until the extent of the fraud is known no decision will be taken on possible revocation of the entire competitive list, in which more than 200 Police Lieutenants took the examinations.

30 MURDERERS AWAIT TRIAL

Largest Number of Capital Cases in City's History.

Thirty murderers are in the Tombs Prison awaiting trials. This is the largest number of capital cases ever brought together at one time in the history of New York County. The District Attorney, who said that these numerous cases of homicide were due to the increase in crime during the year, instructed Assistant District Attorneys Brothers and McDonald yesterday to begin the prosecution of these offenders. They will apply to Judge Crane in General Sessions on Monday for an immediate trial calendar.

Among the prisoners is Max Minsky, a former member of the Jack Zelig gang, who shot and killed a fellow gangster, Max Levine. Minsky was convicted of murder in the second degree on Jan. 27, 1914. He appealed the conviction, which was recently reversed by the Court of Appeals and a new trial ordered. Others charged with murder include Edward Earl Paige, 19, and Edward O'Brien, 18, who are accused of slaying Gardiner C. Hull, a stationer, who was attacked and robbed in his office at 106 Fulton Street several months ago.

BOY DIES OF RABIES.

Symptoms Develop When Child Sees Dog Like One Which Bit Him.

According to Assistant Chief Medical Examiner Benjamin Schwartz, who held an autopsy over the body yesterday morning, the death of Louis Rossano, 6 years old, of 169 Conover Street, Brooklyn, at Bellevue Hospital, Thursday night was caused by rabies.

Rossano, while playing in front of his home two months ago, was bitten in the left thigh by a yellow mongrel. On Sept. 30, while walking with his father, Anthony Rossano, the boy saw a yellow dog resembling the one which had bitten him and was seized with convulsions. He was taken to Bellevue Hospital, where he died last night.

JUDGE REBUKES KEMPNER.

Member of Mayor's Committee Is Blamed for False Report of Decision.

Supreme Court Justice John M. Tierney, concluding a series of hearings in the Bronx Courthouse, to determine the origin of a false report of a decision he had made, yesterday exonerated all the newspapers which had published the story, and laid the blame upon Harry Kampner, a member of the Law Committee of the Mayor's Committee on Rent Profiteering. In the article printed several weeks ago, it was stated that Justice Tierney had dismissed a writ of mandamus which had been sued to compel a city marshal to serve a dispossess warrant which had already been granted. The fact was that the case had been withdrawn by the consent of both parties to the action.

In addressing Mr. Kempner, Justice Tierney said yesterday:

"I have given this matter considerable thought, and from reading the testimony have concluded that you, Mr. Kempner, are responsible for this article which was vicious in its effect, and not the newspaper men or the City News Association. There is no question in my mind that you went down to the Municipal Building and informed the newspaper men that I had rendered the decision which was published, emphasizing the human side. It is evident that you were looking for self-glorification and that Mr. Kennedy, the Corporation Counsel, had the same impulse. The Corporation Counsel's office should have sought some verification before giving out the story to the newspaper men.

"From the testimony of Max Wolff, editor of The German Herold, it is evident that it was your declaration that the writ had been dismissed and your emphasis on the human element in the case resulted in the publication of this article. You have denied this, but in the face of the testimony you seem to have been guilty of criminal contempt and you should consider yourself fortunate that this matter is not presented to the Grand Jury through the District Atorney's office in addiion to any punishment that this court might impose. If I thought that there had been any vicious intent in your actions I most certainly would present the matter to the Grievance Committee of the Bar Association. Consider this a rebuke."

BROKER GIVES $10,000 BAIL.

Frederick D. Armstrong Under Grand Larceny Indictment.

Frederick D. Armstrong, a former broker at 52 Broadway, charged with grand larceny in connection with stock trading orders of customers, was released under $10,000 bail yesterday by Judge Rosalsky in General Sessions. Armstrong, who had been an engineer in the Department of Sewers in Brooklyn, opened an office under the name of Armstrong & Co. at 52 Broadway in July, 1918. The firm went into bankruptcy several months ago.

Assistant District Attorney J. T. Dooling said five indictments had been returned against Armstrong and that two specific complaints charged losses of $12,000 of United States Steel stock by Mrs. Catherine G. Wright, 348 Claremont Avenue, Brooklyn, and $15,000 by Nathan Garmise of 1,477 Third Avenue.

"This prosecution," said Mr. Dooling, "is the first here under the new section of the Penal law relating to the buying and selling of stocks. We charge Armstrong with trading against the accounts of customers by ignoring customers' orders, although entries in the books of the firm purported to comply with instructions from customers."

UPSON LEADS BALLOON RACE

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 3.—The final outcome of the national championship balloon race depends on word from the pilots of three balloons which took the air in the field of ten contestants here Wednesday night.

Of the seven balloons which have reported landing, the Goodyear II, official entry of the Aero Club of Akron, Ohio, and piloted by Ralph H. Upson, is the distance winner. The Goodyear II landed at Dunham, Quebec, approximately 1,050 miles northwest of St. Louis.

Fear for the safety of Captain Carl W. Dammann and Lieutenant Edward J. Verheyden, pilot and aid respectively of the Wichita (Kan.) Aero Club entry, was expressed today by Major Albert Bond Lambert, an official of the race. No word has been received from them since they ascended, and Major Lambert announced that their craft was a bit leaky.

Captain Warren Rasor, pilot of the Ohio, telegraphed that he decended at 1 P. M. yesterday at Perry Sound, Ontario, several hundred miles north of Simcoe County, where the Murphysboro, Ill., entry landed.

SEES RISE IN SUGAR; BLAMES PRESIDENT

Failure to Authorize Purchase of Cuban Crop Means Advance, Says Zabriskie.

GLASGOW TOLD TO ACT

Senate Committee Asks Him to Frame Laws Designed to Alleviate the Situation.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—Failure of the President to authorize the purchase of the Cuban sugar crop for 1920 makes it virtually certain that sugar prices will increase after next Jan. 1, a Senate subcommittee was told by George A. Zabriskie, President of the Sugar Equalization Board, and Judge W. A. Glasgow, counsel for the Food Administration.

The President has been advised that the "situation is out of hand," they said, and refiners notified that control of the market probably would end after Dec. 31.

The committee later requested W. A. Glasgow, counsel for the Food Administration, to formulate legislation designed to alleviate the situation and to make possible negotiations for purchasing the 1920 Cuban sugar crop.

No Increase This Year.

Mr. Zabriskie said he did not anticipate any increase in prices this year. The present apparent shortage, he said, was the result of an abnormal demand, complicated to some extent by the effect of the recent marine strike.

In the first nine months of this year the American people consumed 300,000 tons more sugar than normally, the committee was told. Prohibition was suggested as a principal cause, since those accustomed to alcoholic drinks had turned to soft drinks, candies, and confections.

Both Mr. Zabriskie and Judge Glasgow protested against furnishing their correspondence with the President regarding the 1920 Cuban crop, saying it would not be proper for them to make the communications public. Chairman McNary insisted, however, that they submit copies of the letters sent to the President, the first on Aug. 14. In that the President was told of an offer by the Cuban Government to enter negotiations for the 1920 crop on terms similar to those of previous years and the recommendation was made that he authorize its acceptance. A dissenting report was made to the President by Dr. Frank W. Taussig, a member of the board, who advocated a return to a free market.

Mr. Zabriskie said he again wrote to the President Aug. 20 warning him of the danger that the Cuban Government might withdraw its proposal and asking for a definition of his policy.

Rudolph Foster, Executive Secretary at the White House, wrote under date of Aug. 22 that he would call the matter to the attention of the President that on Sept. 22 the Cuban Government had withdrawn its offer.

On Sept. 23 a copy of the Cuban Government letter was sent to the President, and Zabriskie, in another letter, told him that he regarded the situation as now out of hand and that he had advised the refiners of the new situation.

Cautions Against Alarm.

Mr. Zabriskie told the committee too much alarm should not be created by the situation, since the proportionate increase in the price of sugar has not been nearly as great as that of other commodities.

Chairman McNary inquired as to the probabilities of yet getting the Cuban crop, and Mr. Zabriskie said it was possible that a way might be found if legislative action could be had in time.

Explaining the operation of the board, Mr. Zabriskie told the committee it had accumulated a reserve of approximately $30,000,000, which ultimately would go to the national treasury.

Amendments to the Food Control act extending the provisions of the law to clothing and providing penalties for profiteering and hoarding, recommended by President Wilson in the campaign to reduce the cost of living, were put on their way to final enactment today with the adoption of the conference report by the Senate. Upon approval of the report by the House the amendments will be sent to the White House.

Colleges Cut Out Military Course.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—Authority given to seven educational institutions to organize reserve officers' training units among their students was withdrawn today by the War Department after the institutions had intimated that they did not wish to adopt military training as part of the curriculum. The schools included Amherst, Trinity, Bowdoin, and Union Colleges, Wesleyan University, Rice Institute, Houston, Texas, and the University of Santa Clara, Cal.

Scheidemann Seeks Publicity Job.

PARIS, Oct. 3.—The Temps learns from Geneva that August Scheidemann, the former German Chancellor, took advantage of a recent visit to Switzerland to enter into conversations with various German-Swiss personages regarding the creation of a great international press agency. The aim of the proposed news agency would be to supply the foreign press with news favorable to Germany.

BENNETT TRUSTEES ANSWER

They Say No More Income Is Due Late Editor's Sister.

An answer was filed in the Surrogates Court yesterday, by Eugene Higgins, Rodman Wanamaker, and the Guaranty Trust Company, as trustees and executors under the will of James Gordon Bennett to the demand by William Travers Jerome, as trustee of a trust fund set aside for Mrs. Jeanette Bell, sister of the late newspaper owner, by her father, the senior James Gordon Bennett, for an accounting.

Mr. Jerome filed the demand because after he succeeded Mrs. Bell's brother as trustee of the fund for her benefit he found that while the income had been paid to Mrs. Bell no accounting had been made, and he was unable to determine that all the fund had been accounted for. The trustees say in their answer that they have turned over all the property Mr. Bennett had and that there was no accumulated income due Mrs. Bell. For this reason they ask the dismissal of the proceeding.

HARVARD FUND $2,145,545.

Harvard's appeal for a minimum of $15,250,000 to meet pressing needs has passed the two million dollar mark. The Fund Committee announced last night at the close of the fifth day of the campaign that the total subscriptions for the country were $2,145,545.

The feature of the day's contributions was a gain of $140,000 reported by the Boston committee, placing Boston ahead with a total of $925,000 as against New York's $920,000. Subscriptions from outside of Boston and this city amount to $300,545.

NOTHING CAN BE GAINED BY DELAY.

The defeat of the Fall amendments to the Treaty is a rebuke to the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate, a rebuff to the extreme obstructionists, a repudiation by Republicans of Mr. Lodge's leadership; and it assures the country that the Treaty is not to be so mishandled by the Senate as to compel resubmission to the Peace Council. If so feeble an undertaking as that to which Senator Fall lent his name is wrecked by a vote of nearly two to one, it is certain that the amendments relating to Shantung and the British vote in the Assembly, deliberately contrived to destroy the Treaty, can never command a majority. The counsels and the vote of reasonable men in the Senate have thwarted the embittered and hostile partisans who would have led the country into paths of danger.

This outcome of the prolonged contest was to be expected, it was foreseen. With what grace and success the foes of the Treaty are to extricate themselves from their present position is not so easily determinable. The presence in Washington of some of the chief men of the Republican Party and reports that others, including the Chairman of the National Committee, are hurrying to the capital, are emergency indications. There is urgent and immediate need of expert advice, for the country is not at this moment in a disposition to view with patience a prolongation of the wrangle over the Treaty or a further postponement of peace.

The path of duty for the Senate is in plain view. It cannot reject the Treaty, it will not venture to amend it. The sole remaining question is of reservations that will express the Senate's understanding of certain provisions. They are all unnecessary, as Mr. Taft has said; the appending of such matter to the act of ratification is required only as a way out of their difficulties by Senators who would have escaped their present embarrassment had they come to an earlier perception of the country's desire. There need not be, there should not be, any considerable delay in reaching an understanding and a final vote. Now that the inevitable end is foreseen, an agreement can soon be arranged. It ought to be unnecessary to point out to the Republican majority that there is no advantage to be gained now by barren and futile obstruction.

MR. GOMPERS AND JUDGE GARY.

Whether Judge Gary was right in refusing to meet Fitzpatrick and Foster is a subject of endless debate—which can never be decided except pragmatically, by the success or failure of the steel strike. The most significant feature of the situation, meantime, seems in danger of being neglected. It is that Mr. Gompers agrees with Judge Gary as to the essential rights of the strike—widely though he differs from him in other matters.

When Mr. Gompers returned from the labor conference at Amsterdam it was in the attitude of a conqueror of the Bolsheviki; modestly couched as was his proclamation of victory, it was specific and absolute. When confronted by Mr. Plumb and his plan, however, Mr. Gompers was stricken with a silence which was obviously not the silence of consent. As to the steel strike, it is on record that he advised strongly against it. His attitude, in short, has been uniformly consistent with his lifelong record as a leader of what the economists call "business" unionism—the unionism that aims to raise the wages and living conditions of workmen in harmony with the present organization of society, as opposed to the unionism that aims first at economic and social revolution.

The situation was vividly characterized by Mr. Martin, the steel worker who was called with Judge Gary to testify before the Senate committee. The aim of Fitzpatrick and Foster, as Mr. Martin knew it, was to enforce a control by radicals upon the American Federation of Labor by means of enforcing a similar control upon the steel company. Mr. Gompers and Judge Gary thus stand forth as two enlightened leaders of labor, the one an organizer of business unionism on a broadly national scale, the other as the organizer of a business union within a single industry. There can be no greater evidence of Judge Gary's success as a labor leader than the fact that the American Federation had, through long years, made no headway among the skilled, prosperous, and English-speaking workers in the Steel Corporation. The only possible attack was that made by Fitzpatrick and Foster—through the unskilled foreign workmen and by means of inflammatory doctrine. As Mr. Gompers and Judge Gary are at one in their general character and methods, so they are exposed to identically the same enemy.

The actual conduct of the two men, their strategy, was widely different. The Federation of Labor, with all its strength, is organically loose and liable to break under any great strain, as labor organizations have so often broken in the past. The logic of Mr. Gompers's situation forced him to an opportunism not without righteousness and dignity. Having counseled against the strike in vain, when it was called he gave it his loyal support. If the strike fails, his leadership is, at least for the present, secure. Should Fitzpatrick and Foster triumph he will have to reckon with them. Judge Gary, on the contrary, was in control of one of the strongest organizations in the modern business world. In his judgment, even a parley with the forces of radicalism would weaken his standing and authority with his men. It was not a question of his general attitude toward labor, but of his generalship in a conflict which he sensed as inevitable. Judge Gary's course was consistently forward-looking, in that it was, as is already evident, calculated to insure industrial peace on the basis of a liberal and human treatment of his workmen, and the best interests of employer and employed through the maintenance of the open shop.

JUSTICE NEWBURGER'S RECORD.

Alarmed and angered by the general public indignation, strongly heard in Tammany itself, at Mr. Murphy's refusal to renominate Justice Newburger of the Supreme Court, Tammany departed from its old wise tradition of silence, and on Aug. 28 its Executive Committee issued a statement, anonymous save for that sponsorship, giving or trying to find reasons for that refusal. This extraordinary document, a copy of which was sent to the enrolled voters of the First District, called Justice Newburger's judicial record "bad and "one of exceptional and surprising "carelessness and inefficiency." "The real issue," it said, with a peculiarly impudent innuendo, "is whether the "mere fact that a Judge has served a "constitutional term of fourteen years "and has managed to escape impeachment for malfeasance or incompetence entitles him to a life "term of office regardless of his nearness to the age limit wisely fixed by "our Constitution for his compulsory "retirement, or whether it is not a "public duty of political parties to "discriminate between capable Judges "and those of proved inefficiency or "those who, by reason of age or other "circumstances, should be required to "give way to more competent men." Then followed certain or uncertain figures as to the number of his decisions reversed by the higher courts. "The longer Judge Newburger has "remained upon the bench the worse "his record has grown." And so on.

It is improbable that this curious bit of sophistication has produced any effect upon the public. None the less, it has now been answered officially and finally, beyond appeal. Four former Justices of the Appellate Division and one former Judge of the Court of Appeals have given the opinion of the men who have reviewed Justice Newburger's decisions and the decisions of his colleagues of the Supreme Court on his judicial record.

These five unimpeachable authorities speak of Justice Newburger's "very marked industry, ability, and "single-mindedness in the performance of his judicial duties." They praise his invariable fairness and impartiality, his courtesy and considerateness, his remarkable expedition of business, his undivided attention to his duties. Of his industry and his competence they cite from the official records these conclusive proofs:

> In the last five years (1914 to 1918 inclusive) he conducted 1,516 trials and heard and decided 7,399 contested motions, including many demurrers. From only 221 of these judgments were appeals taken, resulting in 140 affirmances and 83 reversals. In other words, from 1,516 judgments no appeals were taken in 1,295, and of the cases in which appeals were taken in only 83 were the judgments reversed, so that of all the judgments rendered less than 6 per cent. were reversed on appeal.
> The record with respect to orders upon contested motions is even more remarkable. From the 7,399 of such orders signed in the years stated only 182 appeals were taken, and in the cases in which appeals were taken only 57 of the orders were reversed, so that of all the orders entered on motion less than 1 per cent. were reversed on appeal.

That is the judicial record of Justice Newburger, the official record. "These figures," say the five former Judges of Appeals, the reviewers of Justice Newburger's decisions, the men best qualified to testify to his competence, efficiency, and learning, "speak loudly and convincingly not "only of Justice Newburger's diligence, but of the general excellence "of his work which is evidenced by "the overwhelming majority of the "cases in which his judgments and "decisions were accepted and not appealed from."

The statement put forth in the name of the Executive Committee of Tammany Hall was merely political, a campaign document. The statement of the five former Justices and Judges of Appeals is, in effect, a judgment of the appeal courts, of the first experts in the matter, who speak from knowledge and with a desire to do justice, utterly removed from political and partisan intention. Tammany made a grievous blunder in attacking Justice Newburger. How grievous that blunder was it must now be perfectly aware.

SIR RICHARD CRAWFORD.

In the death recently of Sir Richard Crawford, Commercial Commissioner at the British Embassy during the war, the empire lost a public-spirited and useful servant and the United States a sincere friend and admirer. No Englishman who came to this country on official business before America entered the war was more respected and better liked than Sir Richard Crawford, and yet he had the most difficult of all duties to discharge. The British blockade was not understood by many American merchants, who naturally saw in it only arbitrary interference with their business and violations of international law. The underlying reasons for it they could not be brought to admit by most advocates. It was Sir Richard Crawford's task to induce acquiescence. When the United States went to war it was realized that Great Britain could have adopted no other course with any chance of winning the war.

As a remover of friction Sir Richard Crawford was successful in spite of interest and prejudice. It fell to him to make adjustments, correct injustices, and settle legal claims. Sympathizing with the American point of view, he had sometimes to differ with his own Government and hold a brief for American claimants, which he always did with a resolute front, often effectively. Americans who came to him to protest about the stopping or diversion of their shipments might be angry when they met him, but the storm was laid before they left him. He was so entirely fair and frank, so courteous and so completely master of himself, so much a man and so thoroughly a gentleman, that it was impossible to disagree with him without liking him. He made no enemies, he made many friends; and so when the news of his death came there was a feeling that a lovable character had gone.

In serving his own country well Sir Richard Crawford served the interests of America, too, because he always conciliated, and hands across the sea was more than a formal phrase, a convenient sentiment, in his presence. He did a great deal to improve the relations between this country and Great Britain. There is no doubt that he was a victim of his indefatigable labors here, that the war was the death of him. His health gave way under the strain, and while he accepted a post in Egypt temporarily to recuperate, hoping to return to the United States, he never rallied. To Americans who were brought much into contact with him—and they were many—Sir Richard Crawford was not only an official representative of Great Britain, but a choice spirit and a personal friend, who is remembered with pleasure and whose passing is sincerely regretted.

GENERAL GRAVES'S ERROR.

The latest incident in the career of that strange American army in Siberia—the army that is ordered to stay there but not to fight—must cause considerable bewilderment to Russian friends of the Allies. To those Americans who have insisted that the troops must be withdrawn it gives, one must fear, a certain amount of satisfaction.

Major Gen. William S. Graves, commanding the American troops in Eastern Siberia, was properly displeased at the anti-American character of articles in a Vladivostok newspaper. But by way of retaliation he held up 14,000 rifles, bought in America by the Kolchak Government, as they passed through Vladivostok on their way to Omsk. This was bad enough, for the rifles are much needed in the military operations against the Bolsheviki; but General Graves accompanied the notice of his action with an undiplomatic telegram in which he said, among other things, that unless the Cossack commanders in Eastern Siberia were put under control by the Omsk Government he would recommend that America give no further aid to Russia.

It is hard to think of anything that General Graves could have done that would give more satisfaction to those who are the enemies both of America and of the Omsk Government. His action would have been understandable if the Omsk Government had any control over Semeonoff, Kalmykoff, and the other Cossack leaders of Eastern Siberia. It was Kalmykoff's men who flogged an American corporal the other day, and both of these self-appointed Generals have been annoying the American troops as much as they could.

But unless all returned travelers from Siberia, of every political belief, are unmitigated falsifiers, the Omsk Government has no control in fact over Eastern Siberia. As Kolchak's Foreign Office points out in its admirably temperate reply, the troubles in Eastern Siberia are an international, not a purely Russian, problem. Semeonoff and Kalmykoff are in effect bandit chiefs who pay no attention to Kolchak.

Then why has not Kolchak disposed of them? In spite of the demands of his war with the Bolsheviki, he made preparations once, if not twice, to send a military expedition against these two Cossack adventurers, with the object of restoring all Siberia to allegiance to the Omsk Government. Americans returned from Siberia say that this vindication of authority was halted by the military representatives of a foreign Government, who find the Cossack leaders useful for their own purposes, and who threatened to use force against Kolchak if he persisted. General Graves knows who supported the Cossacks of Kalmykoff in their flogging of American soldiers. It was not Kolchak.

The Omsk Government has many enemies, and some of them are inspired chiefly by the fear that it will succeed in reuniting Russia under a strong and satisfactory political system. Some of these enemies would no doubt be glad to see the American troops removed from Siberia, where if they do not fight the Bolsheviki they at least by their mere presence do something to prevent international complications. No friends of Russia or of America will be benefited by General Graves's retaliation against the Omsk Government for something which it could not prevent.

NON-PARTISAN BANKING.

It was expected that the Non-Partisan League would get North Dakota into trouble with its wild business ideas, but it was not foreseen that these saviors of society would so soon turn out to be bank destroyers of an ignoble sort. The Scandinavian-American Bank of Fargo gave the leaders of the league credit on doubtful security, and the Banking Board was compelled to close the doors because of the queer assets among the collateral. The bank's total liabilities were about $1,600,000, and some $734,194 was lent in excess of the bank's lawful capacity. Included in the excess loans was $432,000 lent to the National Non-Partisan League and its subsidiary corporations. The league itself is debtor for $148,824, and its Consumers' Stores Company for $170,000. As the capital and surplus were only $60,000, the impropriety of making such loans to non-productive enterprises needs no emphasis. The character of the collateral is preposterous, most of it being post-dated farmers' checks, and even those were not in the bank's custody. In the words of the bank examiners:

> The security in almost every case is entirely inadequate and in most instances constitutes second liens on the property held as collateral. Total lack of judgment and unwarranted optimism are responsible for the extension of credit displayed by the list of twenty excess loans. In every case neither the financial standing of the makers nor the collateral held by the bank for the loans justifies the credit extended.

Even this does not fully state the case, for investigation has been ordered into the condition of about a dozen banks known in the State as the Non-Partisan League banks. In the specific case it is said that the loss will be borne by the State's guarantee. That is less of an argument in favor of the guarantee of bank deposits than it seems, for there is only $100,000 in the fund, and it will take several years for the deficiency to be gathered in from the taxpayers. Those who do not think that the bank guarantee idea is a good one find support for their view that the guarantee lures depositors into carelessness in the selection of their bank and encourages the sort of banking now uncovered.

Perhaps the misadventure may set the State to reconsidering the wisdom of its election of public officers who commit the State to a baker's dozen of speculative enterprises. It does not reduce the total of the losses that they are not intentional robberies. Probably nobody more regrets the miscarriage of their plans than the men whose judgment is so discredited by the result of their adventures. Perhaps if they had risked their own money the result would have been the same. However honest and well-meaning they may be, the fact remains that it was not safe to trust them with other people's money, and the same may be said about the credit of the State, both political and financial. At least, if North Dakota hardens its heart and stiffens its back in support of its adventurers, other States may take warning against the same sort of Socialist visionaries who lift their heads everywhere, and find support in circles which need sobering and which ought to get it through such experiences.

ADMIRAL STRAUSS'S MINE FIGHTERS.

An American force of about 5,000 officers and men, under the command of Rear Admiral Joseph Strauss, formerly Chief of the Bureau of Ordnance and a famous authority on explosives, has almost completed one of the most difficult and dangerous enterprises of the war, the clearing of the North Sea mine barrier. No less than 70,000 mines were laid, the American contribution being 57,000 and the British 13,000 mines. Admiral Strauss was selected to supervise the lion's share of the work, and there could have been no greater tribute to his skill and adaptability for the task. His ships and working force for the laying of the mine barrier had to be hastily assembled in February, 1918. The ships available were two mine layers, the San Francisco and Baltimore, and eight converted merchantmen. "The whole force, "that was later to consist of some "7,000 men, ashore and afloat," he has said, "had to be organized and drilled in their work."

This mine barrier, to stretch from the Orkney Islands to the coast of Norway, 240 miles, was designed to shut out the enemy's submarines from a passage north of Scotland into the Atlantic, as the barrier previously laid from the Goodwin Sands to Ostend was planned to prevent the U-boats from getting into the English Channel. Once the North Sea barrier was laid, the enemy's campaign against merchant shipping would be practically at an end. The British, American, and French fleets were in little danger from the submarines, because, as Admiral Sims has made clear, the destroyers, whose duty it was to protect the capital ships, had proved themselves more than a match for the submarines, chiefly by the use of the depth bomb. Before the armistice was signed the North Sea barrier "was taking its toll of the submersibles," to quote Admiral Strauss. It is now no secret that Admiral Jellicoe's confidence in the failure of the submarine campaign was based upon his knowledge that the North Sea mine barrier, the work largely of Admiral Strauss, would soon be finished.

Hostilities ended, the mines had to be cut from their moorings and exploded. The men who did the job could undo it best, and Admiral Strauss was called upon again. Two officers and ten men have been killed in the lifting of the barrier, and of thirty-six mine sweepers only five have escaped damage requiring extensive repairs; two of the ships had to be rebuilt. Mines cut loose did not always explode; it then became the task of "sub" chasers to hunt for the drifters and explode them. Admiral Strauss's men not only faced constant danger, but exposed themselves to the severest hardships. The "duration of the war" meant war for them for nearly a year after the armistice, war with the mines and war with the elements. No men in the American Navy have played more heroic parts, and their dual achievement has been scarcely noticed. Admiral Strauss and his mine fighters should be due in New York by the end of October. Their work should be suitably recognized.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Publicity Seems Distasteful.

Protests have been frequent of late as a result of the efforts made by the police to keep from public knowledge as much and as long as possible the thefts of various kinds which are now occurring here in such disquieting numbers. Evidently, however, these protests as yet have been unavailing, for the policy of concealment, or of attempted concealment, is still followed with persistence.

It is unsuccessful, or at any rate it is not wholly successful, for very frequently, if not always, the victims of the robberies, after heeding for a few days the urgent commands of the police to say nothing about their losses, proceed in one way or another to get their misfortunes into the newspapers. Presumably they do not do this in cases when they are satisfied with the energy and the efficiency of the police in recovering the stolen property, and in apprehending the criminals. And some such triumphs there have been, but failures seem to have been far more numerous.

It is yet to be demonstrated that the early or immediate disclosure of thefts committed facilitates in any way or degree the escape from justice of the robbers. But if that demonstration cannot be made, the pleas of the police for secrecy do not deserve to be heard obediently, or even with patience, for only by proving that publicity interferes with their work can they give any sort of plausibility to the contention that it does so. Yet that is the only contention they ever make.

One Purpose Only Is Served.

There have been heard, occasionally, two other arguments in favor of keeping quiet about the commission of crimes. One of them is that if this is not done the city where they are committed gets a bad name; the other is that if it be spread abroad that criminals are reaping a harvest in a certain city they will flock there in large numbers to get a share of the crop.

Both of these arguments are simply absurd, at least from a police point of view, and it is only fair to admit that in New York the police have the sense not to make such humiliating confessions of incompetence as the arguments imply. The only "bad name" a city can get with respect to criminality is that of having an inefficient police force, and the very best way to prevent an influx of criminals is not by concealing the fact that some of them are already in the city, but by letting it be known that they are having a miserable and unprofitable time of it because they are snapped up and sent to jail as soon as they begin to practice their evil arts.

Always, when the police anywhere exhort victims of robbery to say nothing about it, there arises the strong suspicion that what the police fear is not that the thieves will be helped to escape, but that the public will become inconveniently critical of protectors who do not protect. Of police achievements we always hear promptly enough—and gladly enough, too—but we ought to hear as promptly of the tasks that confront the police, for then the motive for performing them will be appreciably increased.

A Perfect Speech of Welcome.

It is far from easy, and perhaps impossible, at this late day, to achieve originality of phrase or epithet in eulogizing the King of the Belgians. Innumerable people, moved by sincerest admiration, already have ascribed to him all the virtues and valors there are, and done it with such eloquence as they possessed. Not infrequently the results have been "fine," in the finest sense of that fine, but often misused, word, for the conduct of this King, ever since he fixed the world's attention at the beginning of the war, has been an inspiration to all orators and writers, or at least to all of them to whom interference with the plans of Germany was not distasteful.

These remarks lead naturally to recognition of the not unimportant fact that Vice President Marshall, having had devolved upon him the task of telling King Albert that, and why, he was welcome in the United States, at least equaled the best efforts of an army of eulogists. His speech of greeting when Albert came down the gangplank was perfect, and variously perfect. For one thing, not least, it was mercifully short. It was simple, too, without being over-simple, and surely it was not the worse for its single flowering in classicism.

Best part of it all was the sentence in which the Vice President told the King from what Americans he had a welcome. "Today," he said, "there is no man in this proud land who loves liberty, fidelity, justice, and courage, who does not gladly greet you, a King without a King's cunning, a man with a man's high sense of honor." That is true—both ends of it, and certain Mayors out in the Middle West should write the words down in their notebooks for study at their leisure.

Too Many Kinds of Bonds.

One does not have to own Liberty and Victory bonds in any vast amounts, or to be at all interested in inconveniences at present involved in their sale, strongly to share the desire expressed down in Wall Street that all of these loans may be consolidated into one. Indeed, it is the small holder—the man with just a few bonds of all five issues—who is most bothered by the differences between them.

As in the case of most bonds, the printing on these is almost unreadable—and quite unrememberable by any except expert financiers. The small holder, as a result, doesn't know, except for brief periods, exactly what he has, what it is worth, or what he can do with it. Coupon-cutting time, too, comes scattering along through the year in a troublesome way for him.

Deep in his heart he has a feeling that a promise made to him when he bought his first Liberty bond—the promise that it could be exchanged for any better ones that came later—has not been kept. His sense of deception is not really justified, of course, but it exists, and it is a pity that it does.

A consolidation of the several loans into one would please every one of the small holders, and they are a multitude in number.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I read with great interest Mr. John H. Judge's letter in The Times of Sept. 30. Unfortunately he has entirely misunderstood the obect of our Mothers' Home Club, where the mothers will have a home in which they can live with their children. I have known of the Little Mother's Aid Society ever since its inception, and think it most excellent for mothers who have to accept charity. The Home Club is for self-supporting mothers who can pay for what they get, including rent.

While day nurseries are admirable, and necessary, our plan goes much deeper. We want the children to be properly nourished at breakfast, dinner, and supper. The tired mother, no matter what her work and wages, is not fit to cook a wholesome meal, and do all her housework, and be an amiable, reasonable, and good mother when she returns to the children at the end of the day. The object is to prevent the mothers from having to accept charity, by giving them and their children a chance to preserve the relationship which ought to exist between mother and child.

MRS. LIONEL SUTRO.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Since thirty-five years all my brothers and sisters have been in New York and, as far as I know, they were still living there in the year 1917. During all this time we have been corresponding, together, but in consequence of the war this correspondence was broken off. Now I have sent various telegrams to New York, from Libau as well as from Berlin, unfortunately without result.

To my telegram from Berlin I got the following reply:

Israel Paley, lodging 51 East 129th Street; owner of two photographic workshops in New York, 141 Division Street and Fifth Avenue.

Jacob Goldstein, lodging also 51 East 129th Street.

WAR'S AFTERMATH.

I, who went forth to war, am home again!
No favorite of Death's, he passed me by.
Through endless days of weary indolence,
Through nights of tortured nerves, of sharp suspense,
Through nameless horrors of the soul and sense,
He branded me;
No favorite of his, he passed me by.

I, who went forth to war, am home again!
America, the free, is mine once more.
Here multitudes of joyous children play,
Here toil finds recompense in ample pay,
Here pleasure treads her measures night and day—
A roundelay.
America, the free, is mine once more.

Oh, you whose lives are crowned, who live in Death,
You know the purpose in war's bloody web.
Oh, Spirit Brothers! Help us weave the rest!
Into life's commonplace there must be pressed
War's sacrificial spirit; this my test—
I, too, am blessed;

FREDERICK VISITS FATHER.

Sees Him at Amerongen for First Time Since Escape.

AMERONGEN, Holland, Oct. 3 (Associated Press).—The former Crown Prince of Germany arrived here this afternoon to visit with his father. His visit had not been announced and scarcely a villager saw his automobile arrive at the castle grounds. The burgomaster of Wieringen accompanied Frederick William, who it is understood, will remain until Monday.

The visit of the former Crown Prince to Amerongen marks the first meeting former Emperor William has had with his son since the monarch fled from Germany.

The Associated Press correspondent learns there is no truth in the rumor that the wife of the former Crown Prince is living in secret at Baarn, eleven miles from Utrecht.

WIERINGEN, Holland, Oct. 3, (Associated Press.)—The former Crown Prince of Germany leaves today to visit former Emperor William at Amerongen for a few days. The Prince will be accompanied by the Dutch Secretary, General Kan.

The former Crown Prince who, it was reported, had requested permission to transfer his residence from Wieringen to Amerongen in order to be near his father and to live in a more agreeable climate, probably will remain throughout the Winter at Wieringen.

THE HAGUE, Oct. 2.—It is reported here that the former Crown Prince of Germany endeavored to purchase various houses in Holland, but, up to the present, without success. Rumor says that the Crown Prince will return to Germany soon, probably due to his failure to purchase a suitable residence and the fact that he is unwilling to face another Winter on the cold, wind-swept island of Wieringen. Rumors are persistent that the Crown Princess did not return to Germany, but still is in Holland.

DISCUSS WOMEN IN WORK.

Foreign Physicians Tell Status of Their Sisters at Home.

Women physicians attending the International Women's Medical Conference at the National Y. W. C. A. headquarters were guests of Mrs. Raymond Robins, President of the National Women's Trades Union League, at the Cosmopolitan Club yesterday afternoon. There they were invited to attend the first International Congress of Working Women, which is to be open in Washington Oct. 23, and were told something of the working women in this country. The foreign physicians spoke of the work of women in their own countries.

Receiving with Mrs. Robins were Mrs. Henry Villard, Miss Lillian Wald, Dr. Katharine Bement Davis, Dr. Anna L. Brown, Mrs. Lewis A. Lapham, Mrs. Robert E. Speer, Miss Rose Schneiderman, Miss Hilda Svenson, Miss Nell Schwartz and Miss Joe Coffin.

Dr. Anna Montet of France said that French women since the war had made an enormous advance in industry, but that the women in this country were better organized than the men in France. Dr. Ada Kahn of China said that the women of her country were going into industries to a surprising extent and that the Chinese students in this country were making a study of agriculture and other industries in order to take ideas home to make China as strong as possible. Dr. Tomo Inouye said there were 250,000 factories in Japan, that many women were working in them and that there were industrial laws for the laboring classes on the order of those in America.

TO BUILD 27 CHURCHES.

Presbyterian Board Announces That Number of Applications Granted.

Applications for the erection of twenty-seven churches and manses at a cost of $97,800 have been granted by the Presbyterian Board of Church Erection, it was announced yesterday at Presbyterian headquarters.

Contributions from the churches for the Presbyterian Board of Missions for Freedmen from the close of the fiscal year, April 1, to the present have been nearly double the amount received over the same period last year, according to a statement made yesterday morning by Dr. John M. Gaston, Secretary. The sum is $23,669, as compared to $12,186 for the same months in 1918.

The funds from the women's department of this board also have shown an increase from $19,000 to $30,000. The large advances are attributed to the Presbyterian new era campaign.

GUIDING CATHOLIC CHILDREN

Guardian Society Cared for 5,000 and Spent $9,000 Last Year.

At a meeting of the Catholic Guardian Society of 139 East Seventeenth Street last night the annual report for the fiscal year was adopted by the directors. Archbishop Hayes presided. The report was submitted by the Rev. Father Samuel Ludlow, Managing Director. It shows that during the year 5,000 visits were made to the rooms of the society by children who have at some time or other been under the care and guidance of the society. One of the features of the report is the savings accounts of some of the children for whom the society has found employment. The report shows that the society is the custodian of $10,000 in savings.

Up to the day the armistice was signed 100 boys under the care of the society had enlisted in either the army or the navy. One boy was killed in the service, Philip Conway, an orphan from the Dominican Convent of Our Lady of the Rosary. The society placed 386 boys and girls in good employment.

The society is supported by voluntary contributions and received during the year $9,408, of which $4,955 was contributed by the City of New York for the care and maintenance of public charges. The society expended $9,367 for relief, such as clothing, medical and surgical care and other items.

TO HELP SAFETY CAMPAIGN.

Long Island Residents to Co-operate in Railroads' National Drive.

That residents of Long Island are ready to co-operate in the forthcoming nation-wide safety campaign, to be conducted simultaneously by all the railroads under Federal control, during the two weeks from Oct. 18 to 31, is indicated by reports sent to Federal Manager Ralph Peters of the Long Island Railroad, from that road's Safety Committee.

The clergy of Long Island have been appealed to, and announcements of the railroads' safety plan made from scores of pulpits. In the public and parochial schools, where T. P. Brennan, Safety Agent of the Long Island Railroad, has been giving talks, the subject is a live one, both with the teachers and the pupils. In his lectures Mr. Brennan calls especial attention to the fact that in the last twenty-eight years no less than 37,714 small children were killed in the United States as the result of jumping on and off passenger and freight cars, or trespassing on railroad property in violation of the law. This is an annual rate of 1,347.

COLBY WILL DIRECT NEWBURGER'S FIGHT

BIG CAMPAIGN COMMITTEE

Membership of 250 Planned—La Guardia Writes Letter to His Ill Opponent, Moran.

It was announced last night that there had been so many offers of co-operation in the campaign to re-elect Justices Joseph E. Newburger of the Supreme Court and Richard H. Smith of the City Court, after the attempt of Tammany Leader Charles F. Murphy to shelve them, that the plan to have a campaign committee composed of fifty members had been abandoned in favor of a plan to make it a campaign committee of 250.

Bainbridge Colby, contrary to expectation, yesterday accepted the place at the head of the campaign committee to be appointed. He made the announcement in a letter sent yesterday to the various organizations backing the candidacy of Justices Newburger and Smith. The letter follows:

"I have decided to accept the very honorable task to which you have invited me, namely, to act as Chairman of your joint committee to promote the candidacy of Hon. Joseph E. Newburger for re-election to his present position as a Judge of the Supreme Court.

"I should have been pleased had your selection fallen upon some one other than myself, and I should have done my utmost to support the efforts of any Chairman upon whom you might have agreed. I do not, however, feel that I can hesitate to accept your call to serve with all that is in me the great cause in which you are enlisted.

"It is a greater cause than any personal candidacy. It is no less than the defense of the purity of our courts and of our entire judiciary system. This is a cause which has the highest claims upon all good citizens, and no man can hesitate to accept any rôle that is assigned to him in its service.

"The re-election of Judges who have served the community as Judge Newburger has, faithfully and well, has become a principle of our unwritten Constitution. The firm establishment of this principle in the hearts and minds of the people marks a great step in our political evolution as a self-governing people. This progress, won after so many heated battles, is too precious to be lost. The principle now fully established is too vital to be compromised.

"The sinister attempt of Tammany Hall, despite the instructions and warnings of defeat in the past, to select candidates for the bench in disregard of this sound and salutary principle must be definitely, and let us hope finally, rebuked by the voters in this election.

"These are times in which great issues occupy men's minds—issues which reach deep into the foundations of our liberties and security. But there is none more vital than the preservation of the integrity of the bench and its hold upon the confidence of the people."

The consent of Bainbridge Colby to serve was not secured until Clarence J. Shearn, a former Justice of the Appellate Division, representing the Bar Association; William J. Schieffelin, head of the Citizens Union, and County Clerk William F. Schneider, Chairman of the Independent Judiciary Committee of One Hundred and Fifty, had wrestled with him in the office of Mr. Shearn for a long while yesterday afternoon. Mr. Colby insisted that he was too busy to accept the management of the Newburger campaign, but when told that he would be "drafted" he consented to serve and give all his time to the work of the campaign, beginning next week.

County Clerk Schneider said that the forces behind the two Justices would have a meeting at the Hotel Astor on Tuesday or Wednesday night at which the Campaign Committee of Two Hundred and Fifty would be organized. Headquarters will be announced at the same time.

Representative Fiorello H. La Guardia, Republican candidate for President of the Aldermanic Board, made public yesterday a letter he had written to his Democratic opponent, President Robert L. Moran of the Board of Aldermen, who at present is gravely ill at the Lincoln Hospital in the Bronx, following an operation for appendicitis. The letter follows:

"I have just heard that you were suddenly taken ill and had to undergo an operation," wrote Mr. La Guardia. "Although I have never had the pleasure of meeting you personally, permit me to extend to you my sincere regret at this misfortune and kind wishes for a speedy recovery. Rest assured that no undue advantage will be taken owing to your illness and should I take up any question upon which we have not already joined issues, I will first submit it to you, and also should you have any statement in reference thereto which you desire to make public, I will, of course, read such statement in connection with mine."

LOCATE MAUNA LOA FLOW.

Lava Comes from 8,500 Feet Above Puokeokeo—Is Checked.

HILO, T. H., Oct. 3, (Associated Press.)—The source of the lava flow from the volcano Mauna Loa, which began to erupt last Saturday, was located today 8,500 feet above Puokeokeo, an offshoot on the Mountain Mauna Kea, which has an elevation of 13,825 feet. The lava flow, 300 feet high and the same breadth, is slightly checked and makes a sobbing-like noise that can be heard for miles.

The lava so far has built a cape a quarter of a mile southward. Observers estimated the flow first traveled to the ocean at the rate of twenty to thirty miles an hour. The lava, which pours like water from the crater, drops 6,000 feet on its twenty-mile flow to the sea.

CHARTER FOR AIRCRAFT MEN

Incorporation of Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce Approved.

Supreme Court Justice Erlanger approved yesterday the incorporation of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of America, of which some of the best known manufacturers are organizers. The purpose is to "promulgate and foster in the United States of America and in its territories and in foreign countries the business of manufacturing, selling, and dealing in aircraft, to map out roads in the air, and to select good places for landing."

The incorporators are Albert H. Flint, W. Benton Crist, Inglis M. Uppercu, Frank H. Russell, William B. Lebherz, George H. Houston, and Samuel H. Bradley.

CUT FOREIGN GARRISONS.

Brest and Paris to be Our Only Army Posts After Oct. 10.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—Brest and Paris will be the only sectors in which active American garrisons will be maintained after Oct. 10, the War Department announced today. Small detachments of Railway and Signal Corps troops will be busy for some time in outlying districts and a contingent of about fifty-five officers and men will remain in England attending to liquidation matters.

Commissioned personnel serving with the American troops in Germany will be limited to 400 men hereafter, the shortage of officers causing this reduction.

CALLS STATE CLAIM AGREEMENTS UNFAIR

W. C. Archer Declares Compensation Settlements Place Ignorant at Disadvantage.

SHOWS REHEARING FIGURES

Secretary of Commission Voices Confidence in Stability of the State Fund.

Testimony regarding the reopening of State insurance cases and the awarding of additional claims was given at yesterday's session of the investigating committee's inquiry into the State Industrial Commission before Commissioner Connor in the City Hall.

Deputy Commissioner William C. Archer of Mount Vernon told at length of various cases of additional awards that had come under his observance.

After stating that he had been connected with the Workmen's Compensation Commission, and its successor, the State Industrial Commission, for five years, Mr. Archer said that all settlements of claims were made through the Commission. Then the law was changed to permit employers to settle directly or through insurance companies, as the result, he thought, of agitation on the part of insurance companies. The law, he said, left the matter directly in the hands of employers, but agreements were sent to the Commission for approval.

Mr. Archer said that the law permitting direct settlements went into effect on April 1, 1915, and for 1915 and 1916 the Commission received 18,215 claims and 32,646 settlements. This proportion held throughout the whole time up to July 1 of this year. He gave the grand total as approximately 117,255 claims and 138,229 agreements. By claims, he said, he meant those dealt with by the Commission, the remainder being outside settlements.

The witness said there had been found very many "thrifty" settlements or cases where claimants were underpaid. In all such cases claim managers were instructed to send them to hearings as well as to rehearings. In many cases he said, where a final adjustment had been made there were still instances where claimants had been underpaid.

Against Voluntary Settlements.

After describing a number of cases where claims had been reheard and where large additional awards had been made, Mr. Archer said it had been concluded that compensation cannot be left to voluntary settlement between employer and employe. He had tabulated 1,000 cases, he said, and out of these 114 injured men had received added awards. The original amount in these cases aggregated $13,712. The rehearings resulted in additional awards, which aggregated $52,279, an increase of more than 370 per cent.

Based on this percentage to the 1,000 cases, Mr. Archer said that at the same ratio they would have had 3,102 cases in the year in which additional awards would be made at the average of $450 a case. This would work out to more than $1,400,000 in the year. He said he had figured out the same ratio for other years. Since the agreement law went into effect there had been approximately a greater number of agreement cases. If the same rule should hold, 9 per cent., or 12,600 cases, at the per capita given would mean a total additional award of $5,770,800.

Mr. Archer discussed changes whereby new claimants are brought before the commission. Generally employes, he said, are so ignorant of their rights that, left to their own devices, it would be easy to get them to settle for comparatively small sums, totally irrelative to the nature of their injuries or based on the extent of their disabilities. He said that a re-examination of all the old agreement cases is now in progress at the suggestion of Governor Smith.

Payment of Dividends.

Evidence concerning the payment of dividends was given at length by F. Spencer Baldwin, Manager of the State Insurance Fund. He testified that to discontinue such payments, even when the total business of the fund showed a loss, would mean the withdrawal of the special groups of policyholders from the fund.

Joseph H. Woodward of Pelham Manor, formerly actuary to the State Fund, made the various reports on which Manager Baldwin based his plea for the continuance of the payments of dividends. Mr. Woodward said that during his connection with the fund, from 1914 to 1918, he favored the payment of so-called dividends to special groups, but that personally he had never favored special groups in such insurance, but thought the plan a good one under existing conditions.

"Your statement that the discontinuance of dividends would work injury was based upon your assumption that it would be equivalent to cancelling their policies?" asked Miles M. Dawson, counsel to the investigating committee.

"Yes," said the witness, "and I believe that at that time we were about through the storm. We had been having a very strenuous couple of years and I believe that the signs were that premium income was at last to overcome the losses and that if we could simply continue as we had been doing without disturbing things for another six months, that everything would come out all right."

Mowbray Is Confident.

Albert H. Mowbray, Secretary of the commission, was next examined, and after giving testimony regarding the present condition of the fund he was asked this question: "As an experienced workmen's compensation actuary, connected with one of the most successful mutual companies, you are willing to stand without any hesitation or reservation for the proposition that the State fund is in a strong, unassailable position, with an actual surplus and sound assets, and able to carry out its agreements with its policy holders?"

"Absolutely."

Yesterday's testimony practically completed the investigation into the affairs of the State Insurance Fund proper. Mr. Dawson will recall Manager Baldwin next week for a few more questions, but the record of the fund is substantially ready for the preparation of Commissioner Connor's report. There will be another session next Monday afternoon.

Abraham Bernstein, chief accountant of the State Insurance Fund, who was indicted by the Grand Jury last Tuesday on testimony growing out of the investigation yesterday, entered a plea of not guilty through his attorney, George Medalie, before Judge Otto A. Rosalsky in General Sessions. Bail was fixed at $5,000.

SAYS MARSDEN TOOK GRAFT.

Louis Markowitz, a Manhattan jeweler and one of the Government's principal witnesses at the court-martial of Lieut. Commander Christopher Marsden at the New York Navy Yard, Brooklyn, on charges of accepting graft for placing navy applicants in soft berths during the war, testified yesterday that Lieut. Commander Marsden received money, jewelry, cigars, champagne, and other presents, including silk shirts.

From the records of the charges against both the defendant and Lieutenant Benoit J. Ellert, who has already pleaded guilty to similar graft charges, Markowitz was lavish in money and gifts to the two navy officers. Lieutenant Ellert, according to the witness, received, besides money, some socks and handkerchiefs.

The witness in explaining the method he used in arranging for soft berths for his friends, declared that the navy applicant would talk to him in his office, then Markowitz would visit Lieutenant Ellert and the latter would go with the applicant to Lieut. Commander Marsden's office. The defendant was in charge of the enrollment office of the Third Naval District. According to the witness, Lieutenant Ellert would ask him for large sums of money so that other navy officers would be "taken care of" in arranging for the enrollment or transfer of the applicants.

Markowitz said that he gave Lieutenant Marsden $200 for enrolling Michael Scheer.

Markowitz, when he was questioned about the enrollment of Philip Horowitz of 123 West 113th Street, Manhattan, admitted he received $3,000 from Horowitz, but he divided this money with others.

ELECTION FRAUDS CHARGED.

Report That Grand Jury Has Returned One or More Indictments.

It was reported at the Criminal Court Building yesterday that one or more indictments charging a misdemeanor had been returned by the Grand Jury on complaints made by the Board of Elections concerning the genuineness of signatures appearing on several nominating certificates for independent candidates for Aldermen. None of the names of persons involved in the indictment was mentioned.

Assistant District Attorney Unger said that investigations by the Board of Elections and the District Attorney showed that some of the signatures on one or more of the certificates had been written by the same person. Some of those whose names appeared on the certificates said they had authorized others to sign for them, and other supposed signers denied they had written their signatures or had authorized any one to add their names to the list.

KLOTS WEDDING IN LONDON.

New York Lawyer to Marry Miss Mary Fitz-Brown Next Monday.

The marriage of Allen Trafford Klots, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Allen Klots of this city and Huntington, L. I., and Miss Mary Fitz-Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fitz-Brown of Shirley, Hunts Cross, Liverpool, England, is to take place in All Souls' Church, London, on Monday next. After Nov. 1 Mr. Klots and his bride will be at home at 4 West Fifty-third Street.

Mr. Klots served overseas for fifteen months, first as a Lieutenant with the 305th Field Artillery, 77th Division, receiving three wounds. Later he was with the American Food Administration in Paris, where he had charge of the Polish affairs, which country he visited, returning to this country last June. He is a graduate of Yale, class of '09, and of the Harvard Law School, in 1913, being now with the law firm of Winthrop & Stimson.

Engaged to Maj. H. C. W. de Brun.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Dolmetsch of 780 West End Avenue announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Mathilde Dolmetsch, to Major Harry C. W. Schultz de Brun, son of Colonel and Mrs. John Schultz de Brun of this city. Miss Dolmetsch was an ambulance driver of the Motor Corps of the National League for Women's Service during the war.

Major de Brun is a graduate of New York University, Fordham University, and the University of Bordeaux, France. He was surgeon with the allied forces in 1915, and when the Mexican situation became acute returned and was commissioned in the Medical Corps of the United States Army. He has recently returned from service with the American Expeditionary Forces. No plans have been made for the wedding.

Orr-Bernard Engagement Broken.

The engagement of Miss Constance de Forest Orr, of 30 East Sixtieth Street, this city, a daughter of the late S. Alexander Orr, of Albany, and Benjamin F. Bernard Jr., of Asheville, N. C., has been broken by mutual consent. It was announced in May, 1918.

BLACKFEET HONOR PRINCE OF WALES

ANCIENT RITES AT CEREMONY

Special to The New York Times.

LETHBRIDGE, Alberta, Oct. 3.—The Prince of Wales is east of the Rockies again, in the land of grain and coal and red Indians—particularly red Indians at this moment. Half an hour ago he was standing on the fine furs scattered on earthen floor of Chief Weasel Fat's wigwam. He received an old and historic horned head dress, which has been worn by a line of redoubtable chieftains and accepted the name and rank of "Mekas-to," that is "Red Crow," head chief of the blood tribe of the Blackfeet nation.

He was met at the outposts of this tribe at McLeod, a small town to which he came this morning through the first snowfall. Here a group of braves and squaws in their bright garments gave color to the hearty welcome. After getting some exercise the Prince traveled on over the prairie to Lethbridge.

In spite of lowering and cold weather, Lethbridge turned out in full strength, and there was no mistaking the tenor of the greeting. When the formalities were over the Prince drove to the exhibition grounds through crowds right up to the axle of his automobile. Before a line of wigwams on the grounds there was a gathering of the chiefs, aquiline and immobile men with strange, odd-sounding names. A chief sat on both sides of Chief Weasel Fat. Chief One Shot, Chief Many White Horses, and others gathered, dressed in feathers—at times only feathers upon bowler hats—and in beaded dresses. Here the head dress of horns and beads and fur was given to the Prince, together with the name of "Red Crow," which is a name of moment with this tribe, for it has been held by famous chiefs and handed down from generation to generation.

After receiving his chieftainship the Prince asked to see the inside of one of the wigwams, and was taken into that of Weasel Fat, over the door of which was painted a bald-headed eagle. The wigwam was a fine and airy place, strewn with fine rugs, decorated with bright strips of cloth, upon which Indians and animals of the chase were depicted, and containing a rattanwork bed, musical instruments, and the like. A wood fire burned in the centre, sending its smoke up through the opening of lean-to poles that formed the framework.

WEDS FIRST HUSBAND'S KIN.

Mrs. L. C. J. Thomas Marries Theodore G. Thomas, Half-Brother.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Mrs. Louisa Carroll Jackson Thomas, a daughter of Mrs. Ella Willing Jackson, and the late Oswald Jackson of this city, and a direct descendant of Charles Carroll, a signer of the Declaration of Independence, to Theodore Gaillard Thomas, a son of the late Dr. T. Gaillard Thomas and Mrs. Mary Willard Thomas of New York, and a great grandson of Emma Willard. The marriage took place on Wednesday in Christ Church, New Haven.

Mr. Thomas is a half brother of Mrs. Thomas' first husband, J. Metcalf Thomas. Ensign T. Gaillard Thomas, 2d, is a son of Mrs. Thomas by her first husband.

Miss Locke's Wedding Tuesday.

Miss Helen Frances Locke, only daughter of John M. Locke of 440 West End Avenue, and Henry Frederic Peake, will be married next Tuesday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock in Calvary Church, Fourth Avenue and Twenty-first Street. The ceremony will be followed by a small reception for the immediate members of the family at the home of the bride.

Miss Haines to Wed M. W. Rundle.

Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Haines of 330 West 102d Street, this city and Brewster, N. Y., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Marion Haines, to Merritt White Rundle, a son of the late Anthony W. Rundle and Mrs. Rundle of Danbury, Conn., and a grandson of Samuel H. Rundle of that city.

Shields-Singer Wedding Today.

The wedding of Miss Florence Singer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. Singer of 125 East Seventy-second Street, and Dr. Nelson Turner Shields, Jr., son of Dr. and Mrs. N. T. Shields of 61 West Fifty-sixth Street, will take place this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock at the Hotel St. Regis. The Rev. Dr. Ernest H. Stires will officiate.

Miss Harding to Make Debut at Ball.

Activities in the débutant world will be resumed during the coming season, after the abandonment of coming-out affairs during the war. One of the early functions will take place on Nov. 29, when Mr. and Mrs. J. Horace Harding of 955 Fifth Avenue will give a ball at the Ritz-Carlton for their daughter, Miss Catharine Harding.

Robert L. Moran Improving.

Robert L. Moran, the President of the Board of Aldermen, who was operated on Wednesday afternoon for acute gangrenous appendicitis, was reported last night to be resting comfortably in his room at the Lincoln Hospital. Dr. J. Lewis Amster was much encouraged by his patient's improved condition. His temperature has dropped and his pulse is nearer normal.

Dr. William A. De Long Dies.

Dr. William A. De Long, who was for twenty-five years the medical officer of the Fire Department of Brooklyn and Queens Boroughs, died yesterday at his residence, 170 Bainbridge Street, Brooklyn. He was in his eightieth year. Dr. De Long was born in this city, and during the civil war was appointed Assistant Surgeon in the 77th Regiment, New York Volunteers. He was in several battles of the war, and then returned to Brooklyn and resumed his practice as a physician. Dr. De Long was appointed to the Fire Department by Fire Commissioner Wurster in 1894, and served continuously until last July, when he was retired with the rank of Chief of Battalion. He was a Past Master of Marsh Lodge, 188, F. and A. M.

DUCHESS CHARLOTTE OF SAXE-MEININGEN DIES

Ex-Emperor William's Eldest Sister Was Said to Have Regarded Him as a Poseur.

BERLIN, Oct. 3, (Associated Press.)—Duchess Charlotte of Saxe-Meiningen, eldest sister of former Emperor William of Germany, died today at Baden Baden in her fifty-ninth year.

The Prussian Princess, who was married to the then heir to the throne of Saxe-Meiningen in 1878, leaves one daughter—a Princess Henry of Reuss.

Duchess Charlotte figured prominently in the German newspapers in 1912, when a boxing promoter, appealing against the decision of the Berlin Chief of Police, who had forbidden a prize fight under his auspices, declared that this daughter of Prussian royalty had been among the spectators at the fight between Carpentier and Jack Sullivan at Monte Carlo. Maximilian Harden sought to call her as a witness in the celebrated libel case of Count von Moltke against him in 1907, claiming that she had been the person who supplied him with information regarding the Eulenburg disclosure to the Kaiser, but the court declined to summon her to the stand. She had a number of American acquaintances and repeatedly entertained Americans at her residence.

The Duchess was an able and witty woman, well able to take care of herself in her disputes with her brother, the Emperor. She was said to have regarded him as a poseur and not to have accepted his assumed authority over his family.

Her husband, Duke Bernhard, did not come to the throne till June 25, 1914. Saxe-Meiningen was proclaimed a republic last November.

Bishop John C. Sage.

SALINA, Kan., Oct. 3.—Bishop John C. Sage of the Episcopal diocese of Salina, died suddenly today. Bishop Sage came to this diocese about two years ago. He is survived by the widow and one daughter, Mrs. Arthur Taber of Red Wing, Minn. The Bishop was born in Cleveland in 1866. He was consecrated bishop in January, 1917. He was editor of the Iowa Churchman 1903-13, and managing editor of The Witness since 1917. He was the author of Private Prayers for the Faithful.

George Rosenfeld.

George Rosenfeld, President of the George Rosenfeld Company, real estate, of 51 East Forty-second Street, and a member of the firm of Sydney Blumenthal & Co., manufacturers of velvets, of 395 Fourth Avenue, died yesterday at his home, 328 West Eighty-third Street. He was 58 years old. For twenty-five years he was a trustee of the Association for Improved Instruction of Deaf Mutes, and was a former president of that institution, which was founded by an ancestor, Isaac Rosenfeld. For many years he had been a generous benefactor of Jewish charities.

ROSENFELD.—George. At a special meeting of the Board of Trustees of the ASSOCIATION FOR THE IMPROVED INSTRUCTION OF DEAF-MUTES of the City of New York the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

The Board of Trustees, profoundly grieved at the death of their beloved associate, George Rosenfeld, make this record as an expression of the deep sense of the affliction which they have sustained.

For twenty-five years a member of its Board of Trustees and some time its President, George Rosenfeld was ever a source of inspiration and of wise counsel to this association. A member of the family whose ancestor was the founder of this association, George Rosenfeld carried forward with unfaltering consistency and with rarely conscientious zeal the fine traditions under which this association began its work of alleviating the natural infirmity of its afflicted wards. The welfare of the children in our charge, the contentment of our teachers in their difficult and self-sacrificing work, and the improvement and enlargement of our activities were ever dear to his heart and the subject of his conscientious and untiring attention.

Resolved, therefore, That in the death of George Rosenfeld this association, its pupils, instructors, and Trustees have lost a true friend.

Resolved, further, That as a mark of respect to his memory the flag of the institution be placed at half-mast, that the Board of Trustees attend his funeral in a body, and that these resolutions, suitably engrossed, be transmitted to his sorrowing family with the assurance of our deep sympathy with them in their great affliction.

Attest: FELIX H. LEVY, President.

Declares Chicago's Little Southpaw Proved Class by Shutting Out Cincinnati.

ROUSH MAKES A MISTAKE

By CHRISTY MATHEWSON.

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—Richard Kerr, the White Sox midget pitcher, broke into the limelight of the world's series today by shutting out the Reds. When you analyze his work to see just how he did it, you will be compelled to admit that he is entitled to all the fame that is coming to any one for such a feature.

In the first inning the Reds were retired in one, two, three order. In the second Duncan got a hit, a Texas leaguer, which did not disconcert Kerr, since he used to pitch down in Texas. In inning No. 3 Fisher got a scratch hit, a slow roller down the third-base line which Kerr reached after Weaver had decided to permit the ball to roll foul, if it would. Groh walked in the fourth, and in the following inning Kopf knocked a real single through the infield to right centre field. During the remainder of the game, fast in point of time, not a Red batter reached first base.

This tells the entire story of what Kerr did to Pat Moran's boys. He worked with his head as well as his arm, using a slow curve, a corner-cutting fast ball, and a clever change of pace. Duncan was the only Red who was able to meet the ball squarely, and his one effort was a smash that went on a line to Risberg, who then doubled Groh by tossing the ball to Collins.

In blanking the Reds Kerr was ably assisted by Risberg, who made several excellent plays on slow rollers and accepted ten chances without an error. His throwing from all positions was one of the pretty features of the game.

Reds' Defense Cracks.

Almost helpless on the offense, the Reds cracked slightly in their defensive work. Joe Jackson was the first Sox batsman in the second inning. He was facing Ray Fisher, who is no stranger to the American Leaguers and who is supposed to like cold weather, which was far from being the climate here today. Jackson, after two strikes, smashed a sharp single to left and brought Felsch to bat.

"I hope Gleason doesn't make him bunt again," said a fan sitting behind me.

Felsch did bunt, however, and Fisher, with an easy chance to force Jackson at second and break the threatened rally, threw the ball to centre field. Roush had no real chance to get Jackson at third base, yet he threw the ball there and allowed Felsch to race on to second. This situation compelled the Red infield to play close in, and perhaps turned the tide. If Felsch had not been allowed to reach second he would have been doubled on Gandil's bounder, which went through the closely drawn infield into right and sent home two runners.

When Risberg walked it looked as though the Sox were in for a big inning, but Fisher made a great play on Schalk's bunt and forced Gandil at third, helped by the fact that the Sox first baseman did not slide into the bag. The next two Sox were easy outs, and for the rest of the game Cincinnati put up its usual strong defense, especially in the third inning, when Daubert ran at full speed to catch a fly that Jackson bunted over Fisher's head. Felsch followed with a slashing grounder to Groh, who made a great stop and throw to Rath, who doubled Felsch at first base.

Work Squeeze Play.

Chicago scored its third run by successfully working the squeeze play after Risberg had made a scratchy three-bagger down the first base line. The attack of the White Sox at this stage of the game shows that they are going to be a dangerous club to beat, especially when they gain a lead in any game.

Moran's defensive work in the face of rather discouraging situations was excellent, and the White Sox scored about the minimum of runs in regard to their chances.

Rariden's foxy work behind the bat helped greatly. His throwing was excellent, and on two occasions he broke up the White Sox scheme of attack by pitchouts that stopped their hit-and-run plays, and nailed two runners at second.

The big excitement of the game was caused by the appearance of Sherry Magee in the world's series. Sherry did not cause the excitement directly, because he flied out when pinch hitting, but his appearance resulted in Jimmy Smith making his début as third base coacher, and Jimmy enlivened the occasion at the close of the inning by asking Happy Felsch when he was going to make a hit.

As Felsch has walloped several on the nose in the series without getting them safe, this style of repartee did not appeal to Happy, who retorted by asking Jimmy what bush league he expected to be in next year. This so enraged Jimmy that it required the entire force of umpires and all the Cincinnati club to get Smith back to the bench.

Fans Like Scrappy Games.

This appeared to please the big crowd. The fans are in favor of seeing scrappy games. At that, it was a welcome relief after the "I beg your pardon for touching you so hard" style of play that has prevailed in the present series.

Señor Luque pitched the eighth inning for the Redlegs, and his work delighted the eyes of Señor Munoz, who is reporting the series for his paper, El Mundo, in Havana. The headlines in El Mundo tomorrow probably will tell how near Señor Luque came to adding the fame of Cuba and the coin of the Cincinnati bettors by "almost," but not quite, winning a game for the Reds.

The victory of the Sox encouraged the Chicago rooters, who seemed quite discouraged this morning. They were so discouraged that there were vacant seats in all parts of Comiskey's plant. Now the White Sox rooters are almost as wild as the Redland fans have been. If Cicotte can stage a comeback in the game tomorrow, there is going to be a lot of excitement and a lot less politeness in this series.

ARREST ALLEGED SCALPERS

Internal Revenue Agents Take 12 Men Into Custody in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—Twelve alleged ticket scalpers were arrested in downtown hotel lobbies and at Comiskey Park today, accused of selling seats to the world's series game at a profit as high as 800 per cent. The arrests were made by Internal Revenue agents and their deputies.

One of the men arrested was said to have a block of tickets which cost him $49.50 and on which he realized $380. Speculators thronged the hotel lobbies during the morning selling box seats for three games with a face value of $16.50 for prices ranging from $40 to $75. Half an hour before the contest, however, the speculators appeared to be anxious to sell their wares at any price. Some sold at a loss.

The specific charge to be preferred against the alleged scalpers involves their failure to register as ticket brokers. Federal war tax regulations permit ticket speculators to realize a profit of fifty cents on each ticket, but all profit above this amount must be divided equally with the Government.

Fisher, Moran figured that he had picked a boxman who would be perfectly at home in Comiskey Park. But the Sox went at Fisher hammer and tongs.

In the second inning Joe Jackson started the thumping of Fisher. The Vermont school master went through the first inning without giving a hit. Jackson laced a single to left at the opening of the second, and Buck Weaver laid down a bunt intending to sacrifice Jackson to second. Fisher fielded the ball and turned to make a force play on Jackson at second. The throw was a criminally wild heave which sailed over Rath's head and rolled out between right and centre field. The whole South Side echoed with cheers as Jackson rushed to third and Weaver went to second on this error.

Fisher's tempestuous loss was the start of his downfall. It set the table for the run banquet which came a moment later when Chick Gandil chopped a single to right and propelled two runs home.

Chicago is singing the praises of Dick Kerr tonight. He allowed the Reds only three hits, and not once during the afternoon did Moran's men show any signs of scoring. Only three of the Reds got as far as second base, and there they anchored. My, what a comedown for the Reds, who came here keyed up to ride over the Sox just as roughly as they did in Cincinnati! They were out to make a new world's series record by winning five straight. It was a bitter pill to swallow.

Dick Kerr Makes Good.

Kerr is the coolest little rooster who has ever edged his way unheralded into a world's series. He was making his début in the blue ribbon event with the odds all against him.

Instead of a wild left-hander shaking with stage fright in the face of the Redland troupe, Kerr looked them over with nerves of chilled steel. The diminutive pitcher had arrived at the pinnacle of triumph in the world of sport after a hard, rough schooling.

Not so very long ago Dicky Kerr was a professional boxer out in Milwaukee. He was a bantam and could take a beating and give one. He played everything, baseball, boxing, football, and the boys couldn't come too big for him to touch. On the lots of Milwaukee, where this world's series Tom Thumb used to rough and tumble around with the other lads, little Dick had the reputation of being able to fight his weight in wildcats.

At first the large boys didn't want him to play baseball and football with them because he was too small. They told him just once too often that he was a little shaver, and then Dick walloped the lad who said it. After that Dick was invited to take part in all of the hardy sporting events on the sand lots.

Kerr looks like the White Sox' batboy, and he has a sunny, smiling disposition which gives no inclination of the gameness and fight which lurk in his makeup.

Kerr faced a trying ordeal. In Cincinnati he sat silently on the bench and saw the Reds annihilate Eddie Cicotte, the one pitcher in the world to whom Dick looked up as his idol. He saw Cicotte cruelly smashed out of the box and again he saw Lefty Williams go down in bitter defeat. On all sides of him he heard the fans say that the Reds could murder right and left handers with ease.

In a Cincinnati hotel Dick good-naturedly took all the gibes which were flung at him. As the White Sox trooped into the hotel last Tuesday morning he heard a Red rooter inquire, "What's that kid going to do? Carry the water pail?" Dick showed them today. He made them eat their words just as he made the big lads in Milwaukee let him play with them.

Jack Dempsey Sees Game.

Jack Dempsey, the heavyweight champion of the world, watched Kerr with great interest. The giant killer yelled with glee as, inning after inning, Kerr zipped over slants which the Reds couldn't hit safely. "It's too bad," said Jack, "that kid didn't say in the ring. He packs an awful wallop in that left mitt."

The Red rooters yelled with delight when the announcer shouted through the magaphone that Kerr was going to pitch. Only a moment before the photographers lined Kerr and Fisher up together and snapped their pictures. They looked like father and son having a picture post card made to send home to the folks. As the game wore along and little Kerr grew stronger and stronger, the noise of the Cincinnati rooters was silenced and before the game was over it was as if there wasn't a fan from Cincinnati in the park.

The remarkable defense of Heinie Groh at third base for the Reds cut off a couple of White Sox rallies, and the Chicago crowd was not sparing in its applause for the skillful fielding of the Redland star. In the third inning with two Sox aboard, on first and second, Happy Felsch pasted a wicked grounder through the left wing of the infield. Groh hopped in for the ball, knocked it down with one hand, and recovered it so quickly that he started a double play, which cut off a heap of trouble for Fisher. Again in the seventh, Groh made a great stop on Risberg's lurid bouncer, corralling the ball for a wonderful stop in time to cut the Swede down at first.

Ill Feeling Among Players.

The defeat of the Reds this afternoon did not sit very well. In the first inning, Heinie Groh showed signs of being peeved when little Kerr struck him out. The first real outbreak among the rival players, however, bobbed up toward the end of the game. Pat Moran sent Jimmy Smith, a utility infielder, who used to play with the Giants, out to third base to coach. Smith is the official goat-getter of the Reds. His business in life is to tarry on the base lines and tell the opposition what awful ball players they are.

Jimmy began to spill conversation of this stripe to Buck Weaver and Eddie Collins, and, after the seventh inning, Collins and Smith were ready to mix it up when Umpire Billy Evans stepped in and prevented a fight. After the game the fans swarmed on to the field around third base where Smith had been coaching, expecting a continuation of the outbreak. But Buck Weaver was smiling too much to be mad about anything, and Eddie Collins laughed it off. arms around Smith in a brotherly manner and they disappeared together under the grandstand.

Heinie Groh and Nemo Leibold also exchanged a few words with each other, but all this goes to show that the players are keyed up to the right pitch, and that the series may be a real battle after all.

The White Sox got down to business in the second inning, after Fisher had let them down in order in the opening round. Jackson led off in the second with the first hit of the game, a healthy single to left. It was Felsch's intention to sacrifice, and he laid a bunt on the infield lawn. Fisher picked it up and made a throw to second to force Jackson. This was the heave which went wild, the ball soaring to the outfield. Jackson trotted around to third and Felsch went to second on the error. Gandil walloped the first ball pitched to right for a single, and Jackson and Felsch scored. This was a fine bit of base running on the part of Felsch. The single was quickly cut down by Neale, and it was only by the liveliest kind of sprinting that Happy was able to score.

This so badly upset Fisher that he gave Risberg a pass. Schalk bunted a roller to Fisher, who tossed to Groh, forcing Gandil, who had taken second when the ball was thrown to the plate in an effort to head off Felsch. Kerr cracked a grounder to Fisher, and Risberg was forced at third. Leibold jammed a red-hot bouncer to Groh, who made a clever one-handed stop and tossed the runner out at first for the final out.

Great Fielding by Groh.

The Sox were on their way to give the Reds a whole lot of trouble in the third, when Groh's defense changed their plans. Eddie Collins opened the inning with a steaming liner over Larry Kopf's roof. Weaver got a hit to short, sending Eddie Collins to second. There was much excitement on the Cincinnati bench, and Moran sent Eller and Luque, the Cuban, out to warm up. Jackson hoisted a pop fly to Daubert back of first base. Felsch then chopped a tearing drive to Groh, who knocked the ball down. He recovered it in time to get Weaver at second and double up Felsch at first.

In the fourth, after Groh tossed Gandil out at first, Charley Risberg banged a seething drive to right, which he sliced over to the foul line. Neale could not catch up with the ball, and Risberg raced all the way around to third. Schalk then laid down a perfect bunt, and Risberg scored with the third and last run for the Sox.

The story of the Cincinnati attack on Kerr's curves is a sad, undramatic tale. The first of their three hits came in the second inning. With one gone, Pat Duncan jammed a single to right. He got as far as second when Risberg fumbled Kopf's grounder just long enough to spoil the chances for a double play. But Risberg recovered the ball in time to get Kopf at first.

The second hit came in the third, when Fisher laid a bunt on the infield and Kerr stumbled when he tried to field the ball. Fisher had the little hitlet beaten out any way. The only lapse in Kerr's control came in the fourth, when Heinie Groh was favored with the only pass which the little Chicago left-hander issued during the game. After Roush had been tossed out at first after a gorgeous stop by Risberg, Duncan crashed a terrific liner right into the hands of the Chicago shortstop, and Groh was doubled up before he could get back to second.

Kopf opened the fifth with a single to right, and Neale forced him at second. Neale got to second on Rariden's out, and there he was marooned. After that fifth inning Kerr went along beautifully. In the last four innings only twelve of the Cincinnati batsmen faced him.

One of the most tickled spectators at today's game was Clarence Rowland, who led the White Sox to the world's title over the Giants in 1917. He was more than pleased when Kerr put over his sensational shutout, because Clarence is now the manager of the Milwaukee club, where little Dick is a popular lad.

The blanking of the Reds this afternoon puts an entirely different aspect on the series. It is expected that the White Sox will go into tomorrow's game with renewed confidence, and will give the Reds a desperate battle.

Today's victory means that the two clubs will have to go back to Cincinnati on Monday to play the sixth game, regardless of the results of the next two contests here.

Feared Cicotte Is Through.

There is much speculation here tonight about the Chicago pitcher for tomorrow. The success of Kerr, a left-hander, was so marked that Gleason may risk sending his wild man, Williams, in tomorrow. Manager Gleason is in desperate straits for pitchers. It is believed that Cicotte is all through, and that his arm is in no shape to tackle another game at this time. Cicotte, however, is anxious to get back at the Reds, and he may be given another chance. Big Bill James is aching for a chance to pitch, and the former Brave may get a chance to play.

The Reds are not worrying about pitchers, for they have so many that Moran's problem is only to decide which one is in the best shape. Hod Eller and Ring are still waiting and ready for a chance, and one of these flingers may be Moran's choice tomorrow.

MAGEE'S AMBITION FINALLY REALIZED

Outfielder Gets Into World's Series Game After Waiting Sixteen Long Years.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., Oct. 3.—For the first time since his major league baseball career started sixteen years ago Sherry Magee batted in a world's series game here this afternoon. The veteran outfielder's chance came in the first half of the eighth inning, when he was sent in to pinch hit for Ray Fisher when Pat Moran thought a Red tally was due. Sherry advanced to the plate radiating confidence in his every move, as if he realized the significance of this first time at bat in a championship baseball game and wanted to do the occasion justice.

Kerr's first offering was rather close and a trifle high and Sherry stepped nimbly back. The next came sailing over a corner of the rubber and Magee slashed at it with all the power of his strong arms and shoulders back of the swing. His effort resulted in a sizzling grounder to foul territory which bounced off the fence surrounding the boxes back of third. The next one Sherry fancied and he slammed the ball hard. The sphere rose higher and higher in the air in a journey to right field, where Nemo Leibold set himself firmly and made a comparatively easy catch. With the catch passed Magee's chance to jump into the limelight on his first turn at bat in a world's series game.

Neal's great catch of Leibold's smashing drive to right in the Sox first inning was comparable to the glittering catch made yesterday by Eddie Roush in the second game of the series at Cincinnati. Both were very difficult, but Neale's was more on the circus order. Neale went after the ball as if he was back in his college days and plunging his way through the opposing line in a collegiate football game. In this manner, it will be remembered, incidentally, Earle got his nickname of Greasy. It is said of him that he went through and past all gridiron opposition during his career in Southern collegiate football like a streak of greased lightning. Neale plunged in from a position in deep right with the crack of the ball from Leibold's bat.

Leibold's smash today was a low traveling line drive, which drew nearer the ground as it advanced in its flight beyond the infield, and Neale increased his speed for the catch. Just when the ball was about to land on terra firma Neale made a dive, extended his gloved hand, clasped the ball in a viselike grip, buried his nose in the grass, turned a complete somersault, and then came up with a satisfied expression on his face, holding the ball aloft while in a kneeling posture on the ground.

The play was enacted in much less time than it takes to recount, and will live forever as one of the most brilliant of a world's series game. When he rose on his knees with the ball held above his head, Neale received an ovation which rocked the foundations of Comiskey Park. The crowd didn't stop its cheering until Neale had raised his hat in acknowledgment and was once again watching the batters' box eagerly.

The Chicago fan is nothing if not versatile in the matter of devising ways for cheering the team which carries his hopes and in some cases his money. This was demonstrated here this afternoon. In the huge crowd which occupied the available accommodations at Comiskey Park were many fans who came to the field burdened with various makes of automobile horns, with which they were prepared for any occasion which warranted cheers. Obviously the Sox supporters prefer mechanical rather than natural noise. But it is questionable if the fans seated with or near the enthusiastic horn tooters were of the same mind.

There was one fan in particular this afternoon who had a piercing Klaxon that could be heard all over the park. With this instrument of noise, the fan in question set up a terrific din after each play which to his mind merited a degree of notice. The funny part of it was that the fan had opportunities to utilize his medium of noise several times each inning, and when the Sox trooped in off the field after retiring the Reds without a score, and many times without a hit, the fan and his horn went frantic with joy. From the grimaces on the faces of some seated near him there were spectators who were frantic with anger at the ear-splitting explosion.

"Whoa" Bill Rariden, who caught Ray Fisher, had a perfect day behind the bat, and killed off any and all Sox who attempted liberties with his throwing arm. Three of the Sox fell victims to Bill's accuracy in whizzing the ball down to second. In the fourth Ray Schalk thought he would pilfer second, but found Rariden ready with a bulletlike peg to Rath. In the sixth Joe Jackson and Hap Felsch tried to sneak down to the middle bag, but again Rariden was on the alert, and the two Sox were killed off with perfect throws. Before the game both Wingo and Rariden warmed up in the catcher's box, but Manager Moran selected the former Giant when the game started.

During the batting practice before the game a trio of singers took up positions with the band back of third base and started at their profession. The songsters went on unmindful of the fact that the teams were batting hard-hit balls about the field until Eddie Roush stepped to the plate for a turn with the stick against Rube Bressler, who was serving them up. Roush cracked one of Bressler's offerings on a line through the group of singers, and only a quick glance around by a warbler encased in a green suit, which blended harmoniously with the grass, prevented a possible accident. As it was, the singer had to duck nimbly to escape having the megaphone dislodged from his grasp by the fast-traveling ball.

Pat Moran came near being beaned during the practice by a ball that was popped high in the air by Rariden. Pat was engaging himself taking balls from a bag back of the box and passing them along to Bressler. Suddenly Rariden lifted a pop which landed with a plump a few inches from where Moran was bending over the bag in search for more baseballs.

Bressler himself had to duck to escape being decapitated by a fast drive from the bat of Jimmy Smith, the former giant, who lined a drive that went straight at Rube's bean.

Sherry Magee was prominent in the batting practice until he lost his grip on the bat and the war club went sailing clear to third base. Sherry walked back to the Reds' bench and didn't appear again, until called on to bat for Fisher.

As the crowds walked the runways to their seats they were attracted by the sight of a detachment of marines in bright uniforms, standing at the head of the paths and yelling instructions to the ticket holders how best to reach their seats. The stunt was novel and pleased the spectators.

Salvation Army lassies lined the runways and cluttered about the several entrances to the park, extending collection boxes to the fans on their way to the game. The generous fans were given celluloid tags in exchange for their contributions and there was an impressive evidence of generosity reflected from the coat lapels of the fans as they looked on at the game.

Fisher and Kerr were called upon by the camera men to pose before the game and the two twirlers clasped hands and laughed like the closest of friends. It's a good thing the picture man didn't make snapshots after the game. Fisher's smile had faded.

The left field bleacher crowd gave the Red outfielders a good-natured "razzing" during the afternoon's practice and abused the players when they refused to throw batted balls into the stands. When Joe Jackson took the field for the Sox practice, however, the "razzing" and abuse was changed into ringing cheers.

Jack Dempsey, heavyweight boxing champion, occupied a box in the upper tier just back of the home plate during the early innings. With Dempsey was Jack Kearns, his manager; Otto Floto, Denver promoter, and Edward Arlington of the Arlington Brothers circus. Arlington declared that Dempsey was leaving Chicago tonight to take up work with a circus at New Orleans. The heavyweight champion and his manager stayed around long enough to see the Sox chase home their winning runs, but after that the game held no attraction for them and they departed.

Among the notable persons for whom boxes had been reserved for today's game were the Governors of Ohio, Minnesota, Indiana, Kentucky, and Illinois. Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis sat with Governor Lowden. Others who came to cheer their diamond favorites were Mayor William Hale Thompson and members of the City Council, States Attorney Maclay Hoyne, Bailiff Dennis Egan, the Senators from Wisconsin and Ohio, Senator Medill McCormick, former Senator James Hamilton Lewis, Major Gen. Leonard Wood, commanding the Central Department, U. S. A., and Commandant Bassett of the Great Lakes Naval Training Station. Four hundred seats were set aside for the Woodland Bards, famous White Sox rooters.

Two hundred and twenty policemen were detailed to preserve order at the park, but the 185 patrolmen, 25 Sergeants, and 8 Lieutenants under command of Captain M. J. Gallery had a soft assignment, for there was no indication of a stampede at any time.

Curious eyes were leveled on the Reds' mascots and clubhouse boy when they clambered out of the visitors' coop soon after 12 o'clock, bearing the two bat bags in which were packed those same war clubs that had flattened the peerless Cicottee and his slabbing shipmate, Williams. Then when the Red helpers began laying out the swatting wood, carefully forming a row, the White Sox mascots, wearing their immaculate uniforms, sauntered across the field to see for themselves just what sort of miracle clubs the enemy had brought to use on Dick Kerr's pitching.

The Reds took the field at 1 o'clock. Bressler began to serve up a few offerings, and the visiting players walloped the ball to all corners of the lot. The Reds were evidently not superstitious as they had thirteen men on the diamond and field handling the drives of their batters.

INNING BY INNING OF THE THIRD GAME

FISHER EXITS IN EIGHTH

Moran Sends Magee to Bat and Then Orders Luque to Try His Wares in the Box.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—The detailed play of the third game between the Chicago Americans and the Cincinnati Nationals follows:

First Inning.

CINCINNATI—Little Dick Kerr steamed over a ball that cut the heart of the plate on Rath as the first gun in Chicago's opening game of the series. The packed stands let out a deafening roar as Umpire Ernie Quigley, behind the plate, yelled "Strike one." Kerr shoved the next one over and Rath tried a bunt. The pill, however, rolled along the third base foul line and Schalk and Weaver, both fielding it, let the ball continue its course until it rolled foul about half way down the line. A ball was next served up and then Rath fouled one back of the plate. On the fifth Rath rapped a grounder to Risberg, who quickly retired him with an accurate throw to Gandil. Daubert heard two balls and a strike called and lifted a pop fly in short centre to Hap Felsch. The first to Groh was a ball and the next two Umpire Quigley called strikes. This got a short kick from the Red's Field Captain, and then he swung and missed for the third strike. The crowd went into a delirium of joy. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

CHICAGO—With a strike and a ball called on him, Nemo Leibold lifted one of Ray Fisher's offerings on a line to right field. Earle Neale raced in from deep right and grabbed the ball just as it was about to find a berth in the daisies, making one of the greatest catches so far of the series. The momentum of his dash and the manner in which he was forced to stoop to make the catch carried Neale into a nose dive and he furrowed on the ground, with his left glove-encased hand held aloft and clutching the ball. The crowd cheered him to the echo when he took his place in the field for the next play. Eddie Collins rapped at the first one, sending a bounder to Fisher, who threw him out at first. With a ball and a strike called on him, Buck Weaver foul-tipped one into the dirt around the plate and then lifted a bob to Jake Daubert. NO RUNS. NO HITS.

Second Inning.

CINCINNATI—Roush sent the first offering on a bound to Risberg and was an easy out at first. With one strike called on him, Duncan crashed a single to short right field for the first hit of the game. The Reds' supporters scattered throughout the stands sent up a great cheer with this blow. Two balls and one strike were called on Kopf when the signal was given for the hit-and-run play, Kopf grounded to Risberg as Duncan tore for second. The Sox shortstop juggled the ball for a fraction of a second, and when he recovered Duncan was already on second. Risberg heaved to Gandil, however, and got Kopf. One ball had been called on Neale when he sent a grounder along the infield carpet to Eddie Collins and was an easy out at first. NO RUNS. ONE HIT.

CHICAGO.—The count on Joe Jackson was two strikes and one ball, when he lashed at the fourth offering and lined a single to left for the Sox first hit. Bedlam broke loose immediately. Klaxons, tin horns, rattlers, and various other contrivances combined with the noises sent up from thousands of throats to make a truly wild scene. Hap Felsch, with a strike and a ball called, dropped a neat sacrifice bunt down in front of Fisher. The Red pitcher turned and heaved to second in an effort to kill off Jackson, but the throw went wide and high and continued to centre field. Jackson stumbled and sprawled in the dirt rounding second base on a dash for third, but picked himself up immediately and raced for the far corner as if his life depended upon it. He beat the throw of Roush by a matter of inches, while Felsch took advantage of the occasion to continue to second. Gandil crashed his bat against the first ball and sent a single past Rath to right field which scored Jackson from third and Felsch from second. On Neale's throw to the plate on Felsch, Gandil raced to second. The scene which followed is difficult to describe. The stands were wild with a din-making crowd, the Sox players were in ecstasies of joy, and the bat boys heaved the Chicago war clubs high into the air in celebration of Chicago's opening success. Imagine a scene the exact opposite of this and you have a picture of the Reds' feelings. Risberg let three go past him for a strike and two balls and then fouled trying to bunt. The Sox shortstop then waited patiently and got a pass, the first of the game. Schalk laid down a sacrifice bunt along the third base line which threatened to fill the bases. Groh hesitated about fielding it, and so did Fisher, but the Red pitcher finally raced over, grabbed the ball, and heaved to Groh in time to force Gandil on a close decision. Kerr fouled the first one into the dirt at the plate and missed a strike a the next as Risberg started off second. Rariden shot the ball to Groh, who spun around, expecting Risberg to be running to him, but the Sox shortstop changed his mind and went back to second. Groh might have thrown Risberg out had he been awake to the play. A ball was called on Kerr then, and on the next one he knocked a bounder to Fisher, who threw to Groh, forcing Risberg. Leibold lashed a stinging grounder to Groh, who made a remarkable stop with his gloved hand and threw Leibold out at first. TWO RUNS, TWO HITS, ONE ERROR.

Third Inning.

CINCINNATI.—With the count three and two, Rariden grounded to Risberg and was thrown out at first. Fisher heard a strike called, and then got a scratch hit along the third base line when Kerr slipped and fell fielding the ball. Kerr, immediately after returning to the box, tossed to Gandil and almost caught his rival asleep. With one strike on him, Rath lifted a pop to Risberg. Daubert heard Umpire Quigley yell "Strike one!" and then grounded to Eddie Collins, who scooped the ball to Risberg, forcing Fisher. NO RUNS, ONE HIT.

CHICAGO.—The count was one and one on Eddie Collins when the veteran Sox infielder crashed a single to left which just tipped Kopf's glove as the Red shortstop jumped into the air trying to clutch the liner. The hit-and-run play followed, Weaver with one strike called, lashing a single through short to left when Kopf was out of his position running to second. Collins stopped at second on the blow. Hod Eller started to warm up in right field at this point, and was soon joined by Adolfo Luque, the Reds' Cuban twirler. Jackson tried to sacrifice after one strike had been called, but his effort was a pop, which Dauber gathered in just back of the pitchers' box, toward short. Collins was far off second at the time, but there were no Red fielders about the bag, so he was perfectly safe. Felsch hit into a snappy double play on the first ball, grounding sharply to Groh, who made another brilliant stop, whipped the ball to Rath, retiring Weaver, while Rath turned quickly and shot the pill to Daubert in time to get Felsch. NO RUNS, TWO HITS.

Fourth Inning.

CINCINNATI. — Groh walked when Kerr found the plate only once with five pitched balls. With one strike on him, Roush sent a bounder over Kerr's head which Risberg raced in and scooped up and shot quickly to Gandil in a brilliant bit of fielding, retiring Roush. Groh reached second on the play. Duncan, with one strike, fouled off the side of the plate, and then crashed out a liner which Risberg jumped up and grabbed, and Groh was doubled off second, Risberg to Collins. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

CHICAGO.—Gandil grounded to Groh on the first pitch and was an easy out at first. After fouling one off and hearing a ball called Risberg got a lucky three-base smash to right when Neale overran the hit in his anxiety to make a catch and allowed the ball to bounce past him to the fence in front of the temporary right-field reserved section. Schalk on the first pitch crashed a sharply hit grounder off Fisher's shins to third base, Risberg scoring before Groh could recover the ball. With the first strike by Kerr, Schalk was killed off attempting a steal of second, Rath taking Rariden's throw. Schalk thought he was safe and showed it by jumping in the air and ballyhooing at Umpire Cy Rigler, who rendered the decision. Kerr heard two balls called and then sent a bounder to Kopf and was an easy out at first. ONE RUN, TWO HITS.

Fifth Inning.

CINCINNATI.—The count was one and one when Kopf crashed a single past Collins to right field. After two balls and a strike had been served Neale rapped a grounder to Gandil, whose throw to Risberg killed off Kopf at second. Rariden fouled the first back of the plate, heard a ball called, grounded to Collins, and was an easy out at first, Neale taking second. With two balls on him Fisher grounded to Weaver and was easy at first for the third out. NO RUNS, ONE HIT.

CHICAGO.—One and one was called on Leibold when he grounded to Daubert and was beaten in a race to the bag. Collins sent a high bounder to the box, after the count had reached two balls and one strike, and was thrown out at first by Fisher. Weaver heard one strike called and sent a bounder to Fisher and was easy at first for the third out. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

Sixth Inning.

CINCINNATI.—With the count one and one, Rath grounded to Risberg and was thrown out at first. Daubert heard two balls and a strike called and then lofted to Jackson in left field. The count was two balls and one strike on Groh when he sent a bounder to Weaver and was thrown out at first. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

CHICAGO.—The crowd back of third base started riding Groh as he took up his position, and Heinie retorted to the quips, which caused increased efforts by the Sox followers to rattle the Reds' field captain. Jackson spun around and fell in the dirt at the plate when he missed a vicious swing at the first one. He heard two balls called then, and Groh held a short conversation with Fisher in the box. The next was fouled down the first-base line, and then followed a foul tip. Shoeless Joe then lifted a Texas Leaguer to left, just out of reach of Kopf, who raced out after the pop. Felsch struck at the first one as Jackson started stealing second, but Joe was killed off when Kopf blocked the bag while he took Rariden's throw to second. In the next five pitches only one strike was served, and Hap walked to first. The first to Gandil was a ball. Felsch tore for second with the pitch, but was killed off, Rariden to Rath. A ball and strike followed to Gandil, who then foul-tipped the fourth and fouled the fifth back of the plate. On the sixth pitch Chick was called out. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

Seventh Inning.

CINCINNATI.—On the first pitch Roush lifted a pop fly to Gandil in short right field. The count was three and two on Duncan, when he fouled the sixth pitch, almost taking off Schalk's hand. On the next offering Duncan was called out on strikes. Kopf swung and missed the first one and then lifted a pop to Leibold in short right field. NO RUNS. NO HITS.

CHICAGO.—The count was one and one when Risberg cracked a sharp grass-burner to Groh, who raced over to the short field for a great pickup and threw accurately to Daubert, retiring the Swede. A ball was called and then Schalk fouled off the side of the plate. Then followed a strike and another ball and the Sox back stop bounced to Kopf, who threw him out at first. Kerr was greeted with cheers as he stepped to the plate in this round. On the first pitch he grounded to Rath and expired at first. NO RUNS. NO HITS.

Eighth Inning.

CINCINNATI.—Neale foul-tipped the first, fouled the next into the lower stand back of third, and had the next pitch called a strike. Rariden, with one ball, grounded sharply to Eddie Collins, who made a brilliant scoop and threw "Whoa Bill" out at first. Sherwood Magee was sent in to bat for Fisher. The first was a ball, he fouled the second off the boxes back of third base, and on the next pitch the pinch-hitter lifted a fly to Leibold in right field. NO RUNS. NO HITS.

CHICAGO.—Jimmy Smith, former Giant, who was coaching on third base for the Reds in their half of the eighth, almost came to blows with E. Collins and Weaver, who resented some of Smith's remarks as the Red coach was leaving the field. The wordy battle waxed warm up to a point about half-way between third and home, when it appeared there was going to be a little physical violence as a side attraction. Other Sox players and Umpire Billy Evans were on the alert, however, and the threatened display of fisticuffs didn't materialize. Luque took the mound for the Reds in this frame. The Cuban hurler's first achievement was to fan Nemo Leibold on five pitched balls. The first was a ball and on the third Leibold fouled off back of the plate. Rariden dropped the third strike but quickly recovered the ball and touched Leibold out. Nemo and Groh exchanged hot words when the Sox outfielder was walking to the plate, but Umpire Evans waved Leibold to his bench before the exchange became too hot. The count on Collins was one ball and two strikes when Eddie lifted a twisting foul just outside the line in left field. Duncan made a great run for the sphere, but arrived a second or two late and the ball fell foul by less than a foot. Collins then crashed a grounder to Daubert, who snatched up the fast-traveling pill and threw quickly to Luque, covering first, for the second out. Two balls had been called on Weaver when he grounded to Rath and was easy at first for the final Sox out. NO RUNS. NO HITS.

Ninth Inning.

CINCINNATI.—Smith and Schalk exchanged a few words, whether of banter or belligerency it was hard to tell, but from the faces of the two it seemed that a fresh battle flame was being blown into action. Smith continued his slouch to the third base coaching box. After listening to a strike called on him Rath grounded to Collins who threw him out at first. The first two to Daubert were balls, but the succeeding three Umpire Quigley liked and called strikes, sending Jake back to the bench, chewing savagely on his plug. Groh, the last Red up, allowed the first to pass and it was called a strike. Heinie didn't mind. On the second one, however, he lashed a grounder to Weaver, who smilingly tossed to Gandil for the close of this memorable Sox victory.

Score Announced in Court.

Victory of Sox in Third Game Causes Shortening in Price Quoted on Series.

The uprising of the Chicago White Sox in the third game of the world's series has served to stimulate interest in the event to a marked degree in this city. Had the Reds been successful again New York would have been perfectly willing to attend to its other business. But, as it is, the supporters of the American League champions in Gotham have taken heart. The feeling of slipping dollars has been changed to one of expectant hope. They are entertaining visions of wealth, which they had almost given up as lost, being found again. Dick Kerr, Kid Gleason's youthful southpaw, made good, and this has served to cheer them more than if the victory had been turned in by Cicotte, for now they are of the belief that Cicotte will be able to come back today and disport himself to better purpose than he did in the opening game, when he was driven to the refreshing coolness of the shower bath before four full innings had been recorded in the box score.

Immediately after the third game the betting on the series was renewed. Naturally there was another shift in the odds. After the second game, when the Reds had absorbed two thoroughly wholesome victories in succession, the White Sox had been more or less forsaken by those inclined to wager their lunch money. Even the enticing odds of 4½ to 1 failed to coax forth anything that resembled real money, as real money is measured in a betting sense.

But today the odds had changed to 3 to 2, with the Reds the favorites. White Sox fans once more unlimbered their almost empty fountain pens and dug deeper into their bank accounts. Some of them evidently figured they might just as well be broke as the way they were, and they decided to go the limit. A surprising feature about the betting last night was that there was so little attempt to hedge on the part of those who originally had backed the White Sox.

Chicago's victory apparently had cheered them to a pronounced degree and had revived their waning hopes. Several wagers of size were recorded at John Doyle's billiard academy. One of $3,000 to $2,000 was made by a man who was said to have already backed the White Sox to the extent of $15,000. But for the most part the betting was confined to today's game. In most instances the White Sox were favored to win. Odds of 4 to 5 against Chicago were quoted, and quite a little money was risked on the outcome of the game.

Although the White Sox were favored to take the fourth contest, there was a deal of Cincinnati money exposed. Supporters of the Reds were of the opinion that Moran would pitch "Dutch" Ruether against Cicotte and his shine ball. They quite properly figured that today's is the big game for the Reds to win, and since Ruether made such an excellent showing against the Sox in the first game of the series they were confident Moran would start him again. They figured the two days' rest he has had would be sufficient for him to come back and pitch with all the cunning that featured his previous start on the mound.

If Ruether is successful in the fourth game, followers of the Reds argued that Moran would then be at liberty to gamble with Jimmy Ring and Hod Eller, but that the Cincinnati manager could not afford to take any chances until he had put today's game on the ice.

There did not seem to be any question in the minds of New York fans about Cicotte's pitching. They figured there was nothing else for Gleason to do. Urban Faber and Bill James were not taken into consideration at all. Since Cicotte pitched only four innings on Wednesday, local fans contended he had had ample rest. It was this thought that seemed to cheer White Sox followers more than anything else, and they were willing to unload their pelf on the chance that Cicotte would be able to redeem himself.

EVEN MONEY ON SOX.

That Is What Chicagoans Are Offering on Today's Game.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—This morning and in the early afternoon gamblers on the world's series plied their vocation quite without embarrassment in the lobbies of the larger Chicago hotels. They made their way about, clutching rolls of bills, and the only concession they made to possible prejudices on the part of onlookers against their means of livelihood was to transact their business in whispers.

The professional gamblers here seemed to lean even more strongly to the side of the Reds than did the genuine sportsmen of Cincinnati. They were offering as high as five to two against the White Sox on the series, whereas the most liberal odds in bets between genuine fans, partians of the teams, seldom rose above two to one.

The following odds were also quoted this morning by the professionals:

Three to two that the Reds would win today's game.

One to five that the Reds would win four straight.

One to ten that the Reds would win the series in straight games.

The situation has entirely changed as a result of the victory of the White Sox this afternoon. Sportsmen in general seem to feel tonight that seven to five or even thirteen to ten is about the proper thing. One Chicago sportsman placed $1,000 tonight at the latter odds after vainly seeking the former. A wager of $5,000 is reported to have been made by three Cincinnati rooters, pooling their money against $3,500 from a Chicago sportsman's roll in a leading hotel tonight.

The odds on the result of tomorrow's game are by no means constant, varying according to different theories of Moran's and Gleason's choice of pitchers. Chicagoans were seldom asking odds, however, and seemed quite inclined to give those desirous of backing the Reds in the fourth game a bit the better of it. It seems to Chicagoans at least an even chance that the series will be squared tomorrow.

POOL ON WORLD'S SERIES.

Allows Points for Scoring and Hitting of Various Players.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—There is considerable interest in Chicago just now and some agitation against a baseball pool with something like a dozen branches here. The concern has been running throughout the season and had planned, it is said, to make a clean-up on the world's series. Affording all the excitement of betting in a handbook, the baseball pool also in its harvest of nickels and pennies seems to be the successor to the old policy bank.

The prices given by the pools vary from 33 1-3 per cent. in the largest pool to 37½ per cent. of the money received from bets in some of the small independent pools. The big pools keep a major portion of the receipts, allowing a generous commission to the stores which serve as agencies. Through the season the prizes were drawn daily, semi-weekly, and weekly on the basis of runs made by the National League, American League, and American Association teams. For this world's series the system has been modified to base the drawings on the runs and hits made by each player on the Chicago and Cincinnati teams. No uniformity is followed by the pools in computing these plays, runs counting from two to eight points and hits from one to five points, according to the book.

PLENTY OF ENTHUSIASM, BUT LESS NOISE, WHILE CHICAGO SCORES ITS VICTORY

CHICAGO LESS NOISY THAN CINCINNATI

SLOW IN REACHING PARK

Those Defeats in First Two Games Are Regarded as Accidents—Redland Women Do Some Cheering.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., Oct. 3.—Chicago feels tonight that impudence has been fittingly rebuked today within the ramparts that encircle White Sox Field. Temerity, one gathers through conversation with almost any one who emerged from the gates of the baseball arena this afternoon, may carry upstarts just so far—about two games, perhaps—but not one step further. Also, class will tell, it appears. And, besides, last laughs are much preferred by real connoisseurs.

That the absolutely ultimate laugh will agitate the bosom and light the features of Chicago is the fixed belief of the dyed-in-the-wool White Sox fans, who are famed for their loyalty to the team through thick and thin. They've been partaking of the thin for a day or two, but now their diet is thickening and beginning to get tasty.

When the long lines of special trains which brought the Reds, their rooters, and the war correspondents, rolled into town this morning the always bustling streets of Chicago bore that undefinable touch in their thronging thousands which to the practiced observer can mean only one thing, and that is that a world's series game is in the offing. These contests not only put a tinge of excited anticipation on typical fan faces, but they bring to the city, fortunate enough to float a major league pennant, baseball enthusiasts of note from every quarter of the land as well as sportsmen whose tastes in recreation are more catholic.

Then, too, the coming event of the day is bound to be mirrored on the stands of peddlers, in shop windows, and by badges on the bosoms of pedestrians. This afternoon the fans of Chicago wore, in addition to the look of expectancy, just a touch of carping care. They had suffered in the last forty-odd hours and there were wrongs to be avenged. That, however, would be attended to in due course by the athletes in whom they trusted.

2,000 in Long Vigil.

The dawn of this day, it is narrated, found about 2,000 fans gathered at the bleacher gates of Comiskey Park. Some of them had been there since 6 o'clock of the previous evening. At 9 o'clock today 5,000 were in line, and that number had doubled an hour later.

Peanuts and other confections helped to make the waiting pleasant. Craps and other games of chance shortened the hours. Also sundry flasks were produced and tilted with such evidently stimulating effects upon the owners thereof that they immediately acquired hosts of new and wholly undesired friends.

Meanwhile downtown the city was making triumphant enemies welcome and comfortable. The heart of Cincinnati beat in the bosom of Chicago today. Its palpitations sounded through the lobbies of the downtown hotels and the hostelries of the South Side within hailing distance of the ball park. The lobby of the Congress Hotel, headquarters of the Cincinnati rooters, was a scene of seething, unrepressed enthusiasm. Here were massed hundreds of citizens of the Ohio city who, for perhaps the first time in their lives, were eager that it should be known they were from Cincinnati.

A goodly proportion of the crowd, however, was made up, not of citizens but of wives, daughters, sisters, sweethearts, and occasionally mothers of citizens. It was surprising how many women were visible and audible among the Cincinnati clans. They wore red bows, badges, plumes, gowns, buttons, pennants, and stockings. They stood in circles and sang songs celebrating the feats of the Reds. Massed cheers were given, in which not a husky male voice was heard, for the team that topped the National League, for each player, for the manager, one Patrique Moran, and even, wonder of wonders, for Garry Herrmann.

The men were almost silent, not being allowed to intrude upon these novel demonstrations which were "for ladies only." The masculinne contingent, naturally retiring and timid, was not encouraged to make itself conspicuous in public, but was held pretty well in repression, although it was noticed that some of the men were permitted to smoke.

Women Cheer for Reds.

Solos and choruses, and cheer after cheer, were shrilly, yet vigorously given by at least half a hundred young women, most of whom bore the color that signalizes their favorite team in their cheeks. The words of their songs were indistinct to hear, but their burden appeared to be that Chicago was to be made desolate and utterly miserable by hardy invaders from further South. In the lobbies of all the other large hotels, also, the Cincinnati rooters made their presence known, although not as vociferously as at the Congress. There must have been at least two thousand from the Ohio city here to see further nails driven into the White Sox coffin.

Later on all this Cincinnati delegation became concentrated at Comiskey Park. It had conserved its lung power sufficiently to make a good showing there and was profuse of cheers for the Reds during the batting and fielding practice. But the great residue of enthusiasm which was designed to be lavished upon the Reds during the game was not drawn upon owing to circumstances over which neither the Reds nor their supporters had any control, and it went into a reserve fund which the Ohio contingent hopes to spend lavishly tomorrow.

Today's assembly of somewhat less than 30,000 persons was, aside from the portion mentioned above, slow in arriving at the grounds. With the game only half an hour away the stands were not much more than half full, and even the unreserved bleachers were not thronged. These little oversights, however, were rectified with surprising speed, and by 2 o'clock, when Gingley's bugle voice—no, he doesn't talk through his nose—sounded the call to battle, the boxes, stands, and bleachers were well filled. Here and there a vacant seat could be espied, indicating the discomfiture of some ticket speculator, but their aggregate number was small.

There was nothing in the way of a pre-game demonstration here today to compare with the exhibition of frenzied encouragement given the Reds before the opening game on the Cincinnati field. The fans showed fervor enough, and it was probably as deep as that of the roaring crowd at Wednesday's game, but they did not feel that their veteran White Sox needed exhaustive and exhausting vocal support. As the game got under way, however, they edged forward in their seats to give the most intent watchfulness to every episode of the game.

There were just about 30,000 expert baseball critics in that crowd.

Cheers and scattering applauses greeted each favorable turn of fortune, but never did a simultaneous roar of approval shake the stands. The course of the game was quite pleasing, but it was absolutely what had been expected by this throng. For very few Chicago fans seem seriously to believe that the results of the games in Cincinnati were anything except the merest accidents.

Normandy Farm Races Today.

Fifty-three horses of established pedigree and records have been entered in the race meet and hunt which will take place this afternoon on the estate of Ralph Beaver Strassburger at Normandy Farm, Gwynedd Valley, Penn. Many of those interested in the revival of steeplechasing and cross country running are planning to witness the meet.

CHEER WHITE SOX IN TIMES SQUARE

New York's first day of clear weather during the world's series brought out a record-breaking crowd in the most convenient spot where the detailed reproduction of yesterday's crucial game could be seen—Times Square. Not even on Election Night and New Year's Eve has humanity more completely filled the main corner of Gotham's busiest triangle. As far back as THE NEW YORK TIMES scoreboard was even faintly visible, men and women stood closely packed together from the moment that Dicky Kerr pitched the first ball to Morris Rath until the finishing touches had been applied to the plucky little Chicagoan's shutout victory. At a conservative estimate it may be figured that at least thirty thousand people have followed the games by way of the animated scoreboard in Times Square thus far, in spite of two days of rain.

As on the previous afternoon, yesterday's crowd was predominantly a Chicago gathering, and the initial success of the White Sox aroused the first unrestrained metropolitan enthusiasm of the week. The fans began to collect in the vicinity of the Mayor's Committee huts and the navy recruiting tents long before game time, and while the little white ball warmed up in a series of trial flights over the miniature diamond there was much speculation as to the possible pitching selections of the rival managers. It was generally believed that Pat Moran would try his fortunes with Hod Eller, or perhaps even come back with the hero of the opening game, Walter Ruether. The baseball Nestor of Redland fooled them all by putting Ray Fisher into the box, and, even though he pitched a losing game, almost from the outset the former Yankee proved a popular selection with the New York rooters.

It was Kerr, however, the diminutive ex-amateur, who created the most discussion and drew the greatest applause. He had been generally picked as the genius who could stop the Red sluggers if any one could, although a few dyed-in-the-wool Cicotte-worshippers insisted that Kid Gleason would stake his fortunes once more on the defeated veteran, even with only one day of rest to bring back his strength.

As inning after inning passed by with the midget Kerr keeping the bags practically clear of runners, and not a Redleg coming within even hailing distance of the plate, the twirling marvels of the past faded into insignificance, and more than one fan declared loudly, "This kid is the greatest of them all!" Three hits and a base on balls represented the only opportunities the scoreboard operator had of moving the men from the Cincinnati lineup to the diamond itself. Mechanically portrayed by the relentless passage of the white sphere back and forth and the equally relentless registering of strikes and outs, without a single run to break the row of ciphers below, Kerr's pitching feat was almost as impressive as the reality out in the Windy City.

Gandil's hit, which scored two runners and won the game for Chicago, aroused momentary enthusiasm, but the watchers in Times Square were far more interested in the remarkable defensive achievement that was being recorded before their eyes, taking it for granted that with such airtight pitching no halfway respectable ball team could possibly lose.

At the close of the game the crowd broke up in a happy mood. Predictions were freely made that Cicotte would get his revenge today and make the series all square, and more than one vow was registered to the effect that "I don't want to miss seeing that little white ball sending them back to the dugout if there's going to be any more pitching like that in this series."

The police officials declared themselves capable of handling a crowd of any proportions in Times Square today, for thousands of baseball lovers are sure to dedicate their Saturday afternoon to the unique pastime of seeing a Middle Western world series played in the heart of New York City.

MURRAY TO LEAD CRIMSON.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 3.—Friday is not usually a hard practice day for the Harvard football squad, but this afternoon, expecting a strong opponent in Boston College for the season's second game tomorrow, the coaches provided an unusually brisk workout. There was no hard scrimmaging, but the linemen had a rough-and-tumble drill, during which Caswell received a broken nose, while making a tackle, and End Rush Nixon was severely cut over the eye.

Boston College, with one of the best punters in New England, Fitzpatrick, in the line-up, and two fine exponents of forward pass play in Urban and Corrigan, will come to the stadium very confident tomorrow. Frank Cavanaugh, former head coach at Dartmouth, has built up a husky line.

Harvard has made more preparation for Boston College than for the ordinary run of early opponents. Before the team went out for practice this afternoon William Murray of Natick, Mass., was elected Captain of the team. He, Casey, and Horween were the prominent candidates until yesterday, when Murray tried to drop out of the running. The players, however, did not share his point of view.

YALE IN GOOD SHAPE.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 3.—Yale's final workout before its opening game tomorrow with Springfield Training College here proved merely a signal rehearsal and breaking through practice. Fully half an hour was devoted to each of the two departments of drill. The Bowl, which was soft with mud yesterday, had partially dried, but will be heavy footing for the runners tomorrow. Yale expects the biggest attendance ever recorded at an opening game of the season.

The fact that Yale will present a lineup which has not been used in scrimmage practice this week is thought likely to result in a small score tomorrow, several points less than Dartmouth's total of 40, registered against Springfield last week. Of Yale's 'Varsity eleven in 1916, when intercollegiate football was last played, Guard Carter Galt, Quarter Back Chester La Roche, and Full Back Jim Braden will alone be in the lineup tomorrow.

FOOTBALL ELEVENS TO GET REAL TEST

With practically all of the leading college football teams getting into action, the season of 1919 may be said to have its real beginning today. Some of the scheduled encounters promise to be far more than the preliminary practice games to which the big universities were accustomed in the past, and there is the possibility of an occasional surprise, as no eleven has yet shown what it can depend upon in the way of attack or defense.

Locally the football season is still quiet, for Columbia University has not yet begun its schedule, while the athletes of New York University are up in New England today trying their strength against the rugged sons of Amherst. Fordham has disbanded its team and canceled all the dates on its schedule, including the game with Lafayette, which was to have taken place this afternoon.

But, although Coach Fred Dawson has not yet allowed the Columbia footballers to go into a regular contest, he is seizing the opportunity today of trying them out in a practice scrimmage with the eleven of the battleship Arizona. This game begins at 3 o'clock on South Field, and the husky sailors should give the collegians a good chance to find out what their new material is good for.

Rutgers to Meet North Carolina.

Aside from this game, the only football near New York is to be staged over at New Brunswick, where Foster Sanford's big red Rutgers team takes on the representatives of North Carolina University. This is the first time that the Southerners have appeared in these parts, but with Budge Garrett, the Indian of All-American fame, back in the lineup, the boys on the banks of the Raritan are not particularly worried.

The fragmentary nature of most college football schedules last season makes a comparison of scores or a search after past performances rather a useless undertaking. The football of 1919 will have the advantage of absolute freshness, with predictions and records practically debarred except as they grow out of the play of each team from week to week. Yale, Harvard, Princeton, and Pennsylvania, for instance, should all win today without difficulty, but there is no telling what surprises the unique situation may bring. Cornell, Brown, Dartmouth, West Point, Colgate, Pittsburgh, and Syracuse are also logical favorites in their preliminary battles, but again it is impossible to make any accurate diagnoses of their strength.

Springfield Training School, the traditional punching bag of the big college elevens, was so easily defeated by Dartmouth last week, that a better showing against Yale is hardly to be expected, although the Elis are notoriously opposed to one-sided scores in their practice games. Today's contest marks the opening of the Blue season, and although Half Back Neville, veteran of Cupid Black's championship team, is temporarily out of commission, there is plenty of confidence at New Haven since Captain Callahan has returned to the lineup.

Harvard Is Not Worried.

Harvard revealed a powerful scoring machine when she rolled up 53 points against Bates last Saturday, and should have little trouble in carrying the ball across the goal line of her local rival, Boston College. Billy Murray makes his début as the Crimson captain this afternoon, and with Eddie Casey and Horween in shape, coach Fisher has little to worry about.

Pennsylvania also took its first plunge last week against Bucknell, and should do even better today against the soldiers of the Pennsylvania Military College. Down at Princeton Bill Roper has been experimenting with several sets of backs, teaching all his candidates straight football, and a number of substitutions are promised when Trinity faces the Tigers.

Cornell, building up its running and kicking attack around Shiverick, will be watched with interest in an initial meeting with Oberlin. The Ohio college has had its days of greatness in Middle Western football, but suffered by the war and lost all but one of its games last season, although it began the present year with a 20—0 victory over Heidelberg. Dartmouth may easily repeat against Norwich the reckless scoring which marked her opening victory over Springfield. Brown University, on the other hand, is not holding Bowdoin cheaply, and expects a real contest after a rather one-sided decision over Rhode Island last week.

Syracuse also is not inclined to underrate the Vermont eleven, the latter having started out by rolling up 41 points against Clarkson. The Green Mountain boys are said to be strengthened this year by the presence of three former Georgetown stars, and are coming down to New York State full of confidence. Larry Bankart is sending his Colgate aggregation against Susquehanna this afternoon with the expectation of a real battle and faith in the inherent power of his machine. Amherst was able to score only a field goal against Bowdoin last Saturday and a further good test of her strength should be provided by New York University today.

Army and Navy Games.

Glenn Warner's Pittsburgh Tigers have no reason to worry over their little argument with Geneva at Beaver Falls, and the two service schools, West Point and Annapolis, have also drawn comparatively light assignments in Holy Cross and North Carolina State respectively. But Penn State should find a worthy rival in her traditional enemy Gettysburg, and Ursinus, in spite of a bad beating by Rutgers last week, may spring a surprise on Lehigh at South Bethlehem, while Union is also capable of giving Williams a battle, although the latter opened with an auspicious triumph over Rensselaer.

In the West the most important games bring together Michigan and Case, at Ann Arbor; Ohio State and Ohio Wesleyan, at Columbus; Iowa and Nebraska, at Iowa City, and Wisconsin and Ripon at Madison. Georgia Tech. plays Wake Forest at Atlanta in the leading encounter of the Southern section.

PRINCETON SEEKS SPEED.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 5.—Today's final workout before the initial contest of the season with Trinity tomorrow afternoon furnished little light on how the Tigers will line up for the opening whistle. Roper and his assistants put all the men through a long drill in fundamentals, with different sets of men alternating on the tentative 'varsity. Taking advantage of the boiling sun, which had put the Palmer Stadium turf in good condition, the coaches transferred the squad from University Field to the Stadium to accustom the men to its peculiarities.

Scrimmage was eliminated and all attention was paid to mastery of the rudiments and of the few simple plays that have been developed so far. There is a dearth of punters and Roper had several of his back field men taking turns at this. Trimble and Lourie got off some fair kicks and their running mates behind the line caught the twisting oval down the field. Harold Ballin had his line men doing all the stunts that are usually found in the workouts of the first few days. Speed and more speed is what the coaches are trying to develop.

JYNTEE, AT 7 TO 1, WINS AT JAMAICA

Mr. Kraft's Jyntee, which had been knocking at the door of success for some time, finally found the conditions to her liking at Jamaica yesterday and won a very close decision in the Sandringham Handicap, which was the feature of a rather dull card. Jyntee just managed to get her nose in front of L. F. Wagner's Osgood, but she did administer a decisive beating to Lawrence Waterbury's Right Angle, which was a 1 to 2 favorite and which trailed in last, losing third to Daydue.

The favorable change in the weather not only brought out a large crowd, but it stemmed the tide that had been running against the favorites all week. Despite the fact that the track was heavy from the recent rains, form was again observed and four of the public choices were among the winners. The exceptions were Jyntee, which won at 7 to 1, and Dandy Dude, which captured the second race and was quoted at 20 to 1.

The condition of the track resulted in many scratches, which marred the card, and particularly marred the feature event. Four of those originally named for the Sandringham were withdrawn, these including Pickwick, Salvestra, Thunderstorm, and Tailor Maid. With only four starters, Right Angle was made a strong choice and was well supported, despite the odds.

Head Over Heels Wins.

Right Angle had no excuses for falling to reward his backers, for he was away well and went into the lead on the back stretch. For three furlongs he set a terrific pace, considering the heavy going, and was five lengths in front at one time. But Right Angle is a son of Peter Quince, and, when he tired at the head of the stretch, he quit to a walk and came in a bad last. Meantime, Jyntee and Osgood had been running strong, and when Right Angle gave it up they came on to battle for the first position right to the wire. Jyntee had the advantage of having come through on the inside and the ground saved at the turn gave her the victory. She won by a neck, but Osgood was coming strongly and would have been the winner with a little more distance to go. Daydue passed Right Angle coming through the stretch and beat him by two lengths for third.

Another which finally came back to her best form after a layoff was Edward Arlington's Koh-I-Noor, which made a runaway race of it in the fifth event, at a mile and a sixteenth, for four-year-olds and upward. There were eight starters in this race, and they were strung out all the way from the wire to the furlong pole at the finish. Koh-I-Noor won by ten lengths, with Jack O'Dowd second, five lengths in front of Hope, the latter taking third with six lengths to spare. As they were coming down to the finish line there was not a horse in the race that was within two lengths of the one immediately in front.

Koh-I-Noor was an odds-on favorite, and never gave her backers much concern after the first furlong. Apel rushed her into the lead and she began to draw away as though the others had been tied down. Coming around the turn she was a sixteenth of a mile in front of the trailer and she was just galloping when she came past the stands. Jockey Apel, who had given Koh-I-Noor a very weak ride in her last effort, did not have to render any assistance and sat still in the saddle while the mare ran her own race.

No Excuses for Right Angle.

J. W. May's Head Over Heels, which has a gift of speed, but frequently quits in a close finish, managed to hold out to the end in the first race, and defeated three other two-year-old fillies over a five-furlong route. Head Over Heels and Masked Dancer raced close together all the way, drawing away from Indiscretion and Betty J. right after the start. The two leaders came around the turn on equal terms and fought it out all through the stretch. Head Over Heels seemed on the point of giving up the contest a hundred yards from the finish, but Davies gave her a lash with the whip and she plunged forward again to gain the decision by half a length. Masked Dancer took the place by five lengths, while Indiscretion had the same advantage over Betty J., which trailed the field all the way and seemed unable to get going on the heavy track.

The second race, at a mile and a sixteenth, brought out eleven selling platers, all of a cheap sort and all equally bad, so that there was little choice among them. Umbala and Bar One were finally played down until they became favorites, so-called, and went to the post at the shortest prices. Umbala failed to get up at any time, but Bar One did manage to take the place, after Dandy Dude had romped home a winner by five lengths and quoted at 20 to 1.

KIRKBY CONQUERS HERRON BY 5 AND 4

NEW YORK TEAM OUSTED

Pennsylvanians Will Play Massachusetts Golfers Today at Southampton for Lesley Cup.

Special to The New York Times.

SOUTHAMPTON, N. Y., Oct. 3.—The Pennsylvania team eliminated New York today from further consideration in the annual three-cornered fight for possession of the Lesley Golf Cup in the first clash of the two days' engagement. In the forenoon, playing at foursomes, the Quakers captured four of the five matches. The contests in singles, played during the afternoon, resulted in an even break at five each, netting Pennsylvania a grand total of 9 to 6 points for the day.

The Massachusetts men had easy sailing over the team of veteran golfers, including players from all three districts. The old-timers showed up short handed for their matches, and their ranks were filled with younger players, including Grant A. Peacock and J. N. Stearns, Jr., who alternated at playing with the New York team and the veterans in the morning and afternoon; J. B. Crookston of Pittsburgh, and others. But the New Englanders won easily. They swept the five foursomes clean and got seven of the ten singles for a total score of 12 to 3.

Incidental to the team matches and the struggle for possession of the trophy, the day's play introduced a highly interesting individual contest betwen Oswald Kirkby, the metropolitan champion, who, by a queer turn of fate, failed to qualify in the national championship, and S. Davidson Herron, winner of that event. There may be some element of surprise in the announcement that Kirkby won by the decisive score of 5 up and 4 to play.

Herron in Poor Form.

Among two such high-class performers two considerations are essential for such an outcome. For one thing Kirkby was at the crest of his game and, for another, Herron was playing far below the form that enabled him to romp through to a winning finish in the national championship quest. Herron's game today was something else again from that which bowled over Bobby Jones at Oakmont. But Herron at his best would have had a man-sized job at stopping Kirkby today.

This was one of the good days of the lanky New Jersey star, and those good days are tough considerations for any opposition that straggles in his pathway. Just twice during the fourteen holes of actual contest did Kirkby falter perceptibly. Once Herron was equal to the opportunity offered, although he had played the hole none too well. He detected Kirkby wabbling a bit on the seventh and pulled himself together to sink a ten-foot putt for a win. It was the only hole he won throughout the match.

Again, on the eleventh, Kirkby strayed from the straight and narrow path, an offense that brooks no recovery on the National links. But this time Herron had wandered into trouble himself, and was unable to crash through successfully. Otherwise there was no foul to be found with Kirkby's golf. He was well within himself, and several greens found him up there within the possibility of clipping a stroke from his score had he really been pushed to do so.

Kirkby Runs Off to the Lead.

Kirkby got a lead on the first hole and was never headed from there in. He got the first, 4 to 5, and, after halving the next, took the third by the same figure when Herron missed a three-foot putt for a half. Par figures—3, 5, and 3—won the next three in order for the New York player, making him 4 up. At the seventh Kirkby half topped his second shot, then slashed his third over the green into a trap. Herron was off the edge in 3, but managed to chip up and hole a winning 5.

Kirkby got this back on the eighth, then halved the ninth, to turn 4 up. He joined up a terrific tee shot with a brilliant midiron second to within ten feet of the cup, then sank his putt for a birdie 3, to win the tenth. They both found traps on their seconds for the next, and it was halved in 5s. The next three were halved in par figures, although Kirkby had a fine chance for a birdie 3 on the twelfth, and the match was over.

Tewksbury Beats White.

Gardiner W. White lost to Paul Tewksbury after a torrid contest through seventeen holes. The Philadelphian led by 2 up at the ninth, having played the nine holes in 40, but White won the tenth and twelfth, each 4 to 5, to get even. The thirteenth, a one-shot test, looked like another hole for White when he drove the green,' fifteen feet from the cup, with his opponent short. However, the Nassau star putted badly, taking three, whereas Tewksbury chipped close up and holed a 3.

White drove to a trap on the next and lost that, but turned and took the next two to get even again. The seventeenth saw him with the advantage after both had played two, White being on the edge of the green and his opponent short. But again Tewksbury chipped up close and sank his putt, whereas White took three tries again, to lose in 5. They came along about even in the fight for the home hole through their first two shots, but White's third overran down a steep embankment and he conceded the hole and the match.

Jess Sweetser scored something of a surprise in defeating L. Wood Platt, who achieved considerable fame by defeating Francis Ouimet in the Oakmont championship tournament. The Ardsley lad defeated his man by the same score that marked Kirkby's victory over Herron. Sweetser played the first nine holes in 38, one stroke over par, and had a lead of two holes at the turn. Platt had succeeded in winning the third hole, when Sweetser took three putts, and that was his only win of the match.

After the turn they both grew erratic on the tenth green, taking three putts each, and halving in 5. Sweetser clicked off a pair of par 4's to win the next two. They scored par 3 each on the thirteenth after which Sweetser wound up the tale by taking the fourteenth, 4 to 5.

Max Marston Joins Quakers.

Max Marston, who was regarded as a likely member of the New York team until a short time back, lined up with the visitors and drew A. L. Walker, Jr., the runner-up in the Metropolitan championship. The Staten Island youngster numbered Marston among his list of vanquished in the Brooklawn tournament, but the latter turned the tables today. Walker blamed most of his misgivings to bad shots from the tees. With long carries over the rough and rugged growth of grass, weeds, and other vegetation carpeting these rough patches, failure to wallop long and straight from the tees is a cardinal sin of this course. They exchanged wins back and forth on the first seven holes with no advantage either way for that distance. But Walker ran afoul of trouble with his tee shots on the eighth and ninth and lost both to turn 2 down.

Marston increased his lead by winning the tenth and eleventh. Walker had a winning hole in sight at the twelfth, where he got on the green one stroke under his opponent, but he traded tee troubles for putting weakness, took three putts, and did no better than a half. The next was also halved, but Walker ran down a thirty-foot putt to win the fourteenth, leaving him 3 down with 4 to play. Marston ended the match by taking the next, 4 to 5.

A. F. Kammer piled up an early lead that left him enough in reserve to stall off a strong finish by W. C. Fownes, Jr. Kammer got an early jump, and kept adding to it right along until he stood 5 up, with only seven left to play. At this juncture he faltered a bit, and Fownes sprang forward with a rush to pull up to one down as they went for the home hole. The latter had a three-foot putt for a win on that hole, but Kammer's approach putt left him a stymie, and he could do no better than a half, and lost the match.

Dwight Armstrong of Pittsburgh scored a decisive victory over William Reekie, the Upper Montclair player. Armstrong counted off the first six holes in one stroke under par, winning the first five. He lost a ball on the seventh, then finished out with a 4 and a 6 on the eighth and ninth, respectively, turning 4 up. Reekie could not overcome this lead and lost, 5 and 4.

E. M. Byers of Pittsburgh, a former national champion, won after a close battle with Frank W. Dyer. The former got a lead by winning the twelfth after they had switched back and forth through the earlier holes. Dyer evened it at the fourteenth, then lost the fifteenth, but won the seventeenth, and got even again. He lost the home hole and the match when his third shot ran over the green and into a deep trap.

Archie McIlvaine of the home club won another close tussle with Pat Grant of Philadelphia. They came to the home hole with the issue still in doubt, McIlvaine leading 1 up. He took the last one also.

Grant Peacock got an early lead over J. S. Crookston of Pittsburgh, standing 5 up finishing the twelfth. Crookston managed to win the thirteenth, and the match ended when they halved the next two.

The Pennsylvania team will play Massachusetts tomorrow in foursomes and singles for the Lesley Cup.

MOTORCYCLE RACES TODAY.

Sixty Riders Enter for Events at Sheepshead Bay.

After a lapse of nearly three years, motor cycle racing will be revived at the Sheepshead Bay Speedway this afternoon, when the national championships will be decided. Sixty riders, from all sections of the country, and one from Australia, will match nerve and skill at the seaside course in the national championships at 2, 10, 50, and 100 miles, as well as in the 20-mile stock and 25-mile sidecar championships, and two metropolitan title races at ten miles, one of them sidecar.

There will also be a time trial for the world's record by Arthur Vanderstuyft, who will endeavor to crack the existing figures for ten miles behind the chugging motor. Records are expected to topple in every one of the eight events, and a speed of two miles a minute is likely to be realized in the short-distance events.

The 100-mile race will feature the program, as its will bring together forty riders. The 50-mile race will be run simultaneously with the Derby, and the leader at 25 miles will receive a cash prize.

Soccer Teams to Meet.

The soccer teams of the Morse Dry Dock and Repair Company of Brooklyn and the Erie F. C. of Newark will meet in a national league contest tomorrow afternoon at Clark's Field, Newark.

Special to The New York Times.

SHAWNEE-ON-DELAWARE, Penn., Oct. 3.—Followers of the women's golf championship tournament have a choice treat in store for tomorrow, when the final round for the 1919 title will be played over the picturesque Shawnee Country Club links. They will find, matched to play the deciding eighteen holes, Miss Alexa W. Stirling of Atlanta, Ga., the present champion, who has retained her national title since 1916, when the last tournament was held, and Mrs. W. A. Gavin of the South Shore Field Club, in the New York metropolitan district. This pair, easily the two leading women golfers of America, came through the semi-final phase this morning, Miss Stirling beating, by 1 up, Mrs. Clarence H. Vanderbeck of the Philadelphia Cricket Club, the 1915 champion, and Mrs. Gavin conquering, by 3 and 2, the sensational newcomer, Miss Irene Peacock of Thousand Islands.

It it had been left to the decision of the ever-increasing gallery of spectators here no other two of the seventy-four women who entered the tournament this week would have been selected to play for the championship. Starting Monday, the day for qualifying, Miss Stirling and Mrs. Gavin tied for the medal and the ploy-off has not yet been held. That put them on a separate pedestal from the very start, and the playing of no two other women has been watched more analytically to discover who holds the slightest advantage.

Hard Match for Champion.

Playing this morning in the semi-finals, Miss Stirling had to call on her reserve supply of golfing ability. Matched against the shrewd, experienced former national champion, Mrs. Vanderbeck, it was never a match without unexpected possibilities. The gallery, which by today totaled several hundred as a result of the changed conditions from wet, soggy ground to drying, springy fairways and greens, followed every motion made by the two leaders. Miss Stirling was probably the favorite by a shade, and it was with an almost audible gasp of relief that her friends saw her sink the winning putt on the eighteenth hole. She had been two up during the outward journey, then had fallen to all even and had rounded the turn one up. Again, coming in, she reached three up, only to lose it again. When the seventeenth hole had been conceded to Mrs. Vanderbeck, after Miss Stirling had played wretched golf, the little champion had only a dormie advantage of one. The halved home hole ended the match.

The sum and substance of their playing today was that Miss Stirling again excelled in driving and in putting, but she found in the Philadelphia woman a dangerous opponent with the iron sticks. Miss Stirling launched forth at the first hole with a whirlwind speed. A drive, an exceedingly long brassie, and a five-foot putt gave her a birdie 3 on this par 4 hole of 283 yards. She took the longer second when Mrs. Vanderbeck needed three putts. They halved the third, but Mrs. Vanderbeck won for the first time on the fourth after the champion drove short, fetched into a brook on her second with a badly played iron shot, and took six strokes to hole out. Again on the fifth Mrs. Vanderbeck was the winner. Here the Atlanta girl almost pulled her second shot out of bounds, the ball staying in the bordering rough by a matter of inches. Her recovery was poor and her fourth shot even worse, when she dribbled a short approach. Both negotiated the long fifth in par figures, and the champion again became 1 up by winning the seventh with a seven-foot tap on the green. But her lead was short lived, for she trapped her drive on the short little eighth hole. They played the ninth evenly, with exceptionally good second shots, but once on the green Miss Stirling took the regulation two putts when Mrs. Vanderbeck needed three. This left her 1 up turning for the Inn, although the medal score of each had been 42.

Thirteenth Hole Best Played.

For the second time Miss Stirling went to 3 up, when she won both the tenth and eleventh after excellent putting. On the latter she rolled the ball fully fifteen feet from a downhill lie for a win. But she couldn't carry her prosperity safely, and Mrs. Vanderbeck promptly won the twelfth in par figures even after a visit to a bordering trap. Her recovery was remarkable and one putt sank her ball.

The thirteenth was a hole strictly "according to Hoyle." It was easily the best played of the match. Both were on in two and took two putts, Miss Stirling's a bit longer. But she lost the fourteenth by another poor piece of work with her irons, whereas the former title-holder from Philadelphia reached the edge of the green in her second shot. At the fifteenth Mrs. Vanderbeck went astray on her second into a trap, and then forgot herself long enough to use too heavy a swing for her third shot, the ball racing across the green to more trouble. This was too much and she picked up, conceding the hole to Miss Stirling. At the sixteenth, across the Billiekill River, both lost strokes by driving poorly to the slope of the embankment, but they halved the hole.

Miss Stirling became only one up by losing the seventeenth. Mrs. Vanderbeck reached the far away green in two orthodox strokes, while the champion let good opportunities go by when she played an iron into a trap, barely scaled the bunker on her third, and reached the green in four strokes. Mrs. Vanderbeck's third was pitched dead to the pin, less than six inches from it, and the champion graciously yet necessarily conceded the hole. The last seemed either's hole. Both drives were wide to the left, but they each gained the green on the approaches. Miss Stirling used two regulation putts and watched her opponent. By a hair's breadth Mrs. Vanderbeck failed to hole out in a 3. But the ball rimmed the cup, went on a few inches, and she, too, took a 4, halving the hole and losing the match to Miss Stirling by 1.

Against Mrs. Gavin the young Miss Peacock was never in the lead. She plays brilliantly—if she didn't she would never would have reached a semi-final round in a national championship—but, with Mrs. Gavin, she was pitted against an experienced opponent, a woman who learned her golf under the best of the British methods, and who plays as much with her brain as with her set of sticks. Miss Peacoek, however, had the better of the argument on the puting greens. She aimed and holed putts which to many seemed like long chances to take. But they weren't, for Miss Peacock has a confidence with her putter that brings her astonishingly good results. Mrs. Gavin's long drives, high, far-carrying, and well-directed drives, and her approach shots more than made up for any shortcomings on the greens.

At the turn Mrs. Gavin was 2 up, having won the first two holes, but having twice gone back to lead by only a single hole. It had been a journey of good playing, and, what was more, straight stroking. The traps had been explored only occasionally. At th short eighth Miss Peacock laid the English woman a stymie when the latter ran her third shot over the hole by fully fifteen feet. They halved this in fours. The tables were turned at the twelfth, the short punchbowl hole. Both were on in their tee shots, Miss Peacock four feet and Mrs. Gavin fourteen feet from the cup. But the latter ran past the hole by a couple of feet, laying Miss Peacock a three-quarters stymie, and they halved.

Miss Peacock snatched the thirteenth from right under Mrs. Gavin's nose and made it a halved hole. Mrs. Gavin was within eighteen inches of the cup on her third, but the girl from the Thousand Islands sank a seven-foot putt for a half. At the fourteenth Mrs. Gavin had gone back to only 1 up, as a result of her only mistake of tactics on the round. Her drive was long and straight, but in trying to get on with her second shot over a bunker her brassie stroke, low and hard, hit the top of the mound of grass and dropped back to a trap. She pitched high but short, messed up her fourth shot, still ten yards short, and needed no less than seven strokes to hole out. She won the fifteenth, however, and the sixteenth also, ending the match, when Miss Peacock put her first drive into the river.

DUNLAP HATS
WHEN you say you have bought a Dunlap, you needn't add that it is a hat. Dunlap means a hat just as a Rembrandt means a painting, just as Bokhara means a rug, just as Madeira means wine. There are very few business names so completely identified in the public mind as Dunlap. And the reason is that Dunlap has always meant just one thing—unusually high quality.

CONRAD DISOWNS PRO-GERMAN LETTER

WANTED NONE BUT ALLIES

Circular Form Filled Out for Germans by Clerk and Signed Without Being Read.

Lieut. Col. Julius T. Conrad, Adjutant General of the United States Army Recruiting Service in this city, declared yesterday that a letter signed by him, asking Professor Braun of Columbia University, to help persuade young Germans to enlist in our army, was mailed by mistake. He explained that the communication received by Professor Braun was a form letter, but was only intended to apply to aliens from the countries of the Allies. The Germans were included through a mistake of a clerk in the Recruiting Bureau, said the officer.

In the letter which was mailed under a Government frank to the Columbia Professor, the advantages of the Army's Recruit Educational Centres at Camps Upton and Meade were set forth. The first two paragraphs of the letter read:

> Dear Sir: In this letter we are asking your co-operation in our efforts to benefit the young men of Germany who have come and will come to this country to build a home and business, and especially those who do not speak the English language and have no special training to enable them to compete successfully here.
> Our Government has a worthy interest in these young men, especially as every German who has had a chance to make good has done so and has become not only successful in himself but a credit to this land.

Official Statement Issued.

"Recruiting Publicity Bureau,
"United States Army,
"461 Eighth Avenue,
"New York, N.Y.,
"Oct. 3, 1919.

"In explanation of the letter bearing my signature addressed to Professor William Braun, Columbia University, published in THE NEW YORK TIMES of this date, the following is stated:

"The work of Americanizing the non-English-speaking citizens and declarents for citizenship in America, which is being conducted by the War Department through the operation of recruit educational centres—the first of which was established at Camp Upton—being of the importance it is, this office has been anxious to interest the numberless patriotic and civic societies whose efforts are devoted largely to the work of making Americans of our foreign-speaking peoples.

"Recently a detachment of twenty-eight men, 'graduates' from the Camp Upton School, were sent on an exhibition tour through the northeastern section of the country. These twenty-eight men represent fourteen nationalities. Each of them has declared his intention of becoming an American citizen. At the time of their enlistment, approximately the 1st of May, 1919, none of them could read or write or speak the English language. Today they converse in English and use our language in writing letters to their relatives and friends. While they were acquiring this rudimentary education they were given also military instruction, so that they have been attaining the dual education of the soldier and the citizen.

"This detachment made its first public appearance in New York and awakened such enthusiasm on the part of various Americanization societies that a letter setting forth the advantages of the Recruit Educational Centre was drafted to be sent to a number of societies and individuals in and near New York, to the end ...at their work of Americanization might be aided through the facilities which the army has established in the education centres referred to. This letter was to be identical to all persons and societies except in so far as the nationality was concerned. The first group of letters was dispatched to those interested in Americanization work among people of Italian origin. When this group had been mailed out the same letter was to be sent to societies interested in similar work among the people of other foreign origins—the name of the nationality being changed to fit the case.

Adopted Form of Letter.

"Before any of the letters were sent out the matter was discussed, the form of the letter adopted, and the list of nationalities to be included was adopted. In this list was included only the nationalities of our Allies.

"The preparation of the letters and their distribution was intrusted to a clerk on duty with this bureau. The letters were prepared, approximately 400 in number, and passed to me for signature, it being my idea that a letter of this nature should bear the signature of the chief of the bureau. I did not verify the accuracy of the mechanical work, that is, check up and see that every letter intended to be sent out was ready to be mailed, nor to see that no nationality not intended to be included was included, but assumed that the letters were prepared in form and for nationalities in accordance with the plan adopted.

"The undersigned can well understand the amazement with which Professor Braun must have read the letter, for had I known that the German nationality had been included the letter would never have left this office. The inclusion of the Germans was due to misunderstanding on the part of the officer charged with the preparation of the letter.
J. T. CONRAD,
"Adjutant General, Chief of Bureau."

Colonel Conrad said he was chiefly concerned lest through the unfortunate slip of a clerk the aliens from the allied countries should be deterred from enlisting in our army.

"Our recruit centres are doing a splendid work," he declared, "and an energetic, industrious alien will find it extremely to his advantage to join the service. His pay and emoluments will amount to a sum equivalent to $113 a month, and all the time he will be learning English as well as a useful trade of some kind. We teach thirty-five different trades as well as drill at the recruit depots, as you know.

"It should be understood that no German would be enlisted in our army at this time, nor would an Austrian, nor a Bulgarian, nor a Turk. The natives of the countries of our allies are welcome and we will do our best to make them useful citizens, a credit to this country and to themselves."

INQUIRY ORDERED BY BAKER.

War Department Stirred by Recruiting Bureau Letter.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—Secretary Baker today ordered an inquiry into the authenticity of a letter from the Publicity Bureau of the United States Army Recruiting Service at New York, in which co-operation was asked in efforts to "benefit the young men of Germany" by having them enlist in the American Army.

Secretary Baker declined to comment on the letter, but other officials of the War Department expressed their surprise that such a communication should have been sent.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—Germany's spy system extended into the United States Army before the war, Major Gen. William M. Black, Chief of Engineers, told the House Military Committee today in opposing enlistment of aliens. He cited the case of a German who enlisted in the Engineer Corps a number of years ago and subsequently returned to Germany.

Representative James, Rpublican, Chicago, called attention to reports that the Army Recruiting Service in New York was seeking to enlist Germans.

"How can we take the Germans into our army since we are technically at war now with Germany?" asked Mr. James.

ASSAILS CARRANZA OFFICIAL

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—Reports from Mexico City today indicate that the break between the majority of the Mexican Congress and the Carranza Cabinet that has been expected for some time by close observers is imminent.

A speech by Juan N. Frias, a majority leader in the Senate, attacking the Department of Industry, Commerce and Labor, has just been telegraphed here in full and is being studied by the State Department.

Leon Salinas, Acting Secretary of Industry, Commerce and Labor, was invited to attend the Senate and give information regarding the aims of President Carranza on measures before the Senate, but he refused to make any statement unless the unamended measures of the Executive were reported out. He declared that if the majority report of the Senate, referring to the petroleum bill, were under discussion he would wait and hear the debate, but would not add to the information before the Senate.

Kurt Schindler Back from Spain.

Among the passengers who arrived late yesterday on the Spanish steamship Leon VIII. was Kurt Schindler, director of the Schola Cantorum of New York, who had been in Spain for more than three months, and brought back with him a number of native compositions which will be performed during the coming season. While he was at Barcelona the Orfeo Catalan, the well-known Spanish musical society, gave a fête in his honor.

Blumenthal Out of Star Opera Co.

George Blumenthal resigned yesterday as manager of the Star Opera Company, which plans to open a season of German opera at the Lexington Theatre on Oct. 20. Mrs. Oscar Hammerstein has arranged with Mr. Blumenthal, who was associated with her late husband's operatic and theatrical enterprises, to be her representative in business matters left by the impresario at his death. Mr. Blumenthal will also carry on the campaign for a permanent memorial to Oscar Hammerstein.

Indoor People's Concert Tonight.

Philip Berolzheimer, the City Chamberlain, has arranged for tonight at Aeolian Hall the first event in an indoor series of the Mayor Hylan People's Concerts. The artists include Della Baker and Marie Sundelius, sopranos; Robert Quait, tenor; David Bispham, baritone; Vera Barstow, violinist; Rudolph Ganz, pianist, and William C. Carl, organist. Tickets are not for sale, but may be had on application to the Park Commissioners of the several boroughs.

Jane Manner's Dramatic Readings.

Jane Manner, dramatic reader, will begin her seventh annual series of dramatic readings at the Waldorf-Astoria on Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 11, when she will read Hervieu's play, "The Trail of the Sword." She will give three afternoon readings at the Waldorf on successive Tuesdays, and a final reading at the Hotel Plaza on Tuesday night, Dec. 16.

'A Young Man's Fancy' for Criterion

"A Young Man's Fancy," originally announced for presentation at the Liberty Theatre, will instead have its Metropolitan premiere at the Criterion Theatre on Tuesday night, Oct. 14. The piece is a comedy by John T. McIntyre, and will have Jeanne Eagels and Philip Merivale in the leading rôles. "Thunder," now at the Criterion, will be withdrawn at the end of next week.

MANAGERS AND EQUITY PLACE 2,400 STRIKERS

The last of more than 2,400 cases of actors thrown out of employment or otherwise affected by the actors' strike was settled early last night at a conference between delegations from the Producing Managers' Association and the Actors' Equity Association. The period provided for the settlement of such cases was thirty days from the end of the strike, and was due to expire next Monday.

Last night's meeting marked the formal ending of all negotiations between the two sides as a result of the strike. Sam H. Harris, Henry W. Savage, Marc Klaw, and William A. Brady acted for the managers, and Grant Stewart, Echlin Gayer, and John Emerson for the actors. The meeting, which was held in the office of Mr. Harris, settled ten case in all, these having been the most difficult of the 2,400 which existed when the strike came to an end.

The peace agreement provided that the manager must re-employ all players within thirty days or else find employment for them elsewhere on equally favorable terms. That failing, a monetary consideration was to be decided upon by the arbitration board. The cases growing out of this provision were those in which individual managers and actors were unable to agree as to amounts to be paid or the disposition which was to be made of certain performers.

One case which it was thought might cause some difficulty was that of Ed Wynn, whose activities during the strike caused particular bitterness between himself and the Shuberts, under whose management he had been. When the strike ended Wynn did not return to the cast of "The Shubert Gaieties of 1919," and it was said at the Shubert office that he would be transferred to another Shubert production. Grant Stewart, Secretary of the Actors' Equity Association, said last night that Wynn finally had been provided for, but that he would not continue with the Shuberts. It is understood that he will be under the management of A. L. Erlanger.

Mr. Stewart said also that the Equity has not abandoned entirely its plan for a co-operative theatre, and that some steps in this direction may be taken in the near future. The actors, according to Earle Boothe, have obtained considerable financial backing, and are in position to go ahead with the production of plays, although no attempt will be made, it was said, to build up the huge system which was contemplated while the strike was on.

The Equity is now making plans for the erection of a clubhouse in New York, and Mr. Stewart declared that the ground floor of this structure probably would be used for a theatre in which Equity productions would be housed.

NEW "FROLIC" IS GORGEOUS.

Ziegfeld's Beauties at Their Pictorial Best When Gowned as Birds.

The task of keeping the tired business man out of bed was resumed Thursday night on the roof of the New Amsterdam Theatre, where a ninth edition of Florenz Ziegfeld's "Midnight Frolic" was revealed before an audience composed almost exclusively of the folk who are Broadway.

The new show is a first-rate example of its kind—atoning by sheer splendor for any shortcomings of text which it may possess. From a scenic and sartorial standpoint it is the leader of all the "Frolics"; it is, in fact, quite as gorgeous as the "Follies" in the theatre below. The Josef Urban setting, showing two twisted trees set against a background of changeable blues and greens, is of striking beauty, and some good effects are achieved also by the silhouetting of the chorus against a curtain of black velvet.

The Ziegfeld beauties run to the statuesque in the new entertainment, and are at their pictorial best in a number in which they are gowned as birds. In fact, the appearance of the lengthy Dolores as a white peacock was perhaps the artistic high mark of the night.

Frances White, back to these shores after a pleasant conquest of London, failed to intrigue as of old until she donned again the simple habiliments of her "Mississippi" days, and sang that number and others of similar strain. Miss White is at her best as a singer of simple ditties; the formal "number" is not her forte.

The hilarious Fannie Brice contributed two songs, and a newcomer named Ted Lewis—new to the roof, but not to patrons of vaudeville or of "The Greenwich Village Follies"—proved himself the possessor of a fine sense of nonsense, and romped off rather easily with the comedy honors of the morning. Two youths named Keegan and Edwards were entertaining in a jazzy offering; the amusing W. C. Fields performed along familiar lines, and a pitiable five minutes were provided by Savoy and Brennan, whose theory it is that all which is disgusting is humorous.

TONIGHT?

The lights of the new plays wink in the autumn twilight—and remind you that another year is passing. You feel the old attraction to the theatre—the evergreen enthusiasm for a bright new entertainment.

And so, quite naturally you will call upon McBride's for your seats—confident that they will be well chosen and promptly and courteously furnished.

The service fee is the same—fifty cents over the box office price. The service is—better, if anything, but, as it has been for 46 years, eager and expert.

Growth in Petroleum Imports

The U. S. Geological Survey in its 1917 report states: "Despite the fact that the United States is the world's principal producer and distributor of petroleum and petroleum products, its import trade in those commodities is steadily increasing This is especially true with regard to grades of oil desired for use as fuel, including both crude petroleum and 'topped crude' available from Mexico and Trinidad. The percentage increase in imports of the following products in 1917 over that of 1916 is as follows: Crude, 50%; Topped Crude, 218%; Motor Fuel, 288%."

FINANCIAL MARKETS

The stock market turned weak shortly after the start of business yesterday, in fact many quotations were lower in initial transactions than at the preceding session's close, and the downward course was pursued throughout the day. Professional traders appeared to take advantage of the disturbance of sentiment caused by unfavorable news about President Wilson's condition, and short sales hurried the decline all the way along. The recession was most pronounced among industrial issues whose recent advance had supplied the major feature of day-to-day dealings, and it was a safe inference that traders with substantial profits on paper quickly elected to convert them into cash. At the end of the session declines extending from 2 to 4 points were widely scattered throughout the list. Crucible Steel, Baldwin Locomotive, Mexican Petroleum, and one or two others dropped further, a movement not at all surprising in case of the first named, at least, considering the vim with which buyers had elevated the quotation from the 200 level in the last week.

Call money again went through the rather singular gyrations which have characterized rates for some time past. Starting off at 7 per cent., the quotation rose to 12 per cent. and in the afternoon fell away to 6 per cent. The high quotations day after day probably had a cumulative effect on yesterday's stock market, causing the closing out of speculative long accounts after the general trend turned downward. The causes of the sharp upturns of the demand loan rate are not altogether clear. New financing for several weeks has been on a smaller scale than during the early Summer and commercial borrowings as reflected in the mercantile bill market are reported somewhat smaller than in the fore part of September. It is possible that interior banks have been withdrawing more of their funds from New York for crop moving purposes than banking comment has indicated, and it is understood that the local institutions are making effort to improve their reserve position.

The underlying factors likely to influence security market transactions were no different yesterday than on the day before, unless they could be said to be more favorable. Steel mill operations were described in dispatches as steadily increasing, with more slowness in the Mahoning Valley than in the other great steel-making territory. In fact, plant activity in the Pittsburgh, Chicago, and Bethlehem regions was reported so satisfactory, considering the length of the strike, that the financial community thought that only the sluggishness of output in the Youngstown section stood forth as evidence that any material success had attended the attempt of union leaders to disrupt the industry. The surveys of the mercantile agencies noted the continuation of an eager demand for many sorts of goods, consumption being limited in various lines only by the inability of wholesalers and manufacturers to supply what was asked for.

Sterling exchange lost ground, although the final quotation for sight drafts, 4.21¼, was more than 2 cents to the pound above the day's minimum. Francs were fairly firm, stimulated, presumably, by the fact that the Chamber of Deputies had accepted the Peace Treaty. The vote in our own Senate upon the Fall amendments seemed to have no effect on the exchanges, as it was interpreted in different ways by bankers in terms of its influence on later deliberations at Washington.

French Bourse Quotations.

PARIS, Oct. 3.—Trading on the Bourse today was sustained. Three per cent. rentes were quoted at 61 francs 20 centimes for cash, exchange on London at 35 francs 46 centimes, and the 5 per cent. loan at 90 francs 30 centimes. The quotation on the dollar was 8 francs 44½ centimes.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Call Loans.

The figures which give the amounts of money lent on call on the Stock Exchange at yesterday's varying rates show some interesting conditions. For instance, of the day's total of $32,125,000 thus lent only $2,450,000 was placed at 6 per cent., while $14,300,000, or nearly half of the total, was put out at the day's maximum of 12 per cent. The renewal rate, really the most important rate of the day, was 7 per cent., yet new loans made at that figure totaled only $10,400,000, or $3,900,000 less than was lent at the day's high.

Unfilled Steel Orders.

Much interest is being displayed in the forthcoming statement of unfilled orders on the books of the United States Steel Corporation at the close of last month. This report will be made next Friday. Although a gain is predicted, there is no certainty that it will be of the proportions recorded in the several months immediately preceding September. For June, July, and August the gain would average between 500,000 and 600,000 tons. The September report will be affected by strike conditions, and while a lessening of production might normally mean the piling up of orders, it is doubtful if such a condition obtained this time. Trade reports indicated that there was a falling off in orders for steel products, due to the uncertainty raised by the strike. If this is true the corporation would do well to show a gain of 300,000 tons.

Bears Strike at Market.

The illness of the President was a disturbing factor in yesterday's stock market, and the fact that a cautious sentiment prevailed gave opportunity for the bears to make another drive against prices. The attack extended over the entire list, and in some instances rather sharp declines were brought about. This was especially true in the case of those stocks which have been advancing vigorously and whose technical position has been to an extent undermined. There was some good buying of stocks on a scale down, and the selling was fairly well absorbed. It is probable that part of the selling originated in the ranks of those who wished to close out accounts over the week-end, fearing that there would be some untoward developments before Monday.

Fisher Body Responds.

The announcement that General Motors was negotiating for the purchase of what will practically be a controlling interest in the Fisher Body Corporation served to bring some spirited buying to the latter issue. A new high for all time was touched at 148½. The weakness of the general list in the afternoon caused a recession, but a net gain of 1½ points was made, the issue closing at 144.

Steel Stocks Under Pressure.

The steel stocks suffered some substantial declines, even though everything bearing on the strike made for a better outlook. When bear pressure is exerted it usually picks out the more prominent issues of the steel group for the initial attack, it being fairly well established that a break in this list precipitates a decline throughout the general list. United States Steel lost 2 points, and Bethlehem Steel B, which has been one of the most buoyant of the steel shares, met with a setback of 3⅜ points. The reaction of 7¼ points in Crucible was directly attributable to the fact that the fight for control is over.

American Locomotive at New High.

American Locomotive shares touched 116 yesterday, the highest price that has ever been quoted. The company is in an excellent position as regards earnings, and prospective orders from Europe and South America, if they are closed, would supply business over a considerable period. It is the opinion of many that the equipment companies can look forward to capacity business for a number of years, and this has induced good buying of all the equipment issues.

Tobacco Stocks Soft.

With the exception of American Tobacco, there was weakness in the tobacco group yesterday, most of the issues easing off from 2 to 4 points. American Tobacco was buoyed up by the strength which developed in American Tobacco Securities Corporation on the Curb, which went as high as 80 and closed at 78½. The plan of exchange of American Tobacco for the shares of the new company, it is understood calls for four shares of the Tobacco Securities Corporation for one share of American Tobacco.

Forestalling Argument.

The new figures are interesting and, in a limited way, valuable. In movements such as yesterday's, when the day's maximum rate was just double the minimum, with such a broad spread between, they give an interesting light on the general demand loan situation by showing just how the new money put out went. Most people who know anything about the workings of the call money market believe that when flurries occur only a small amount is lent at the high rates, say a few hundred thousand dollars. Thus, when brokers find it necessary to charge what appear to be high rates for carrying charges, some clients are prone to say nasty things. Now, with the record spread before them, these same clients may be dissuaded from making unfavorable remarks, and the life of the commission house manager may be made somewhat easier.

Inflation and Deflation.

The latest weekly statements of condition to be issued by the Bank of France and the German Reichsbank indicate that the Germans are facing their currency problems with possibly more courage than are the French, and certainly with better results. Both institutions show large increases in outstanding currency notes on the latest week reported on, but in the case of the Bank of France, this increase is simply one of a long and most consistent list of increases, whereas at the Reichsbank the expansion is part of a fluctuating movement which, in recent months, has shown a contracting tendency. Since June 30, the turn of the year, the amount of outstanding notes at the Bank of France has increased by $351,950,000, while at the Reichsbank in the same period there has been a contraction of $311,083,000.

Traction Bonds Strong.

With reports in circulation that Frank Hedley will soon be elected President of the Interborough, and with the idea growing that the increased fare is to become realized, notwithstanding the Mayor's opposition, there are those in the financial community who are beginning to look with favor upon local traction bonds. Many of these securities are quoted at figures which would be ridiculous if the situation were not so serious. At that, there seems to be a good demand for the securities, and yesterday there was an especially good demand for such issues as Inter-Met 4½s, which sold up about three points, and Interborough Rapid Transit 5s, which gained nearly 2 points.

Today's Bank Statement.

There were plenty of predictions yesterday that today's bank statements, both the display from the Clearing House and the statement issued by the Federal Reserve Bank, would show some big shifts, but nobody was willing to prophesy as to what these shifts would be. The movements of money this week have been unusually large. Clearings up to yesterday totalled something more than $4,500,000,000 for New York, and the movements into and out of the banks for Government account and other purposes are said to have been close to, if not in excess of the high record. The action of the call money market would make it appear that the banks have been at some trouble to hold their reserve position up to standard.

Safety High Income Probable Profit

These are the three outstanding features of the Cities Service Convertible 7%s (Series C) which we recommend for investment.

The principal is adequately safeguarded by present earnings, which are about ten times interest charges. Income yield is about 6.40%. A large profit is likely to arise through the conversion privilege—probably 20% in eighteen months and perhaps much more.

HEDLEY MAY SUCCEED PRESIDENT SHONTS

MAY BE ONLY TEMPORARY

Frank Hedley, Vice President and General Manager of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, may be elected head of that corporation at a Directors' meeting next Thursday, according to a report circulated in the financial district yesterday. It was said that Mr. Hedley had been chosen, and that his election at the meeting of Directors next Tuesday would be a matter of routine. This came as a surprise to those who have been following Interborough affairs recently, as it had been fairly well understood that Directors were not anxious to lose Mr. Hedley as operating head of the subway and elevated systems.

At the same time it was pointed out yesterday that Mr. Hedley's election might be temporary and that it would give the members of the board more time to search for the kind of an executive that they are understood to want. Their choice, it appears, would be a man who could sit down at a table with the municipal authorities and convince them that the local traction companies should be afforded some measure of relief from the enormous advance in operating expenses they have had to face since the beginning of the war.

Mr. Hedley has been with the Interborough for more than sixteen years, having come from Chicago to be the company's General Superintendent in 1903. Later in that year the elevated lines were brought under his management, and about a year later he was made General Manager of the company.

He is recognized among public utility operators and owners as essentially an operating man, and shortly after becoming General Manager of the company he turned to the mechanical improvement of the service. Since then he has perfected several inventions which have simplified rapid transit in this city.

It was remarked yesterday that he has been the real head of the company during the long illness of Mr. Shonts.

Gain for Switzerland's Commerce.

BERNE, Oct. 3.—A considerable improvement in Swiss commerce during the first half of the year 1919 is recorded in statistics published here. Imports into Switzerland for the six months increased 437,000,000 francs and exports 203,000,000 francs, as compared with the same period of last year.

THE CONDITION OF TRADE.

Business is being greatly inconvenienced in certain parts of the country due to strikes and labor unrest, and the volume of trade is shrinking as a result, according to the weekly review of R. G. Dun & Co. In discussing conditions this publication says:

Continued strikes in some lines and fresh outbreaks in others are not only a cause of hesitation, but prevent operations of magnitude that settled conditions would otherwise stimulate, and the attendant loss of production either directly or indirectly affects various important interests. Yet progress is not wholly impeded, despite the existing drawbacks, and from trades and sections outside the immediate influence of industrial controversies come frequent reports of a demand for goods beyond the ability of sellers to satisfy. The shortage of supplies, aggravated by the restriction of outputs, is more often a factor in limiting transactions than any question of prices, and the extensive buying of luxuries and the better classes of merchandise is a feature commented upon in many dispatches.

With comparatively few exceptions, retail distribution has not as yet been appreciably curtailed by the stoppage of wages that results from the partial or complete shutdowns at manufacturing establishments, but the deleterious effects can hardly fail to find sharper reflection in diminished consumptive purchasing if the labor troubles at steel plants and elsewhere should prove to be protracted. The export outlook, moreover, has been complicated by the great railway strike in England, which has necessitated delays in domestic overseas shipments, and the depreciation of international exchange, while less marked than recently, remains an obstacle in the development of foreign business.

Record bank clearings for this period at most of the principal cities in the United States continue, the aggregate this week at twenty leading centres being $8,157,452,821, an increase of 30.8 per cent. over the figures of the same week last year, and of 37.9 per cent. in comparison with those of the corresponding week in 1917.

Bradstreet's review says:

Production and shipment are alike retarded and irritated by the continuance of old strikes and the launching of new ones, while foreign trade, especially exports, is checked by foreign labor disturbances. On the other hand, final distribution as reflected in reports of jobbers and retailers at most of the country markets is still at a high rate of speed, with most complaints having to do with insufficient supplies of goods to satisfy insistent demand for both immediate and distant positions. Incidentally, it might be noted that there is rather less repression in big primary lines and in the stock and bond markets, which latter have displayed a better tone, broader dealings and an accession of confidence. Unquestionably this is due largely to the evidences accumulating day by day that the great steel strike menace has been met and practically mastered, and that the first important check has been administered to radical labor interference with the ordinary processes of industry.

COTTON TUMBLES IN HEAVY BREAKS

Market Has Two Sharp Turns Downward, Finishing Off 105 to 110 Points.

NO STRENGTH DISPLAYED

Trade Depressed by Unfavorable but Unconfirmed Reports on President's Illness.

The cotton market yesterday suffered two sharp breaks, both in the afternoon, and as a result of the action prices finished the day at the low levels of 105 to 110 points under where they had closed on Thursday.

The first of these breaks, which occurred shortly before 2 o'clock, was due mainly to the fact that the liquidation which had been in progress in a rather indefinite way all day suddenly exhausted support, and prices simply broke to the next supporting level, which happened to be about 50 points under the previous day's closing figures. The second break, which did not reach its conclusion until the close of business, was the result of some alarming, but not substantiated, rumors concerning the President's illness.

At no time during the session was there any appearance of strength. The market opened off 25 to 30 points and then rallied 10 to 15 points. But the rally was half-hearted and did not impress any one. The brisk recovery on Thursday afternoon, after the market had broken badly on the Government's crop report, seemed to have taken up all the buying orders and left the market technically weak. This eliminated one of the chief sources of support and helped depress prices yesterday.

However, the market dragged along aimlessly, and it was not until well into the afternoon that anything startling happened. Then the weakness suddenly became acute and prices melted away.

That first break was merely one of those market adjustments which frequently occur in a dull session, but the last break, which was sharper than the first, was brought about by a mild panic following the circulation of some very unfavorable reports concerning the President. These reports, based on nothing substantial, so far as could be ascertained, served to depress the market more than anything else had all day.

Prosperity in Dry Goods.

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—Marshall Field & Co. in their weekly review of the dry goods trade say:

"Current wholesale distribution of dry goods was very much in excess of the corresponding week a year ago.

"Merchants were in the market in greater numbers than during the same week of 1918. All report excellent business.

"Orders from road salesmen for both immediate and future delivery were much greater in volume, especially the latter, compared with the same period last year. Collections continue most satisfactory."

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

Apprehension as to the President's condition overshadowed advices of a return to normal money rates and generally favorable developments otherwise and led to extensive liquidation with resulting losses of from 3 to 11 points in numerous of the active issues on the Consolidated Stock Exchange yesterday. Crucible Steel was offered down 11 to 222, Bethlehem Steel B 3⅞ to 102¼, Republic Iron & Steel 2⅛ to 93¼, and U. S. Steel common 1⅛ to 104⅝. Mexican Petroleum fell back 7¾ to 223, ending at 224, while Pan American moved down 3 to 117½, Royal Dutch, N. Y., 2⅝ to 100⅝, Trans-Continental 2 to 56, and Sinclair Oil 3⅛ to 58⅞. Baldwin Locomotive receded 5⅞ to 134, and American Locomotive 5⅝ to 110¼, with a last minute rally to 111¼.

Middle States Oil CORPORATION
Notice to Stockholders

In paying the October 1st dividend we notice a small number of the holders of $1.00 shares had not converted their stock into the new $10.00 shares and, therefore, we have no record of their holdings as of September 20, 1919, and it is not possible to know the names and addresses to which October 1st dividend checks should be sent. This is to advise all such that promptly upon receiving proper evidence of their ownership of the former $1.00 shares as of September 20th we will forward proper October 1st dividend check.

MIDDLE STATES OIL CORPORATION,
By Norman G. Pearsall, Auditor.

Dress Fabrics for Spring.

Not overmuch eagerness is shown by cutters-up for dress goods for Spring. A number of them have put in orders for enough to carry them over until after the first of the year, after which they will take their chances on the market. They are not quite certain as to prices, but have little or no doubt as to the fabrics which will be salable. Tricotines are favored, as are also Poiret twills.

Now Trimming Hats with Grass.

Millinery wholesalers seem to be going far afield these days in order to get novel trimming for Fall hats. Wreaths and pompoms of soft grass are now being displayed by one of the leading local importers, and are said to make most effective trimmings for models made of felt or velour. Some of the wreaths show four or five shades blended together and used as a banding for crowns. They are soft and furry, and can be had in any of the new light shades. On a little lavender model of crushed felt brushes of the new grass, shading from a deep purple to the palest lavender, are scattered over the entire hat.

Demand for White Goods.

In describing the demand for dry goods, the Chicago house of John V. Farwell Company states that the advance orders on white goods for Spring are the largest in the history of the concern. Organdies, voiles, plain linweaves, nainsooks, and fancy styles are the leaders. Merchants are covering early Spring requirements on bedspreads, sheets, and pillow slips, and there is a pronounced demand for colored bedspreads.

Heavy Gray Goods in Demand.

The feature of the trading in heavy gray goods in the local market yesterday was the selling at 17¾ cents of fair-sized quantities of 36-inch 3.90-yard sheetings for delivery to June 1 next. For shipment through the last quarter of this year further sales of 36-inch 5 and 5.50 yard sheetings were put through at 14¼ and 13 centss, respectively. For January-March delivery trading was done in 37-inch 3-yard drills at 23¼ cents. Sateens and twills sold freely for delivery through the rest of 1919, among the important sales recorded being transactions in 39-inch 64-104, 4.20-yard sateens at 29 cents. The fine-yarn end of the business was quiet during the day.

Percale Prices for Spring Due?

In spite of the fact that the leading printers of cotton goods have never before been so secretive regarding how and when prints and percales for a new season are to be priced, enough "inside information" seems to have leaked out to convince buyers that quotations for these goods for next Spring's delivery are about to be given out. It would not surprise many of the jobbers if the new price lists were mailed to the trade some time today, and if Monday should pass without this being done it would cause something akin to a shock. The recent ups and downs of the gray goods market, and particularly its present "up" condition, have kept the whole trade guessing as to how the printers would go about getting a decent profit on their goods in the face of the general feeling among buyers that prices on printed cloths of the type in question are almost too high already.

Printcloths Sell Away Ahead.

Both buyers and sellers of printcloths in the local market apparently expect that no serious advance or decline in these goods will come for some time, for they got together yesterday and, among other things, traded in 39-inch 80 squares at 26 cents for delivery through the first six months of 1920. Special significance was attached to these transactions, in view of the fact that they not only called for the longest deliveries sold in this market for many months, but they took place at the highest price that has been paid for any printcloths for several weeks. Other business put through yesterday included sales of 38½-inch 64-60s at 16¾ cents for delivery during this month and next. This trading was done by second hands. At 21 cents mills took orders for 39-inch 68-72s for shipment similar to that of the foregoing construction.

Plaids Are Still in Demand.

Not only are retail buyers after plaids in an active way in the local dress goods trade, in spite of the lateness of the wholesale buying season, but some of the skirt men are also reported to be casting about for them, in order to make up garments of this type that are being called for in duplicate orders being received from their customers. While some of the separate skirt houses are said to have done less well with certain of their lines than was expected, this appears not to have been the case with plaid skirts. The goods that are being sought now run to more conservative colorings than were wanted earlier in the season, and some retailers are asking for fabrics with smaller checks in them. The cutters are said also to be leaning toward the latter. In no case are surpluses of plaids to be found.

Get Their Quarterly Bonuses.

The 2,076 employes of the National Cloak and Suit Company of this city have just received an aggregate of $62,878 in bonuses due them for the three months ended Sept. 30. Fifty-five per cent. of the departments concerned earned 100 per cent. of the bonus offered for excelling the conservative mark set for them, and all of the other departments improved their work to the extent necessary to earn a part of it. Under the company's plan the employes are allowed really to earn their bonuses rather than merely receiving similar amounts of money in periodical cash gifts. The satisfaction of the employes with this feature of the plan is said to be apparent from the large reduction in the labor turnover that has been seen since it went into effect. Another interesting feature of the plan is that it provides for one-half of any saving made in the use of supplies, stationery, &c., being divided among the employes. Although this part of the plan has been in operation only a short time, the indications are that the total saving resulting from it will reach about $50,000 annually.

Many Fur Buyers Are in Town.

In addition to the many fur men who have come here from other American and Canadian cities to attend the annual Fall auction of raw furs, which begins in the Masonic Hall here on Monday at 10 A. M., the following buyers from foreign countries have registered to date at the warehouse of the New York Fur Auction Sales Corporation, 48 Great Jones Street, where the furs to be sold are now on show: Major Frank J. Harris, Sydney, Australia; Eric Hansen, Malmo, Sweden; Oscar Huber, Buenos Aires, Argentina; V. Leitis, representing the United Credit Union of Siberia, Vladivostok, and A. Shvedsky, A. Sheshnoff and W. Shvetzoff, all of Moscow, Russia. They will be among the approximately 1,000 buyers and shippers to the sale who will attend a "surprise dinner" that is to be given by the corporation in the main ballroom of the Hotel Pennsylvania here on Thursday next at 7:30 P. M. Aside from the fact that an elaborate program has been arranged, which involves the erection of a special stage in the ballroom, not much is being said of the entertainment features. These are in charge of a committee headed by Harry Eisenbach of Eisenbach Brothers & Co.

BUSINESS RECORDS

Bankruptcy Petition.

David Strauss, bookkeeper at 20 West 4th Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy with liabilities of $8,152 and no assets. All the debts were contracted in Florida in 1915-1916 as a partner in the firm of Gwynn & Strauss in the cigar business at Key West. The largest creditor is the First National Bank of Key West, $3,485.

Weekly Failure Report.

Bradstreet's reports 86 failures in the United States for the week, against 116 for the previous week, and 161, 194, 236 and 308 for the corresponding weeks of 1918 to 1915. The Middle States had 24, New England 11, Southern 13, Western 22, Northwestern 5, Far Western 11. Canada had 11, compared with 13 for the preceding week. About 91 per cent. of the failures had less than $5,000 capital, and 4 per cent. had from $5,000 to $20,000 capital.

COMMODITIES PRICES.

Advances in Those of Flour and Dairy Products a Feature.

Advances in a number of the more important foodstuffs, including several of the dairy products and provisions, featured Dun's list of wholesale prices this week. Despite this fact, however, there was an excess of declines in the general list for the first time in the last three weeks. Only 55 of the 313 articles listed were revised in price during the week, and of these 29 went down. Last week, in a total of 57 changes, 23 declines were shown. Further declines in some of the listed prices on hides were also a feature of the week's trading.

The following list gives the minimum wholesale prices quoted on selected standard commodities this week. They are corrected to yesterday, and with them are given comparative prices for last week and the corresponding week a year ago:

Next to the rise in flour, the further advances in dairy products were of most particular importance in the foodstuffs markets here this week. The best creamery butter went up 4 cents a pound, making a rise of 6½ cents in the last two weeks. State dairy butter of the common to fair grade advanced 3 cents. No quotation was given on the best renovated stock in the list. No changes at all were recorded in the different qualities of cheese. The feature of the revisions in egg prices was the unusually sharp rise of 10 cents a dozen in the best Westerns. This placed the total advance for two weeks at 14 cents a dozen and put the current price 10 cents a dozen higher than was asked at this time a year ago.

In the local market for provisions the feature was a rise of 25 cents a barrel in Spring patent flour. There was also an advance of 5 cents a barrel in Winter "straights." Bacon was slightly lower than last week, and there was also a drop in hams. At Chicago live beef did not change. Live sheep advanced, but live hogs declined. Mess pork went down, and the same was true of short ribs. Middle Western lard was quoted higher. Neither the fresh nor the dried fruits showed change one way or the other, and, excepting for a drop in choice marrow beans, the vegetables list was bare of changes. Spices completed another week without visible fluctuation.

The grains list showed declines in corn and malting barley, but oats and rye went up. In the leather list there was no advance and no decline, but in the hides further weakness was shown by four of the ten grades listed. These were No. 1 Texas, branded cows, country No. 1 steers and No. 1 heavy cows. The metals produced higher prices for No. 2X pig iron at Philadelphia and in No. 2 pig iron at Cincinnati, doubtless due to the effects of the strike. Furnace coke for prompt shipment declined, and the other declines for the week were in lead and in lake and electrolytic coppers. Tin advanced.

In the combined list for drugs, chemicals, dyestuffs, and oils there were six advances and seven declines. Easily the feature among the latter was the sharp drop here in raw linseed oil from the nominal level it had maintained for several weeks. A further rise in foreign refined camphor was another feature. Sharp declines in resin and turpentine marked the week in the naval stores. In the miscellaneous revisions were an advance in tallow and a decline in the leading grade of Chinese (Shanghai) raw silk.

The only decline of the week in the cotton goods list was in wide sheetings, where a certain house cut these goods 10 cents a yard, for a reason that is still a mystery to the trade at large, and was followed by another well-known concern. Other leading houses did not meet the reduction. All of the changes in the gray cloths were upward, reflecting good buying and a firmer undertone to the market in spite of the ups and downs of cotton. The burlaps had a quieter week of it than for some time, with the result that the price of heavy goods slipped off a little. Lightweights remained steady.

BUSINESS NOTES.

By an error it was announced in Thursday's issue of THE TIMES that the name of the old millinery house of Sinclair, Rooney & Co. of Buffalo had been changed to Sinclair, O'Rourke & Bone Company. The old house remains unchanged in name. The new concern contains Messrs. O'Rourke and Bone, former buyers for Sinclair, Rooney & Co. The local offices of both firms are at 621 Broadway.

A meeting of the upholstery goods buyers of the Dry Goods Union will be held at 432 Fourth Avenue on Tuesday next.

Barren Island Plant Enjoined.

Supreme Court Justice Edward A. Lazansky in Brooklyn, yesterday, granted an injunction to Philip R. Reid, a hotel owner at Rockaway Point, against the Products Manufacturing Company, restraining the concern from causing "unnecessary and offensive odors," in the operation of its plant at Barren Island. The injunction becomes effective on May 1, 1920. The action of the Rockaway Point hotel owner is supported by many property owners at the Rockaways and Jamaica Bay.

REAL ESTATE FIELD

A quick resale at a substantial profit was closed yesterday by Vogel & Schultz, operators, who resold to Mindlin & Rosner, for investment, the Rotherwood and Inglewood apartments, at 717 West 177th Street and 718 West 178th Street.

The property consists of two six-story elevator structures midway between Broadway and Fort Washington Avenue, yielding $70,000 annually in rentals and held at $500,000. The 177th Street house is on a plot 104 by 125 and the abutting house 100 by 129.

Schuck Brothers erected the houses about ten years ago, and subsequently sold them to John W. Comey and Elizabeth C. Harris, who continued in possession until the recent sale to Vogel & Schultz. The Knap & Wasson Company negotiated the transaction.

Steamship Company Buys West Street Building.

Following the lead of many firms in the business section of the city south of Wall Street that have purchased permanent homes during the last few months, the A. H. Bull Steamship Company of Newark, N. J., with Manhattan offices at 17 Battery Place, has acquired title from the Trojan Realty Company to the five-story business building at 60 Washington Street, extending through to 34 to 40 West Street. The property has a frontage of 42.8 feet and a depth of 180 feet, between Morris and Rector Streets. It is assessed at $120,000.

Bowery Lodging House Sale.

Samuel H. Martin sold for a client, to the Pitthan Realty and Holding Corporation, the five-story and store lodging house at 358 Bowery, near Fourth Street.

Morningside Apartment Sale.

Barton-Thompson Company bought for a client, from the Union Chemical Glassware Company and A. H. Levy, the East View at the northwest corner of Morningside Drive and 118th Street, a modern six-story apartment building, 90 by 100, renting for $34,000 and held at $230,000. The sellers acquired the property last April from the Welwood Realty Company.

BROADWAY AND 79TH ST.
PASTOR I. M. HALDEMAN, D. D.

Dr. Haldeman has returned from his vacation work and will preach morning and evening.

11 A. M., "IS IT CHRIST ON A BLOODY CROSS WHO SAVES MEN AND WOMEN HELL-BENT; OR, A CHRIST OF EXAMPLE, A CHRIST OF MERE ETHICS?"

Dr. Haldeman will arraign the preachers who deny salvation by blood and preach salvation by character.

The morning service will be the thirty-fifth anniversary of Dr. Haldeman's pastorate of this church. He will take occasion fittingly to recognize the gift of Five Thousand Dollars received from members of the church as an anniversary token. Dr. Haldeman cordially invites all who have heard him in the past and all who believe in the old-fashioned doctrine of the Cross which he preaches to come to this service and hear him.

8 P. M., "WHEN OUR LORD JESUS CHRIST SAID THE END OF THIS AGE WOULD BE AS IT WAS IN THE DAYS OF NOAH, DID HE MAKE A MISTAKE; OR IS THE PRESENT CONDITION OF THE WORLD A FULFILLMENT OF THAT WARNING? DO THE STRIKES, THE UNIVERSAL UNREST, THE LAWLESS SPIRIT, THE DEMAGOGIC AND DECEPTIVE TALK ABOUT A LEAGUE OF NATIONS BRINGING PERMANENT PEACE AND THE SHADOW OF A DICTATOR NOW FALLING UPON US, TELL US WE ARE SWIFTLY APPROACHING THE DAYS OF CATASTROPHE AND CATACLYSM FORETOLD OF GOD?"

Friday night, Oct. 10, 8 o'clock, Dr. Haldeman will begin again the Bible Talks so successful last year. Subject: "Wonderful Song of Moses, and What He Has to Say About Doctrine and the Second Coming." These meetings are remarkable for attendance and the Spirit.

Now Under Construction

WHILE it is perhaps at all times possible to purchase a house somewhere in the City or its environs, persons of foresight do not always find it quite so simple a matter to locate just the sort of house they require. At

we are building twenty-five houses of a type that represents the last word in comfort and convenience.

The plans may be seen any day at the Nassau Boulevard (Garden City Estates) office. Prices from $15,650 to $18,000. Terms may be arranged.

It is but 41 minutes to the Nassau Boulevard (Garden City Estates) Station via L. I. R. R. Some convenient trains from Penn. Station, 33d St., daily, 11 a. m., 12:30, 1:12, 1:55, 3:00, 3:45 and 4:06 p. m. Sunday, 9:59, 11:15 a. m., 1:08, 1:55, 2:59, 4:17 p. m., and from Flatbush Ave., Brooklyn, daily, 10:56 a. m., 12:30, 1:12, 1:49, 2:59, 3:42 and 10 p. m. Sunday, 10:02, 11:19 a. m., 1:08, 1:59, 3:00 and 4:13 p. m.

A MONOPOLY OF BUSINESS

The Zoning Law has put the REAL into REAL ESTATE
the STATE of uncertainty.

FORMERLY when a man owned a lot, he could put up a public garage, a store, or anything he wanted to, next to his neighbor's private dwelling.

He Can't do that To-day

CERTAIN STREETS are restricted to business.

Others for private residences, others unrestricted where factories and garages are allowed.

BETWEEN 242d and 258th Streets is about one mile and a quarter. From Broadway to the River is about a mile.

ALL THIS large section is restricted for residence purposes and has only one Street where business is allowed.

WHAT IS THE CONSEQUENCE?

BROADWAY LOTS, opposite the Park, are ideally located for living purposes, BUT IT IS THE ONLY STREET IN THIS LARGE SECTION WHERE STORES ARE ALLOWED.

THAT MEANS THAT BROADWAY IS THE ONLY STREET WHERE THE PEOPLE OF THIS ENTIRE SECTION CAN DO THEIR SHOPPING.

IT ALSO must supply the needs of the transient trade that uses Van Cortlandt Park, and also the people who transfer for Yonkers at this point as well as the vehicular traffic which must of necessity use Broadway.

HAVING THIS MONOPOLY OF BUSINESS

THERE WILL BE STORES HERE, HOTELS, THEATRES, MOVIES, APARTMENT HOUSES, ETC. THAT IN TIME SHOULD MAKE IT AS VALUABLE AS BROADWAY PROPERTY DOWNTOWN. THE PRESENT AND FUTURE VALUE IS ASSURED.

249 LOTS on Broadway will be sold
Between 242d St. and 256th St. and Intersecting Streets

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—Pressure remains high generally in the Atlantic States and over the Northwest, and lower over a wide belt extending from the Great Lakes southwestward to the Mexican border. This pressure distribution has been attended by warm weather over the Middle West and the Eastern and Southern States, and low temperatures over the Rocky Mountain and Plateau regions. The highest temperature of record for the month of October was recorded at the following points Friday: Richmond, Va., 94; Baltimore, 92; Philadelphia and Atlantic City, 90.

There were local rains within the last twenty-four hours in the North Atlantic States and at widely scattered points in the region of the Great Lakes and the Upper Mississippi and Missouri Valleys and the West Gulf States.

The outlook is for cloudy weather in the New England States with somewhat higher temperature on the Coast. In the Middle Atlantic States the weather will be generally fair Saturday and Sunday, with somewhat lower temperature. In the South Atlantic States the weather will be generally fair without material change in temperature. In East Gulf States and Tennessee there will be local showers and thunderstorms. In the Ohio Valley and the region of the Great Lakes the weather will be unsettled, followed by showers and lower temperature Saturday and Sunday.

Winds Off the Atlantic Coast.—North of Sandy Hook, gentle to moderate, variable, cloudy. Sandy Hook to Hatteras, Hatteras to Florida Straits, gentle to moderate, variable, fair. East and West Gulf Coast, moderate East and Southeast, partly cloudy. East Texas, Saturday and Sunday partly cloudy, cooler in west. West Texas, Saturday and Sunday partly cloudy, cooler Saturday.

FORECAST FOR TODAY AND SUNDAY.

Eastern New York—Partly cloudy Saturday and Sunday; not quite so warm in southern portion.

Eastern Pennsylvania and New Jersey—Fair Saturday. Sunday, partly cloudy, somewhat lower temperature.

Southern New England—Partly cloudy Saturday and Sunday; warmer on the eastern coast.

Northern New England—Cloudy and somewhat warmer Saturday and Sunday.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at 11 P. M., taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

3 A. M.	64	62	4 P. M.	85	72
6 A. M.	64	64	6 P. M.	84	67
12 M.	74	69	11 P. M.	76	57

This thermometer is 414 feet above the street level. The average temperature yesterday was 74; for the corresponding date last year it was 62; average on the corresponding date for the last thirty-three years, 61.

The temperature at 8 A. M. yesterday was 64; at 8 P. M. it was 81. Maximum temperature, 85 degrees at 5 P. M.; minimum, 63 degrees at 12:01 A. M. Humidity, 99 per cent. at 8 A. M.; 59 per cent. at 8 P. M.

The barometer at 8 A. M. yesterday registered 29.93 inches; at 8 P. M. it stood at 29.90 inches.

Weather in Cotton and Grain States.

Education Notes.

The Teachers Union will hold its first meeting for the current school year on Oct. 10 at 8 P. M. in the meeting room of the Civic Club, 14 West Twelfth Street. Plans will be formulated for legislative and educational work of the year. Nonmembers are invited to attend.

The Central Evening High School for Women, Nostrand Avenue and Halsey Street, Brooklyn, will open classes in art craft, costume design, and freehand drawing. Persons interested should apply on Oct. 8 or 10.

The High School Teachers' Association will hold a meeting at 10:30 A. M. today at the Waldorf-Astoria. The topic for discussion will be "The Junior High School." Dr. John S. Roberts, Superintendent in charge of intermediate schools, will speak. Delegates to the Teachers' Council will be elected.

It has been decided to give annually a medal to be known as the James F. Wilson Memorial Medal in the East Side Evening High School to the pupil who submits the best essay on some topic of American history.

Nine thousand public school children will assemble in the City College Stadium on Friday next at 3 P. M. to hear Cardinal Mercier of Belgium.

LEGAL ADVERTISEMENTS.

THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF NEW York, by the Grace of God, Free and Independent, to Frank Moss, Henry W. Unger, George H. Merkel, the Attorney General of the State of New York, and all other persons, if any there be, whose names and places of residence are unknown and cannot, after due diligence and diligent effort be ascertained by the petitioner herein, interested as heirs-at-law, next of kin or otherwise in the estate of Benno Loewy, deceased, send greeting:

Whereas, Isabella Loewy, who resides at 22 West 88th Street, Borough of Manhattan, the City of New York, has lately applied to the Surrogates' Court of our County of New York, to have a certain instrument in writing, dated October 28, 1918, relating to both real and personal property, duly proved as the last will and testament of Benno Loewy, who was at the time of his death a resident of 22 West 88th Street, Borough of Manhattan, in the County of New York, deceased.

Therefore, you and each of you are cited to show cause before the Surrogates' Court of our County of New York, at the Hall of Records, in the County of New York, on the 21st day of October, one thousand nine hundred and nineteen, at half-past ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day, why the said will and testament should not be admitted to probate as a will of real and personal property.

In testimony whereof, we have caused the seal of the Surrogates' Court of the said County of New York to be hereunto affixed.

[L. S.] Witness, Honorable Robert Ludlow Fowler, a Surrogate of our said County of New York, at said County, the 2d day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and nineteen.

DANIEL J. DOWDNEY,
Clerk of the Surroagtes' Court.

Tropical Cruises

The War is over—its many and varied anxieties are lifted from our minds and the trend of one's thought and endeavor is again toward the normal—with just a little longing for recreation.

COOK'S TRAVEL ORGANIZATION, true to its tradition of enterprise, as proved during 78 years of travel service to the public, is now offering various programs of Tropical Tours to include:

CUBA, Havana and Santiago
JAMAICA, Port Antonio and Kingston
PANAMA CANAL ZONE
COSTA RICA, Port Limon, San Jose returning via Havana and Nassau (Bahamas.)

Sailing from New York on Feb. 7, Feb. 28, March 27, by the favorite steamers "Pastores" and "Calamares" of the GREAT WHITE FLEET.

The dates have been chosen to synchronize with that period when our own home climate is least and that of the West Indies most attractive. Moreover the cruises do not call for much time or money. To those seeking health, change of scene and recreation they will prove a tonic unsurpassable.

The arrangements include a series of attractive shore excursions, and the accommodations on Steamers, and in Hotels, will be of the very highest class.

Full detailed Programs.

EUROPE AND THE BATTLEFIELDS

Our next party will sail from New York on Oct. 11th by the well known Express Steamer "France" of the French Line, returning to New York on Nov. 17. Write, call or telephone at once for particulars.

INVESTIGATE RENT STRIKE ORGANIZERS

HYLAN SUGGESTS ACTION

Grand Jury Indicts Four Following Charge That Tenant Was Locked Out of Apartment.

In an effort to put an end to the activities of organizations which have been engaged in instigating rent strikes among tenants, regardless of the existence or absence of grievances against the landlord, Nathan Hirsch, Chairman of the Mayor's Committee on Rent Profiteering, announced yesterday that, in compliance with a letter from Mayor Hylan, John Doe proceedings would be begun immediately to place the facts on record. The committee claims that it has in its possession evidence of a sensational nature which it will place before District Attorney Edward Swann for action.

The committee has for some time been conducting an investigation into the activities of "certain east side organizations which have been operating on Bolshevik and Soviet lines in an effort not only to prevent landlords from legitimately raising rents, but from maintaining the schedule of rents which has been in force during the last year." To cope with this evil, Mayor Hylan suggests action be taken immediately. In the letter which he sent to Mr. Hirsch yesterday he said, in part:

"My attention has at various times been called to the fact that a number of organizations in this city are operating along lines which create dissensions between landlords and tenants, even to the extent of fomenting so-called rent strikes and advising people to damage property.

"If any tenant has a grievance, your committee is ready to listen to every complant, and there is no need for people to organize rent strikes or attempt to take the law in their own hands.

"As Chairman of the Mayor's Committee on Rent Profiteering, I wish you would confer immediately with the Hon. Edward S. Swann, or any other of the District Attorneys in the various counties, to the end that John Doe proceedings may be held publically, that the facts may be spread on public record, and, if it develops that crime has been committed, the perpetrators shall be properly prosecuted."

Tells Mayor of Investigation.

Mr. Hirsch had submitted a memorandum to the Mayor in which he noted certain facts resulting from the investigation conducted by the committee. The inquiry showed, according to Mr. Hirsch, that a coterie of men had been imposing upon tenants by indiscriminately creating conditions which led to rent strikes.

Mr. Hirsch will consult with District Attorney Swann next Monday morning. "In my opinion, crimes have been committed, and if so those guilty will be promptly indicted," Mr. Hirsch said, in commenting upon the matter. "Bolshevism, unrest, and anarchy are increasing rapidly because of the activities of these so-called anti-rent societies, and a stop must be put to their work.

"All the tenant gets by joining one of these organizations is loss of money and much trouble. Some of them are already beginning to realize this, and it was largely through their complaints that our attention was called to the existing conditions. None of these conditions are warranted, as the committee is fully able to handle any complaints which distressed tenants may make."

In connection with the charge made by William F. Heide, the candy manufacturer, that he had been locked out of his apartment at 838 West End Avenue before the expiration of his lease, on Oct. 1, the Grand Jury yesterday returned an indictment charging Frank and Edward Zittel, Philip Katz, and Elson Freese with conspiracy. The defendants were arraigned before Judge Otto Rosalsky yesterday afternoon in General Sessions, and after pleading not guilty to the charge were held in $500 bail each.

Heide had alleged that Katz, with the aid of Frank and Edward Zittel, the agents, and Freese, the superintendent, had entered his apartment with painters and decorators before his lease had expired, and that locks on the doors had been changed so that Heide had not been able to enter.

Charges Spite Work.

The Zittels and Freese were defended by former City Magistrate Frederick Groehl, while Katz's attorney was William H. Chorosh, Republican candidate for Judge of the City Court. Chorosh told Judge Rosalsky that he believed the indictment to be the result of spite work, and that he would apply for permission to inspect the minutes of the Grand Jury with a view to making a motion for the quashing of the indictment. "The real truth of the matter," said Mr. Chorosh, "is that Heide is trying to get square on my client and the Zittels because my client refused to sublease his flat from him last June. Heide had practically moved all his effects from the flat to an apartment in West Seventy-second Street at the time the decorators were in the apartment. This indictment does a great injustice to honorable men. They were not given an opportunity to be heard in their own defense, and if they had been given a chance to be heard by the Grand Jury they could have satisfactorily settled everything."

Henry Daniels, a banker of 30 Pine Street, appearing yesterday before Magistrate Joseph Schwab in the Washington Heights Court, charged that he was without a home because Joseph Schenk, a realty specialist of 118 West 120th Street, and Carl Levine, his agent, were unlawfully withholding his apartment from him. Mr. Daniels asserted that after making three payments upon his lease he had not been given possession. I. V. Morrison, attorney for Mr. Schenk, said that the latter had sold the apartment house to another realty corporation, of which Philip Meyerowitz of 198 Broadway is agent, and as this had taken place subsequent to the signing of the lease it was Meyerowitz who was at fault.

INDORSE ETTINGER'S PLAN.

Association of Principals Seeks Change in Rating Teachers.

The Association of Principals at the Washington Irving High School last evening declared itself in favor of City Superintendent Ettinger's letter to the Board of Education as to how the survey of the Education Department should be conducted.

It protested against the present method of rating teachers, which it said was absurd, and adopted resolutions calling on the Board of Superintendents to change it, so that a teacher would be marked either satisfactory or unsatisfactory.

Principal Graham said that the Board of Examiners paid no attention to the present rating of teachers. He said that he marked his teachers so as to keep up the spirit of the school. Miss Knox said that a change in marking was necessary.

Princess Lucy Nikolai Wathawaso, a full-blooded Indian of the Penobscot Tribe, living at Old Town, Me., who is the wife of Thomas Gorman, appeared in Indian costume on the stage of the high school auditorium and gave songs and dances of the Medicine Man, the Suni Indians and others.

LAST CHANCE FOR ALIENS.

Must Wait Till After Election Unless They Get Papers Today.

Aliens who are seeking their first citizenship papers must get them today or wait until Nov. 5 because the law prohibits the issuing of first papers thirty days before election day.

In making an announcement to this effect yesterday County Clerk William F. Schneider explained that the purpose of the law was to prevent fraud in those States where formerly the possession of first papers carried with it the right to vote. He also explained that the situation does not affect those persons who have already received their first papers and whi wish to complete their naturalization by taking out their final papers.

ROADS WILL ATTEND TRACTION MEETING

ESTIMATE BOARD IS SILENT

Commissioner to Ask What Concessions Lines Will Offer in Return for Higher Fares.

Written and telephonic messages accepting the invitation of Public Service Commissioner Lewis Nixon to attend a conference on Monday in the office of the commission to see if something could not be done to relieve the financial difficulties of the various companies operating surface lines, were received yesterday from officials of all of the companies. Only the members of the Board of Estimate, who received the same invitation, remained silent.

But the conference will be held, and if the city has no representative present an effort will be made by Mr. Nixon to obtain from the representatives of the roads the concessions they will be willing to make in return for the consent of the Board of Estimate for an increased fare. So far the City Administration has insisted that the companies surrender their perpetual franchises and accept short-term ones in their place, but no statement was made as to what the city would give in return for the surrender.

If the railroad men at the conference on Monday will put into concrete form the sacrifices they will make in exchange for a greater fare than 5 cents Mr. Nixon will submit the matter to the Board of Estimate. But he was still hopeful yesterday that the members of the board would attend the conference or send a representative to speak for them.

In accepting the invitation to attend the conference Lindley M. Garrison, Receiver of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, wrote that the situation of the B. R. T. system was grave in the extreme, and that some remedy must be found, and that very quickly, if great loss to the people was to be avoided. Job E. Hedges, Receiver of the New York Railways Company, also signified his intention of joining in the conference.

Commissioner Nixon sent to Mayor Hylan yesterday a third letter asking for information concerning the persons responsible for the operation of the bus service on the lower east side. The law requires that all persons operating public transportation lines shall have a permit of necessity from the commission. Mr. Nixon told the Mayor that he was "permitting an open and continued violation of the laws of the State." The Brooklyn & North River Railroad Company, which operates a trolley line between Flatbush Avenue and Fulton Street, Brooklyn, to the Desbrosses Street Ferry in this borough via the Manhattan Bridge, will go out of business at midnight tonight. A letter notifying the Public Service Commission that operation would cease, was signed by S. W. Huff, the company's President, and explained that the deficits of the company aggregated $500,000, and that the line had been operated at a loss every year since it was incorporated in 1911.

Yesterday the Board of Estimate gave Grover Whalen, Commissioner of Plant and Structures, a thirty-day permit to operate buses over the Manhattan Bridge in place of the cars. A suggestion that the tracks of the company be removed went over because Controller Craig and Borough President Riegelmann of Brooklyn thought they might be needed.

Transit Construction Commissioner John H. Delaney yesterday awarded the contract for the erection of the Neptune Avenue station on the Culver line to Coney Island, to the P. J. Carlin Construction Company, whose bid was $89,740. As soon as this station, which is also known as the Van Sicklen station, is finished the 5-cent fare to Coney Island will go into effect. It is expected that this will be within four months.

Calvin D. Van Name, President of Richmond Borough, moved at the meeting of the Board of Estimate that the subway rapid transit lines be extended to Richmond, and that the Transit Construction Commissioner be directed to make the necessary surveys, prepare maps, &c. A delegation from Richmond which attended the meeting was divided as to the kind of transit the borough needed. Some of those present spoke in favor of a tunnel for passenger service, while others wanted the proposed line to carry freight as well as passengers. The entire matter was referred to the Transit Construction Commission.

MARKEWICH MAKES APOLOGY.

Pleads Guilty and Retracts His Criticism of Judge Mayer.

Assistant District Attorney Samuel Markewich pleaded guilty yesterday to a charge of contempt of court made by Francis G. Caffey, United States Attorney for the Southern District of New York, before Judge Julius Mayer in the United States District Court. After pleading guilty to the charge, Mr. Markewich made a lengthy apology, in which he said that it was just in a fit of passion that he made the remarks in question, and that he therefore retracted every statement he made disrespectful to the Court. Judge Mayer accepted the plea and reserved decision, stating that he was gratified for the honor of the profession that Markewich had seen fit to make the apology.

During the course of his speech at a meetng held at P. S. 62, Hester and Essex Streets, on Sept. 18, for the purpose of protesting against the removal of the four storage battery lines on the east side, Mr. Markewich is alleged to have said in part:

"The people are being trampled upon and the traction interests have supreme control of the court and of everybody else. The decision regarding the withdrawal of the storage battery cars was not honestly rendered, but was in the interest of the traction trusts. Any judge who discriminates in favor of the railroads and against the common people does not deserve to be recalled; it would be too mild a remedy. What ought to be done was what was done in the days of Charles II. In those days they hung judges. If that cannot be accomplished at this moment, impeachment is the next step, and Congress should impeach him. A judge who works for the public service corporations instead of the public should be impeached."

In his plea for forgiveness, the Assistant District Attorney said that if he had thought of what he was saying at the meeting, he would not have spoken as he did.

"With the coming of the Day of Atonement tomorrow, we must ask forgiveness for all our sins," he concluded, "and I therefore ask his Honor to accept my apology so that I can conclude my career without any stains just as I have started it."

NIXON ASKS TRAFFIC AID.

Says Traction Companies Face Speedy Insolvency Unless Helped.

Public Service Commissioner Lewis Nixon spoke last night before the members of the Arthur H. Murphy Democratic Association at Tremont Avenue, near Southern Boulevard, regarding the traffic situation in New York City. He said that unless the traction companies were afforded some relief in the immediate future they would all go bankrupt.

"The bondholders who have put their money in these companies as an investment," the Commissioner continued, "are entitled to an interest which they are not getting. Eighty-six per cent. of the cities in the United States have been compelled to raise their fares on account of the increased cost of operating transit systems, and it would be unreasonable to suppose that New York can go at the present 5-cent rate without affording the companies any assistance.

"Certain of the city officials have told me to stop talking about increasing the fares and to reduce the crowds at the subway station at Times Square. If we had four times the train facilities there are now at that centre of the city's traffic it would not do away with the crowds of people during the rush hours. The flexible fares system, like they have in operation at Cleveland, is the best, so they can be raised or reduced according to the cost of operating each year. I guarantee if we had that method on the New York street railways and subway systems in three years' time the fares would be lower than a nickel."

Commissioner Nixon also spoke about municipal ownership, and said he believed it would come in time in New York, but that it was a very long way off.

Are Steel Strike Leaders Patriots or Bolshevists?

"We are going to socialize the basic industries of the United States. This is the beginning of the fight. We are going to have representatives on the board of directors of the Steel Corporation," declared John Fitzpatrick, Chairman of the Committee of Twenty-four representing the twenty-four separate American Federation of Labor unions participating in the steel strike. T. J. Vind, general organizer of the American Federation of Labor in the Chicago district, made even a more defiant cry when he declared that "The strike won't stop until steel-workers become the lawmakers at Washington."

While many editorial writers outside the labor press take these and other statements of the strike leaders as an indication that they aim at nothing less than industrial revolution, The New Majority, of Chicago, organ of the Labor party, counters with a charge of "high treason" against Judge Gary, of the United States Steel Corporation, because he denied the strikers "their constitutional rights of free speech, press, and assemblage," and it affirms, "he has set himself and his steel trust up in defiance of the Government and Constitution of the United States as superior to them."

Concerning the union demand for increased wages the labor leaders admit, according to a correspondent of the New York Tribune, that the wages to employees in the steel industry have increased about one hundred per cent in the last four years, but "even this increase has not sufficed to improve their originally wretched conditions. They tell of human beings living like cattle in miserable shacks and hovels. The answer of the employers to this contention is that with the foreigners in the mills and furnaces the rate of pay has nothing to do with the standard of living, as the purpose of this class of laborers is not to live well, but to live as poorly as possible in order to save as much money as possible, usually with the intention of returning to Europe when a certain size stake has been attained." The employers support their contention by pointing to a scale of wages ranging from $3.50 to $6.00 a day for unskilled help, and from $7.00 to $80.00 a day for skilled help.
